PEACE WITH SOVIETS! LLOYD GEORGE

BRITISH CHIEF URGES POLES, FRENCH, TO ACT

Proposal in London Will Be Basis.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

SPA, July 11.—Premiers Lloyd George of Britain, Millerand of France, and Grabsky of Poland conferred on the soviet problem today.

Following the receipt of the soviets' offer to accept the British conditions for reopening trade, given to Krassin, the bolshevik envoy, in London, Mr. Lloyd George urged the allies to recognize the bolsheviki and tried to prevail on Grabsky to make an armistice with the Reds.

M. Millerand is still objecting, but may consent. Grabsky is ready to make peace with the bolsheviki if he can be assured of a suitable eastern boundary for Poland.

WARSAW, July 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Withdrawal of the Polish lines on the entire battle front is continuing, according to announcement here today, and there is little fighting except rear guard actions here and there. The withdrawal is orderly and in accordance with pre-arranged plans.

The battle front is now approaching the former Russo-German lines through Baranovichy, the Oginski canal and the Styr and Sereth rivers, where a stand has been made.

It is announced the military are evacuating Minsk, which is threatened from the north and east. The Ukrainians are prepared to hold Kamenetz-Podolsk so as to protect Lemberg and the Polish right flank, which is being pressed by Gen. Budenny.

Allies Refuse Aid.

PARIS, July 10.—Polish forces are withdrawing from Brest-Litovsk, Vilna and Pinsk, as a result of the great Russian bolshevik offensive, according to a telegram received by the newspaper L'Information this morning.

Requests by M. Grabski, former Polish premier, that the allies turn over to Poland German munitions to be destroyed have been refused by Premiers Millerand and Lloyd George, according to the Petit Parisien.

Foch Confers With Poles.

Spa, July 10.—Marshal Foch had a conference this morning with the head of the Polish delegation at which dispositions were made under which the allies might help Poland in her fight against the bolsheviki. Better news from the Polish-bolshevik front was received by Polish circles here today. The messages seemed to indicate that the Poles were succeeding in stabilizing their lines.

REDS ENCIRCLE POLES

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, July 10.—The Polish army, six weeks ago successful in a series of daring operations on Russian soil, now is trapped in the Pripet swamps. Its lines of communication are broken and its center is threatened by envelopment from the north and south. The Russian pincers gradually are closing.

With Denikine out of the way and Wrangel's operations causing little concern to Russia, the soviet government is free to swing its chief military forces against Poland. This puts Poland in a worse plight than it was in last May, when it was ready to negotiate with Russia. At that time, however, there was a respite for Poland because the Russians were headed southeast to the regions of the Red and the Caspian seas, in the sphere of large British political and economic interests.

Brusiloff Was Far Off.

At that time Brusiloff's campaign was being waged on the side of Russia opposite from Poland. This lent the Poles new heart to deal with their historic enemies and erstwhile masters. The great surplus of arms and ammunition left at the close of the world war in the hands of the chief allied powers made it easy for Poland to arm and equip its men. There were trained men available—there was Pilsudski, a first rate general—and the gerat powers were not averse to a diversion of Russian military activity.

So the Poles listened to what they believed to be the counsel at once of their safety and ambition. Fearing

MAJOR'S SLEUTHS RAID MORRISON, SEIZE MANAGER

Trap Aid Giving Flask to Thirsty Guest.

A busy little band of Maj. Dalrymple's detectives got together in the Hotel Morrison yesterday and held a surprise party on the manager James Glabaugh.

An exciting time was had, the host furnishing two pint flasks.

It was shortly before 3 o'clock. The man in room 2024 got Mr. Glabaugh on the house phone. His voice was low and confidential. In liquid tones he said:

"You know me, don't you?"

Mr. Glabaugh paid not the least attention to the three men who got into the elevator and went up just ahead of him. That was a mistake.

"The Jug Is Up."

He rapped on the door of room 2024. He pulled a pint flask from his pocket. It was filled with a reddish-brown liquid. The door of the room opened lightly.

The bottle changed hands. So did a $10 bill.

Then an arm reached over Glabaugh's shoulder and a hand snatched the bill from Glabaugh's fingers. A voice made music in his ear—a mournful melody—saying:

"We're prohibition agents. The jug is up. I mean the jig."

Glabaugh turned around. Three men gazed at him, more in sorrow than in anger. One of them sadly showed a badge. Another regretfully relieved Glabaugh of a pint flask on his hip.

Waiting at the Court.

Glabaugh and William Sexton, the guest, were then escorted to the federal building. Commissioner Lewis F. Mason, who might have let them out on bail, had gone home to Waukegan. Glabaugh and Sexton sat down to await his coming—the detectives having volunteered to find him so the prisoners might not have to spend the week end in jail.

Meantime a report had been made to Maj. Dalrymple's assistant, Lawrence Kilcourse, and he obtained a warrant to search the hotel. Six men bore the warrant to the hostelry and the hotel called another manager into service. The warrant was read to him.

Around and around went the bottle hunters, "upstairs, downstairs, and in the storage chamber."

The Dance Goes On.

The hotel routine was sadly disturbed, but the guests knew nothing of it. The lingering Elks, the members of committees, the delegates of the new party, the drummer from Drummond, the girl from Boise City, and the youth from Duluth chatted and tatted and danced and dined as though there was no treasure hunt in progress.

The musicians in the Terrace Garden played to the clink of ice in glasses of ginger ale and lemonade and the clatter of spoons on dishes of ice cream, all unaware.

Only the management and a few employés and the raiders and half a dozen newspaper men had any idea there was a raid.

Every storeroom was inspected, every part of the attic and the basement. No rum. Every rug in a pile of 100 was turned over. Nothing. The printing presses were vised and the tailoring shop Sahara. A room marked "Drugs," decorated with a sign "Do Not Open," was opened. Not even a prescription blank.

The only moonshine found was on the roof; and the hotel was not responsible for that.

TWO IDENTIFY DUPE, VICTIM OF WANDERER

Circus Men Say He Worked in Show.

The "poor bum" killed by Carl Wanderer when he slew his wife was identified as two different persons yesterday. A Chicago girl thinks he was her former sweetheart. A circus man in Kansas City said he was a former employé of the circus.

In the meantime Wanderer has been ordered held by the coroner's jury to the grand jury, has been booked by the police, and will be arraigned tomorrow morning.

The ragged roustabout who received $1.25 to aid Wanderer in a "fake hold up," and who was killed by Wanderer because dead men tell no tales, was identified as "Al Watson" by the girl, Miss Catherine Vanos, 320 East Sixteenth street.

A photograph of the roustabout was identified last night in Kansas City by William Caine, commissary man for the John Robinson shows, as John J. Maloney of Pontiac, R. I.

Several Recognize Likeness.

Maloney joined the shows in the spring as a "train driver" and worked for a short time, leaving just as the show was entering Canada. A commissary ticket found on his body with the name "E. Masters" on it was stolen from Earl Masters about the time Maloney left the show. Masters is still with the show. A number of men who worked loading and unloading trains recognized the picture, but they did not know the name. Caine comes in contact with the men several times a day, and he was sure the man killed was Maloney.

When Maloney joined the show he gave as his nearest relation the name of a sister, Mrs. John Kain, Pontiac, R. I.

Calls Him Ex-Sweetheart.

Miss Vanos, who is an attaché of the Rialto theater, said "Al Watson" was a private in the Canadian expeditionary forces and, she understood, the son of a wealthy New York turfman. She had met him in a hospital at Folkestone, and again in London. She said she had been "Watson's" sweetheart.

The New York police could not locate any millionaire turfman named Watson.

The girl saw in a newspaper a picture of the man killed by Wanderer. It looked like Al, but he had a pompadour, and she knew Al's hair was thin on top.

But when she looked upon the body she realized it was the same man, she said, and she came near to fainting.

RELATIVES ARE AGHAST

The relatives of Wanderer, and the relatives of his wife, are still aghast at the revelation.

Here is a young man who never smoked nor drank nor swore, nor missed a service in church, a perfect lover, an ideal husband, suddenly stripped of his mask, and shown as a calm and crafty slayer.

The only motive he had for killing the girl he says he loved is that he wanted his freedom and her $1,500 and the old life in the army. Experts in psychology are trying to classify the man, as degenerate, dementia praecox victim, or born criminal.

Victim's Mother Consoled Him.

His friends shudder at his name. The dead girl's parents tell how they tried to console him for the death of his wife and the child that never had a chance for life. Mrs. Johnson weeps as she tells how she threw her arms around him and kissed him and said "it would all come out right."

The police are telling again how they trapped him through his own carelessness in leaving the wrong gun by the side of the dead man's hand. One of them tells of a little scene in the vestibule just after the shooting.

Played Part of Hero.

"The hall was full of smoke," he said. "There by the door lay the man in his rags, dead, shot three times through the body, his head bruised where Wanderer had banged it against the tile floor. Over in the corner was the body of the woman, with Wanderer bending above it. He was murmuring something and I bent down to catch the words.

"'I've got him, sweetheart,' he was saying. 'I got him. He won't hurt you any more.'

"The words weren't intended for my ears, I'm sure. Wanderer was already

AN AWKWARD MOMENT FOR MOTHER

5 EXPLOSIONS IN HOSPITAL; 35 PATIENTS MOVED

Fire which started in the basement of the South Chicago hospital late last night caused much excitement and the removal of the thirty-five patients to nearby residences. The blaze started in the basement. Five explosions followed in rapid succession when it reached the supply room, where chemicals were stored.

None of the patients were injured, due to the prompt work of the nurses, including Clara Schaffer, Irene Krast and Anna Majeski, and the internes, police, firemen and residents of the neighborhood, among the latter being Harold McQuier and Arthur Carlson. The hospital janitor, known only as Mike, was seriously burned and may die. He is carried on the hospital payroll simply under the name of Mike.

Lieut. Paul Wheeler of the South Chicago police station, and Patrick Rogers, in charge of the firemen, took command of the situation. The fire was quickly put out, with small damage. Within two hours the hospital had been aired out and straightened up and the sick people taken back to their cots.

The nurses turned in the alarm and Lieut. Wheeler responded with Officers Patrick Stenson and Edward Cooper. It was first reported that a bomb had been thrown into the basement, but later developments showed the chemicals caused the explosions.

MAN IN SWIMMING FIGHTS FOR LIFE WITH 2 BULLDOGS

Sharon, Pa., July 10.—[Special.]—With his bare hands, Walter Fisher, fought a desperate battle with two bulldogs in deep water today. Fisher had gone in swimming when the two dogs came dashing down the hillside and plunged into the water.

One of them sank his teeth into the flesh of Fisher's arm and held on. With the other hand Fisher gave battle to the other dog. After being bitten on the legs, arm, face, and chest, Fisher finally forced the beast under water and kept him there until he had drowned.

He then turned his attention to the dog which had taken a grip on his arm at the beginning of the attack. Finally breaking the dog's hold Fisher reached shore and with a club beat off the animal.

Germans Refuse to Seize Wealth of Hohenzollerns

BERLIN, July 10.—The judicial committee of the Prussian diet today rejected a motion presented by the Independent Socialists providing for state confiscation of the fortune of the Hohenzollern family in Germany.

The value of the fortune is estimated at between 250,000,000 and 300,000,000 marks.

NEW BRUNSWICK STAYS BONE DRY

Beats Beer and Wine; Also License.

St. John, N. B., July 10.—The province of New Brunswick today, in a referendum, voted to remain "bone dry." It defeated both a "beer and light wine" proposal, and a second proposal providing full licenses.

Only one county voted wet. That was Madawaska, an Arcadian district.

The referendum was put before the people on three propositions, which would empower the government:

1. To retain the present "bone dry" prohibition law, passed during the war; or,

2. To introduce wine and beer licenses; or,

3. To permit the sale of spirituous liquors under license.

The vote in this city was in favor of retaining the wartime "bone dry" prohibition law by more than 1,300. The wine and beer licenses plan was rejected by more than 600.

Fredericton, the capital, went dry by 300. Women turned out in full force there.

St. John county was dry by 400 and the towns of Marysville and Devon were dry by heavy majorities.

Moncton City went dry by 998 and the parish dry by 600. Westmoreland county is dry by 3,200 and Carlton, Kings, and Albert counties went dry, but the figures are not yet available.

CITY GARBAGE MAN, 4 AIDS TAKEN FOR $4,000 THEFT

William Steepe, a city garbage contractor at 3400 South Homan avenue, and four of his employés were arrested yesterday when detectives working under Lieut. John Naughton of the chief's office recovered about $4,000 worth of the loot stolen by four bandits who held up a truck of the Interurban Motor Dispatch at Forty-seventh street and Spaulding avenue Thursday morning.

The loot, consisting of automobile tires and accessories, phonographs, dry goods, and perishable produce, was found, loaded in wagons and vans, on Steepe's premises. It was guarded by eight watch dogs, and in Steepe's house the police found three rifles, three revovers, and a shotgun.

Practically all of the stuff taken was recovered, with the exception of a quantity of butter and lard. With Steepe was arrested William E. Edick, 844 North Keystone avenue; W. P. Henning, Frank Henning, and A. Gabriel.

DANISH ROYALTY VISITS REGAINED SCHLESWIG LAND

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920.]

COPENHAGEN, July 10.—The king and queen of Denmark, with their sons and several other members of the royal family, today were welcomed to the recovered province of Schleswig. They arrived at Kolding on board the royal yacht Dannebrog. Thousands assembled at the harbor landing and enthusiastically greeted the king.

From Kolding their majesties and suite in motor cars drove south and stopped one kilometer north of the old frontier, where the king mounted his white charger and, followed by his sons, also on horseback, and the queen and the rest of the royal family and suite in carriages, crossed the frontier.

He was here warmly welcomed on Schleswig ground by Roromer Rephague. The king immediately replied, wishing the people a welcome home and called for cheers for Denmark.

Sixty to eighty thousand people were present at the frontier, and the roads were lined with people, who incessantly cheered the king, while young girls in white strewed red roses on the road before him.

TWO AMERICAN JEWISH RELIEF WORKERS SLAIN

WARSAW, July 10.—A Lemberg dispatch reports that Prof. Israel Friedlander of New York and a rabbi in the Free Synagogue of New York have been killed by bandits near Kamienitz-Podolsk, where they had been distributing funds for the American joint distribution committee.

Dr. Israel Friedlander was one of the committee of four which sailed early this year to distribute $35,000,000 for the relief of the starving Jews in Poland and the Ukraine. Another of the party was Judge Harry Fisher of Chicago.

Dr. Friedlander was professor of Biblical literature at the Jewish Theological seminary, New York.

Baby Found in Ashcan Is Given Virgil's Name

Attorney Robert H. Ennis of 1517 Chicago avenue, Evanston, a deacon in the First Congregational church of that suburb, was translating a passage from Virgil for his daughter, Dorothy, a Northwestern co-ed, Friday night when his other daughter, June, came running into the room.

"Father," she said, "there's a baby crying in the back yard."

"No, it's just a cat or an owl," said Ennis.

June insisted, however, and the lawyer made a search. In an ashcan he found a baby boy a few hours old, kicking and squalling. He carried the baby into the house and yesterday morning took him to St. Francis hospital. He registered the child as Virgilius.

LIQUOR LAW IS FOR CONGRESS TO DECIDE—COX

Candidate Shies; Will Enforce Statute.

Dayton, O., July 10.—[Special.]—Gov. Cox in an interview today outlined briefly his views on some of the issues in and out of the Democratic platform. On the question of prohibition, Mr. Cox said:

"Prohibition is ordered by the constitutional provision and by federal statute. The president takes oath to support both. It has never been my habit to violate my oath and an officer who does not enforce the law is worse than the man who breaks it. We accept both the constitution and the statutes as the will of the majority.

Puts It Up to Congress.

"I represent the Jeffersonian principle that the majority can do as it will regarding the prohibition question. They may leave it on the statute book or may repeal it, but as long as I am a public officer I shall accept what is as the will of the majority."

Gov. Cox regards the congressional elections this fall as the proper forum through which to carry the fight for a liberalization of the Volstead act, in line with the traditional Democratic doctrine of sovereign state rights, to the people.

League Opposition "Conspiracy."

In regard to the league of nations, Mr. Cox said:

"During the war everybody was for a league of nations. Nobody was opposed to it. Everybody agreed that it was absolutely essential to stop forever the useless slaughter of millions of men. Why, then, did the Republican senators begin after the armistice to cast discredit upon the league? It was nothing but partisan bigotry and a blind desire for political ammunition in the coming election.

"Of course, there are some conscientious objectors to the league; some few men who are really opposed to it. But its organized opposition was a deep-laid and as carefully planned a conspiracy as was ever planned by Germany.

"I am not saying that the league is perfect. No human document is. As you already know, I have suggested two reservations myself, but there must be no reservation that will nullify the treaty."

Irish Question One of "Geography."

"I have given deep thought to the Irish question," he continued. "They are warm hearted, courageous, patriotic people. I am thoroughly convinced that the Irish question will be solved satisfactorily. The controversy will be allayed, Ireland satisfied, England satisfied, as well as the rest of the world. The problem of Ireland is not a race question. It is purely one of geography."

Ansberry to Be Counselor.

The first round of political conferences between party leaders and Gov. Cox will begin tomorrow with the arrival from San Francisco of Judge T. T. Ansberry of Washington, D. C. It is generally expected here that Judge Ansberry will play an important role in the campaign management, as he is a close personal friend of Gov. Cox, being a former resident of the state.

Monday the governor will have his first meeting with Franklin D. Roosevelt, the vice presidential nominee, at the executive office in Columbus.

CLANS OF 48 MOVE TO UNITE ALL FACTIONS

Birth of New Party Is Forecast.

Real progress toward an amalgamation of the various radical groups now meeting in Chicago was made yesterday after a stormy session of the national convention called together by the Committee of Forty-eight.

At midnight conferees representing the Committee of Forty-eight, the Non-partisan league, the National Labor party, and the Single Tax party were still in session, with the prospects of an agreement between them apparently good.

The American Constitutional party, represented by leaders who favor the nomination of William Randolph Hearst for president, was left outside the breastworks, and there is little chance of its forming part of the new third party. However, some of the "third party" advocates who came to the city as delegates to the convention of the Committee of Forty-eight were treating as individuals with the Constitutional party and may elect to cast their fortunes with it.

Hearst Not Considered.

As far as t... Committee of Forty-eight leaders and the Labor party are concerned, Hearst is not even being considered as a candidate for president.

Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin remains the favorite for the nomination, in spite of the opposition of a wing of the Single Taxers and the World War Veterans. If Senator La Follette is willing to accept a nomination he can have it, as far as the Committee of Forty-eight is concerned.

As yet he has given no direct intimation of his intentions.

Should La Follette decline to run, Henry Ford will be given consideration. There is a strong party of Ford boomers in the convention and with La Follette out of it the automobile manufacturer would stand a good chance.

Amos Pinchot, one of the organizers of the Committee of Forty-eight, is also being given serious consideration. The other candidates are in the "prominently mentioned" class.

Walsh's Chances Perilled.

This includes Frank P. Walsh, who would be given serious consideration if it were not for the fact that he is allied with Eamonn de Valera, "president of the Irish republic," in an effort to get an Irish plank through the convention. The majority in the convention is against the Irish plank and Walsh's connection with it practically eliminates him as a contender for the presidential nomination.

The activities of all the various "third party" advocates centered around the activities of the Committee of Forty-eight convention, which held three short sessions in the Hotel Morrison. This convention was composed of delegates from forty-four of the forty-eight states, numbering approximately 1,200.

The convention was organized and proceeded along the same lines as a national convention of one of the major parties, with the exception that there was generally more confusion, caused by from a dozen to a score of delegates clamoring for the floor at one time, and a disposition to reject any prearranged program as savoring of "steam roller" methods.

Results of Day's Work.

The principal things accomplished by this convention during the day were:

Adoption of a resolution extending greetings to the American Labor party, calling attention to the "fundamental identity of purpose and ideal" which existed between the labor party and the committee of 48 gathering and proposing amalgamation through the appointments of joint conference committees.

Adoption of a report of the committee on permanent organization which provided, as amended, for the appointment of a general conference committee of twenty to meet with similar committees from all the radical groups with the view of affecting amalgamation.

Selection of the committees on platform.

Temporary and permanent organization of the convention.

Hear Keynote Speech.

In an addition the convention listened to a keynote speech by Allen McCurdy, its temporary chairman, which denounced both Republican and Democratic parties as "two wings of the same bird of prey" and placed national ownership of railroads and other utilities to the fore as the main objective of the new party.

For a time it appeared that the new party convention would turn against its parents and take things entirely out of their hands.

This was when the report of the committee on permanent organization was read. This report proposed that the conferences to be held with the the other radical groups should be left in the hands of a committee composed of George L. Record of New Jersey, Amos Pinchot and eight other members, practically all from the states of New York, New Jersey, and the District of Columbia. This committee had been named a year ago at a conference in St. Louis and the convention had no hands in selecting its members.

Storm Follows Report.

A storm followed the reading of the report. From all parts of the hall and even the galleries there were clamors against the report. "Packed convention tactics," "steam roller," and "gavel rule" were among the charges hurled at the Committee of 48 organizers. Amendments to amendments, substitutes and other motions were made from all parts of the hall until even J. A. H. Hopkins, chairman of the executive committee, who was acting as chairman lost all track of them.

Finally the animus behind the objections was explained in plain language, J. F. Murphy, a Missouri Labor delegate arose.

"Let's talk plainly," he said. "Before I arrived here workingmen had come to me and said they heard that the Committee of Forty-eight was nothing except the Bull Moose under another name.

"They told me that the Committee of Forty-eight was organized to stifle other "third parties" and make things safe for the Democrats and the Republicans. Now we have a committee offered us composed entirely of men from a few states east of the Mississippi river and selected without our knowing anything about it. No wonder those questions were asked me."

Urges More Committee Members.

He supported an amendment to add ten members to the conference committee by election from the floor of the convention.

Then the storm continued for a few more minutes until R. E. Dowdell of South Dakota offered the convention a word picture of itself.

"Let us not forget that when we have gathered together these various groups into one party we're going to be the most motley and conglomerate crowd that ever gathered together," he said. "We're all egotists. We all want our own way and have our pet ideas. We're all generals, and there are no privates. We won't get any place unless we begin to yield and the time to start is now."

This plain talk acted as soothing sirup for the convention. The party leaders on the platform hastened to announce that the amendment to add to the committee was satisfactory to them. It carried with a whoop and then there was a brief recess to enable the delegates to caucus on nominations of the additional committee members.

When it got together again it was in an entirely different mood.

Chairman Announces Policy.

Parley P. Christianson, a 6 foot westerner from Utah, selected as permanent chairmah, assumed the chair, and with a voice that carried conviction announced:

"I'm going to be fair, I'm going to be considerate, but I'm going to handle this bunch," and he did.

C. J. France of Seattle, Wash., a brother of the Republican United States senator from Maryland, was recognized, and read a resolution which had been prepared during the recess.

It was an expression of sympathy with the American Labor party, a declaration that it and the Committee of Forty-eight were fighting for the same things, and a plea for union of the two conventions.

It carried without an objection. Later the convention voted to hold no sessions today, but to attend the Labor party convention, which is to be held at Carmen's hall, West Van Buren street and Ashland avenue. An invitation from the single taxers, who are meeting in the Auditorium hotel, was also accepted.

Labor Makes Its Demands.

Meantime conferences between the Labor party and the Committee of Forty-eight leaders were in progress. At these conferences the Committee of Forty-eight submitted to the labor leaders a written statement setting forth what points in the labor platform it objected to, why it did not wish to have "labor" in its title, and what procedure it expected to follow in organizing the third party.

The conferences continued throughout the night, but it was declared that it was not expected that there would be any definite understanding until tonight. Meantime the Committee of Forty-eight committees on platform and conferences will be active. The labor convention will meet at 10 o'clock in the morning, but it does not expect to do any business today which will conflict with that of the Committee of Forty eight.

The single taxers will also mark time during the day. The same is true of the Nonpartisan league delegates, who will be represented at both the Committee of Forty-eight and the Labor party conventions.

The American Constitutional party will continue its conferences with individual delegates.

GAY SCENE IN THE HALL

Like a miniature Coliseum was the Cameo room of the Hotel Morrison when the Committee of Forty-eight met yesterday to open its convention. Delegations, their state standards rising above them, occupied most of the entire floor. Visitors thronged the gallery, from which hung American flags and the cabalistic "48." In one corner a band played. Around the platform stretched a line of press tables. Telegraph instruments clicked. Delegates hummed with propaganda.

A cheer greeted J. A. H. Hopkins of New Jersey, chairman of the national executive committee, as he stepped upon the platform. The band played "On, Wisconsin!" Delegates from that state roared their varsity yell. The forty-five New Yorkers sang "The Bowery"—all but twelve women delegates, who didn't seem to know the words.

At 11:45 Mr. Hopkins' gavel hit the table. He introduced the Rev. Noble S. Elderkin of the Park Ridge Community church, who delivered an invocation. Again Mr. Hopkins stood before the convention.

"Fellow delegates," he began, "we are here today to open up a channel whereby those who submit to authority may have a voice in their own government. We are here to strike apart the shackles of industrial and economic slavery, just as Lincoln put down chattel slavery."

Mr. Hopkins then turned the proceedings over to Temporary Chairman Allen McCurdy of New York and the temporary secretary, Miss Melinda Alexander. Applause and another varsity cheer from Wisconsin. Then the keynote address was on.

McCurdy Denounces Old Parties.

Mr. McCurdy began by denouncing the Republican and Democratic parties as being directly opposed to the will of the people, and as the right and left wings of the same bird of prey. His mention of Theodore Roosevelt brought not so much as a single handclap, but a reference to the farmers of North Dakota signaled a torrent of enthusiasm which had its noise center in that state's own delegation.

"The capital of these United States is in Wall street, not Washington," thundered Mr. McCurdy, and went on to tell how, last December, the Committee of Forty-eight had met in St. Louis to prospect for a program through which the government might be restored to the people. There the shortest political platform was born, he said. Having spoken of it, Mr. McCurdy sailed amid cheers into the real heart of his keynote.

Heart of the Keynote.

"As in 1860 the paramount issue was abolition of chattel slavery, so in 1920 the paramount issue before the people of the United States is destruction of special economic privilege, which is stronger today than chattel slavery ever was."

"You're right!" rose the shout, and the keynoter began to enumerate the causes for this slavery. Special privilege's ownership and control of the basic resources of the country in the land, as well as its ownership and control of the means of distribution, received the blame. He said the new party purpose to abolish special privilege by removing the sources from which it derived its power.

"To accomplish this purpose," he declared, "it proposes public ownership of transportation and of the principal basic resources of the country and declares that all land held out of use for speculation should be forced into use by taxation.

"We represent the vast majority of fellow citizens who will not rest easy until that phrase, 'equal opportunity for all, special privilege for none,' ceases to be the empty chatter of self-seeking demagogues. If we fail here the third great blow will have been struck."

Blows No. 1 and 2.

Blow No. 1, it appeared from the next utterance, was the collapse of the Progressive party, while blow No. 2 came with the discrepancy between the words and deeds of the Wilson administration.

"What we need," he said, "is democratization of our own government, including elimination of secret diplomacy in our state department and insistence on public ownership of our department of justice."

Loud cheers and cries of "Hit 'em again!" Once more he attacked.

"The election of either of the old candidates will mean the same foreign policy, for it is not the party, but the interest, that control the government," he said. "The tumult and shouting that goes with election campaigns is merely the noise of the two parties bidding to act as agent for the speciti interests for the next four years.

Republican Bid Bold.

"The Republican bid is bold. It reads out of its councils every man and woman who ever stood for any form of human rights; adopts a platform that evades, equivocates, or straddles every living issue; paves the way for a war by which, in exchange for the lives and treasure of the people, Mexican oil shall be delivered to the interests; indorses the infamous Esch-Cummins bill over the protests of the farmers, workers, and informed citizens, and consistently crowns its work by nominating as candidate for the presidency of the United States in the year 1920 a proven, steady wheel horse politician, guaranteed to stand without hitching, who learned all the politics he ever learned in the satisfactory and thorough school of Marcus A. Hanna and Joseph B. Foraker, way back in the golden age marked by the Standard Oil scandals. Thus stands the party of Abraham Lincoln in the last day of its decadent faithlessness, naked and unashamed in its servile service of a greedy plutocracy."

"Hit 'em again!" urged the delegates.

Democrats Are Brazen.

"The Democratic bid is more than bold; it is brazen," he continued. "With mild reservations it not only claims a partisan credit, which belongs to the whole nation, for winning the war but it declares that it administered the conduct of that war without the taint of scandal! And the ghosts of Hog island, and aircraft, and shipbuilding, and cantonment constructions, and nitrate plant appropriations are still stalking through the land! Scandal! Is it no scandal that in the year 1917, the year of supreme sacrifice when our boys were fighting and dying for $30 a month and our people were economizing and sacrificing to buy Liberty bonds that the United States Steel corporation made net earnings of $888,931,511, or $20,000,000 more than its total capital stock? What can we call that whole orgy of war profiteering by a set of the most unscrupulous set of scoundrels who ever fattened out of the necessities and the miseries of a great nation at war?"

"Treason, treason!" bellowed the floor. "They're traitors!"

Would Lead to Bondage.

"The Republican party would lead us back to the bondage of Marcus Hanna," said Mr. McCurdy. "Not to be outbid, the Democrats, by indorsing the administration of A. Mitchell Palmer, would lead us back to the days of Philip II. of Spain, Charles I. of England, the unspeakable Metternich of Austria and cause their inquisitions, secret police, spies, espionage, agents provocateur, star chamber proceedings, arrests without warrants, private prisons, illegal detentions, and administrative justice to supplant the methods provided by the bill of rights which has been the bulwark of Anglo-Saxon freedom for nine centuries."

"We are not Socialists," he continued. "We are individualists. We are out to free every man, woman and child from the despotism of special privilege. Legitimate capital has no quarrel with us. Our desire is to break down the land monopoly (waving of pennants by the single taxers) and stimulate competition.

"What America needs is not more laws, but more personal liberty. American people can work out their own salvation if given enough freedom—and the only way we can get that freedom is by abolition of special privileges."

He had reached the tape. The cheering broke loose. The band opened up. Delegates stood on chairs, waving hats and state standards. Wisconsin gave a varsity yell for McCurdy. The single taxers cheered for their party.

After a few minutes the gavel once more pounded the table. Miss Alexander, temporary secretary, informed the delegates that a recess was due, during which time the states would choose their chairmen and the committees on rules and credentials and on permanent organization would prepare their reports.

The former's recommendations were accepted after considerable debate and some amendments. All delegates attending were seated. The total vote was fixed at 539, with 270 as the necessary majority.

Mrs. Lillian Ascough of Missouri presented the report of the committee on permanent organization, naming Harley P. Christiansen of Utah for permanent chairman; Frank Stevens of Delaware, secretary; Mrs. Ina P. Williams, Washington state, assistant secretary.

SINGLE TAXERS MARK TIME TO HEAR FROM 48S

Send Committee to Present Their Views.

James H. Dix of Philadelphia was elected permanent chairman of the national convention of the Single Tax party at the Auditorium hotel last night. James L. Wick of Lincoln, Neb., was chosen permanent secretary.

Prior to the permanent organization of the convention, James A. Robinson, national organizer, was selected chairman of a committee of five to represent the single taxers at the meeting of the resolutions committee of the Committee of Forty-eight in session at the Morrison hotel.

MISS ELIZABETH TOWNE.

Robinson and his colleagues were instructed to put the single tax idea into the platform of the Committee of Forty-eight. As Robinson left the hall he declared the Forty-eighters would have a "hot time before they can get away with a platform that does not carry the entire single tax idea."

Macauley for Union.

Before relinquishing the chair, Robert C. Macauley, temporary chairman, declared that the great moment for putting across the single tax plan had come at the convention of the Forty-eighters.

"There is nobody at the convention of the Forty-eighters that knows what he wants except the single taxers," declared Mr. Macauley. "I have been sounded by their leaders, and if I am not mistaken they are very anxious to have us join them. About one-third of their delegates are single taxers, and if we fight hard enough and show we mean business I know we will win them to our cause."

Mrs. Catt Won't Accept.

A telegram from Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt was read during the morning session, declaring that she would not accept the nomination for the vice presidency. Miss Elizabeth Towne of New York, leading exponent of new thought ideas, sent a message accepting the nomination if it is tendered her. The favorite for the vice presidential nomination seems to be Mart Fagin, four times mayor of Jersey City.

The single taxers proceeded to mark time during the evening session until they hear from the Forty-eighters.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]
[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10.

CONFERENCES of shippers and railroad officials in the Chicago district were proposed at the conclusion of hearings before the interstate commerce commission.

ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE DAVIS has held a second conference with Senor Iglesias, the new Mexican high commissioner to the United States. It is understood that Mr. Davis made it plain that it is the desire of the United States government that some of the policies of the new Mexican régime should be put into effect before recognition can be expected.

LA FOLLETTE FOR 3D PARTY ONLY IF 'PERMANENT'

Madison, Wis., July 10.—Acceptance by Senator Robert M. La Follette of the leadership of a third political party will depend entirely upon the permanency of the organization. The Wisconsin solon will not desert the Republican party for a movement that is launched merely to make one presidential campaign.

Senator La Follette is at his Maple Bluff farm today. He is being kept in touch with events in Chicago by wire. Attempts to obtain a statement from him were met with the reply that his views could be obtained at the office of La Follette's magazine.

"Senator La Follette is interested only in a permanent third party movement," it was said at his office. "He does not want to throw his strength and energies into a brief one-campaign party movement. The senator wants to know first what harmony will prevail at the Chicago gathering."

It was intimated that it would be several days before La Follette has anything to say personally.

Lester P. Barlow, national chairman of the World War Veterans, last night told Forty-eighters that his organization would back La Follette to a man if he were nominated in their convention.

Hearstites Ask Delay to Hold Conferences

An appeal to all the various radical groups now in convention in the city to postpone nominations and adoption of platforms until later, that they might all get together, was issued yesterday by the leaders of the American Constitutional party now in Chicago. They favor the nomination of William Randolph Hearst for president.

Since their arrival in Chicago they have been joined by former Gov. James Ferguson of Texas, leader of a party in Texas known as the American party.

The appeal recites that at a conference of delegates from eastern states it was decided that a committee be appointed to meet like committees of other "independent, progressive bodies," with a view to arriving at a program agreeable to all. Assurances are made of willingness to cooperate in any movement for the "restoration of the American government back to the principles established by the fathers of the republic—a government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

CITY HALL CLAN WHOOPS IT UP FOR "BIG BILL"

Mayor's Primary Slate Is Picked at Jubilee.

Mayor Thompson's campaign to get complete control of the county and state at the fall elections started off with a whoop yesterday afternoon and evening amid the blare of vaudeville acts at Riverview park.

The big mass meeting, which drew 100,000 Republicans, the mayor's lieutenants declared, served two main purposes:

It gave the mayor's slate of candidates, announced and indorsed at the meeting, a chance to come out four square for the Thompson platform.

It rejuvenated the mayor's war chest to the tune of about $100,000, for which the mayor thanked the ticket buyers heartily.

All Stand Firm for Platform.

From Len Small, the mayor's candidate for governor, down to the lesser lights, there was no failure to indorse the mayor's platform with its planks against compulsory military training, in favor of a soldier's bonus, getting out of Europe and staying out, jailing profiteers, and repealing the public utilities act.

William H. Reid, Thompson candidate for secretary of state, presided at the meeting, and before he grasped the gavel declared that 300,000 tickets, representing an outlay of $330,000, including the ten cent war tax, had been sold.

The Thompson candidates sandwiched their speeches with the park vaudeville acts throughout the afternoon and evening. When Congressman Frank L. Smith made his first speech at 3 o'clock in the afternoon there were not more than 400 persons to hear him, but later the city hallites flocked in by automobile and street car. When Mayor Thompson began to speak at 8:30 p. m. there was no standing room within hearing distance.

With the sea of city hall faces before them, the mayor's candidates got most of their applause by using the words "William Hale Thompson."

Small Leads Oratory Feast.

Mr. Small led off by coming out flat-footed for the mayor's brand of pro-Americanism.

"I stand firmly and unequivocally for the doctrines laid down in the mayor's platform," he said.

"I stand for the repeal of the state public utilities act, which will abolish the utilities commission, which has declared that the contracts made by the people with the traction companies are not binding on the companies.

"I am in favor of Mayor Thompson's traction plan, and will urge the legislature in my inaugural message to pass the enabling act drafted by the mayor's traction commission.

"If it passes, it will afford me pleasure to sign this bill, thereby putting it within the power of the people of Chicago to make the mayor's plan for rapid transit and a 5 cent fare a reality."

Smith Assails Wilson.

Congressman Smith lambasted President Wilson and the league of nations.

"In the campaign which will end in November, Republicans—rank and file, party managers and party candidates—should concentrate upon one single objective," said Congressman Smith. "That objective is: Turn the Democrats out.

"This is an unwritten but fundamental plank in our national platform. Indeed it is the platform itself. Turn the Democrats out. This is the way and the only way, we Republicans believe, to achieve the salvation of our country.

"President Wilson forgot the constitution when he wrote the league of nations covenant. Let us elect a Republican congress and remember the constitution when we undertake to make peace.

"I believe a Republican executive and a Republican senate can write a peace agreement which will really help to prevent war, reduce armaments, and reestablish good will among the nations of the earth. It is also my belief that the next congress should literally stay awake nights to find ways to reduce federal taxes."

National Ticket Cheered.

Then Corporation Counsel Ettelson read a resolution indorsing the mayor's slate of candidates, and when he came to the indorsement of the Republican national ticket—Harding and Coolidge—the crowd yelled its approval.

Judge Robert E. Crowe, candidate for state's attorney, was next. He pointed to his record as chief justice of the Criminal court and the fact that the courts are now two instead of nine years behind in their work. He promised, if elected, to use the state's attorney's office "to shield the public, instead of politicians."

Charles V. Barrett, candidate for reelection to the board of review, was introduced by Chairman Reid as "the man who can fix your taxes." He came out strongly for jail for the tax dodgers.

But the climax came when Mayor Thompson took the platform. The vaudeville chorus paved the way for him by singing "Throw Away Your Hammer and Go and Get a Horn and Blow, Blow, Blow."

City hall followers let loose and for three minutes staged a demonstration for "Big Bill."

Assails Military Training.

The mayor began by lambasting compulsory military training.

"They had the right to conscript the youth of this country for war service," he shouted. "Why wasn't it right for them to conscript the powder, the guns, and the money for the late war?"

The mayor boasted that at the spring election he gave his opponents "the worst licking of their lives" and predicted that his slate will get 175,000 votes at the September primaries.

"Where's Lowden now?" he yelled. "I'm told he is in Canada, and that's where he belongs.

"I want to thank you for buying the tickets for this meeting with such enthusiasm. A large part of the money you spent will go into our campaign fund.

"We are not ashamed of the place we get our money. You can't serve the people and the public utility corporations at the same time."

The Thompsonites were strong in condemnation of Gov. Lowden for his failure to call an election to fill the County judge vacancy. It is understood that First Assistant Corporation Counsel Frank Righeimer will be the Thompson candidate. Gov. Lowden must issue the proclamation on or before July 15 if candidates are to be on the Sept. 15 primary tickets.

Conferences with dowistate leaders have been on for a week to settle on the candidates for lieutenant governor, auditor, treasurer, and attorney general, all of which will go to men outside Chicago to bolster up the Thompson-Lundin cause outside Chicago.

Oscar E. Carlson of Aledo is said to have the inside track for lieutenant governor on the Thompson ticket. George B. Gillespie of Springfield, attorney for the Republican state central committee, and Walter Provine of Taylorville are being considered to make the race against Attorney General Brundage and Garrett De Forrest Kinney of Peoria may be given a place on the ticket, either for auditor or treasurer.

KENYON WOULD CUT OFF H. C. L. APPROPRIATION

Hears It Was Used to Boost Palmer.

St. Louis, Mo., July 10.—[Special.]—Repeal of the $500,000 appropriation, granted by the last congress to the department of justice to fight the high cost of living, will be demanded at the next session of congress by United States Senator Kenyon of Iowa, a Republican, on the ground that it was used primarily to boost Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Senator Kenyon made this announcement at the resumption of the hearing being held by the senate committee for the investigation of expenditures in the campaigns of presidential candidates, of which he is chairman. The senator's statements were made in an informal talk to newspaper men and were not to be considered as emanating from the committee itself, he said.

Little Used to Fight H. C. L.

Senator Kenyon declared he was convinced little of this appropriation actually was used to fight the high cost of living.

He said he felt convinced from the testimony presented before the committee that the manner in which the department of justice had used the high cost of living appropriation had been "a great misuse of public funds."

His decision follows the testimony yesterday of Miss Olivia Brueggeman, who was discharged as executive secretary of the Missouri Women's committee to reduce the high cost of living, that the St. Louis office established by the department of justice was used primarily to further the candidacy of Attorney General Palmer for the presidential nomination of the Democratic party.

Office Cost $500 a Month.

Miss Brueggeman stated that the cost of maintaining the St. Louis office was about $500 a month. She said that there were eighteen other such offices scattered about the country and that their annual cost was approximately $100,000.

Miss Brueggeman, recalled as a witness today, testified that the activities of the anti-high cost of living office here for two or three days before a Twenty-eighth ward Democratic meeting were devoted entirely to an anti-Reed campaign.

WOMAN'S CHARGE DENIED.

Washington, D. C., July 10.—[Special.]—Denial was made at the department of justice today of statements at yesterday's hearing of the senate campaign fund investigation at St. Louis that the high cost of living organization of the department was used to boost Attorney General Palmer's presidential candidacy.

It was said there have been sixty-nine employés of fair price commissioners throughout the country, with salaries ranging from $720 to $5,000. In the women's organization there have been thirty-seven employés at salaries from $200 to $3,000 a year.

SEE WHO'S HERE! (COIN) HARVEY TO FRONT AGAIN

William H. (Coin) Harvey, who in the early '90s was known throughout the country as the leading apostle of the "free silver" doctrine, made his reappearance in political life yesterday. He staged his political resurrection in the Committee of Forty-eight convention in the Hotel Morrison as the chairman of the Arkansas delegation and the Arkansas member of the platform committee. He also conferred during the day with the leaders of the American Constitutional party, the Hearst backers, who compose one of the radical groups urging a "third party."

40 Diamond Bracelet Lost by Mrs. Netcher in Taxi

Mrs. Charles Netcher, wife of the vice president of the Boston Store, reported to the police last night that she had lost a platinum bracelet studded with forty diamonds in a Yellow cab during the afternoon, while she was on her way from the Blackstone hotel to her home at 257 East Delaware place.

The loss occurred between 3:30 and 4:30 o'clock, but Mrs. Netcher did not discover it until later. She notified Julius Baer, night superintendent at the store, who reported it to Detective Sergeant Edward Goggin. Neither Baer nor Irving Netcher was able to place an exact valuation on the bracelet. Baer said it was worth "several thousand dollars."

The cab company began an immediate search of all cabs in the garage.

SENATOR NEW TO DIRECT G. O. P.'S SPELLBINDERS

Will Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, yesterday gave out the following outlines of the speaking plans of the G. O. P. campaign:

"The speakers' bureau will be headed by United States Senator Harry S. New of Indiana, as chairman. Senator New directed the Roosevelt campaign of 1904 from western headquarters.

"Associated with him in charge of the eastern division, with headquarters in New York, will be Congressman Thomas B. Miller of Delaware, eastern manager for Gen. Wood in the pre-convention campaign. Congressman J. W. Good of Iowa, chairman of the appropriations committee of the house, will be in charge of the western division headquarters, Chicago.

"These men will give all of their time to the work, with a full corps of assistants.

"The speaking campaigns of the senatorial and congressional committees have been consolidated with the national committee's work, and there will be but one speakers' bureau.

"Apart from these national activities Senator New will keep in close touch with the campaign in his own state. He is taking up this national work not only because of his deep interest but at the earnest personal request of Senator Harding and Chairman Hays."

WOOD DINES AT HARDING HOME; PLANS TO HELP

Nominee in Sympathy with His Policies.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Marion, O., July 10.—Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, defeated candidate for the Republican nomination for president, called upon Senator Warren G. Harding, his successful rival, at the latter's home in Marion tonight, had dinner with the Harding family, and discussed plans for aiding in the campaign.

Gen. Wood made no formal statement as to his plans for helping Senator Harding. This, he said, would be made next Monday in Chicago after a further talk with the senator over some of the things Gen. Wood is interested in particularly.

"I have had a most satisfactory talk with Senator Harding," he said, coming out from the dining room to the front porch of the Harding home.

"I have found Senator Harding in sympathy with the policies I am interested in. I will come out frankly in this matter next Monday after I have had a chance to go into details and prepare a formal statement as to general policies.

"I will naturally support the Republican ticket and the party nominee."

"Will you take an active part in the campaign?" the general was asked.

"I cannot say now," he answered.

The general was in army uniform and his answer was taken as an indication that possibly he might apply for a new leave of absence from army duty in order to take the stump for Harding and Coolidge.

"Would you advise the senator to take the stump?" he was asked.

For Nation Wide Primary.

"That would be interesting to answer. I think there is a big difference between primary and general campaigns. In the primary a man would not get far by issuing a few statements. There are too many men in the field. The people want to see the candidates. They will not read all the speeches. But where the nominee is picked it is different."

Gen. Wood said there should be a general nation wide primary law, in which all states would vote on the same day. The primary was essential to the welfare of the people, he said.

Gen. Wood went down to the Marion club to meet ex-service men and other citizens. He left at 11:17 for Chicago.

To Seek Coolidge's Advice.

In his plan of substituting party government for one man government at Washington after next March, Senator Warren G. Harding, the Republican nominee for president, has hit upon the idea of making full use of his chief partner, the vice president, and announced today that if elected he would invite the vice president to participate ex officio in all cabinet conferences.

Since Senator Harding invited Gov. Coolidge to confer with him at Washington on the issues of the campaign he has received numerous letters commending him on this display of team work.

Senator Harding may be expected to do "something different" along these lines from time to time. He hesitates to push himself forward and has a keen sense of what is "becoming." He thinks a good deal in terms of the "other fellow," and has a very definite sense of the responsibility which he expects will fall upon him to form a new administration in which the problems of the people will be dealt with in a practical, common sense manner.

The speech of acceptance which he is preparing for delivery July 22 is an illustration of his method of thought. As a newspaper editor he has an idea that people do not read long stories. Therefore he is going to keep his speech down to the lowest point of space, probably about 4,000 words.

To Save Some Punches.

The citizens of Mansfield, O., for instance, want the senator to talk on one or two topics when they appear here in a big delegation. The senator will save some of his ammunition for this sort of gathering. The Richmond County Harding and Coolidge club, with headquarters at Mansfield, will come to Marion July 31.

The Hamilton club of Chicago is planning to send a big delegation. Clubs will come from Pittsburgh and other cities.

The senator has been assured the support of the entire traveling organization of Marshall Field & Co. This assurance was brought here by William F. Hypes of the wholesale department, and George Wilson, representing the traveling salesmen.

Escapes Turks

Red Cross Aid Who Says Kemal Pasha's Men Fired on U. S. Flag.

MISS LORETA BIGLEY.

The Turks have no respect for the American flag, according to Miss Loreta Bigley, who reached her home at 5506 Wayne avenue yesterday after perilous experiences while escaping from Aintab, in Asia Minor.

"From Jan. 10 until April 19 we Americans who conducted the Armenian orphanage in Aintab for the American Red Cross were prisoners," she said. "The Turks, led by Kemal Pasha, invaded the city last April, and Armenian massacres started.

"The Turks deliberately concentrated their fire at first upon the orphanage, over which floated the American flag. John Boyd of Portland, Ore., head of the mission, protested. They laughed. After a siege of nineteen days a few Americans escaped with some French troops returning home.

"Miss Elizabeth Kelly of Cleveland came to America with me. Mr. Boyd, Miss Elizabeth Harris of Albany, N. Y., and Frank Pierce of New York city stayed in Paris."

Miss Bigley confirmed the dispatches sent to THE TRIBUNE by Larry Rue, who, she said, is the best informed correspondent in Asia Minor.

Mrs. Annie Gall, 23, 1353 Lafin street, was bruised on the legs, arms and body.

George Husen, 1235 West Thirteenth street, head and body injured. Taken to the County hospital.

Henry Gall, husband of Mrs. Gall, and the two Gall children were shaken up.

A tire on Kissell's car blew out and caused the collision when the machine swerved.

WOMEN'S PARTY GIVES RECORDS OF CANDIDATES

Criticizes Harding; Finds Rival Friend.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 10.—[Special.]—"Varied, evasive and non-committal until the fall of 1918, when on Oct. 1 he cast his first vote for the nineteenth amendment," is the summing up of the suffrage record of Senator Harding by the legislative department of the woman's party, in a statement issued today comparing the two presidential candidates in their relation to suffrage history.

"Gov. Cox," it is explained, "had left congress when the National Woman's party was organized in 1913. Consequently his part in the passage of the amendment could not be so active since he had no vote to cast. But his influence in gaining the senatorial votes of his state and in legislative measures was sought. From the first he has shown a favorable attitude and deputations always have been assured of his support of the amendment.

"Since their nomination both candidates have taken a stand favoring suffrage."

Favors Party Action.

The card index at suffrage headquarters shows that on June 24, 1918, when the first deputation from the Woman's party, then the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, called on Senator Harding, he said:

"Believing as I do in political parties, I had much rather that the party to which I belong should, in its conferences, make a declaration than to assume a leadership or take an individual position on the question."

On Jan. 20, 1916, he said he did not see how he "could vote for suffrage and against prohibition." He thought then he would vote against the amendment.

No Suffrage in Keynote.

In June, 1916, after consideration of requests to mention suffrage in the keynote speech delivered by him at the Republican national convention, it is recorded:

"The speech was made with no mention of suffrage in it."

"But on Oct. 1, 1918, Senator Harding had emerged from the mist of noncommittal atmosphere and voted for the amendment. He also voted for it in February and in June of the next year, when it passed congress" the statement continues.

"Since his nomination he has refused to take a decisive stand to enforce final ratification when interviewed by a delegation of the Woman's party.

"Dissatisfaction was also the result of the noncommittal statements given out following a conference between Harding and Gov. Clement relative to calling a special session in Vermont to ratify the amendment."

MILLION EXTRA TAX HITS DRY LAW VIOLATORS

Volstead Act Delivers a Surprise "Kick."

Taxes and penalties amounting to $1,000,000 have been assessed against Chicago saloonkeepers and other violators of the prohibition laws during the first six months the Volstead act has been in operation, it was announced yesterday by R. M. Brown, chief assistant to Maj. A. V. Dalrymple.

This amount is in addition to fines imposed under the criminal liabilities clauses of the act and averages between $1,000 and $3,000 for each violator, according to the length of time he has been operating.

Start Out to Collect.

None of this tax has been collected as yet, but Collector Henry W. Mager announced last night he had assigned 100 deputies to check up.

"Notices have been mailed to every violator of the law in cases where the tax has been sent to me for collection," he said, "and every cent that it is possible to obtain will be collected. In cases where the taxpayers refuse to pay the assessments, warrants authorizing my agents to seize property will be issued."

"The Volstead act is not very well understood," said Mr. Brown. "It is not generally known that it provides special and additional taxes as well as fines.

Must Pay Double Tax.

"Section 35 of the act reads as follows: 'Upon evidence of the illegal sale or manufacture of intoxicating liquor a tax shall be assessed against and collected from the persons responsible for such illegal manufacture or sale in double the amount now provided by law, with an additional penalty of $500 on retailers and $1,000 on manufacturers. This tax cannot be collected in advance.'

"Paragraph 12 of section 1001 of the revenue act of 1918 provides for a special tax against manufacturers and retailers of $1,000 annually. As this is doubled by the Volstead act, each violator who has broken the law for a period of one year would be assessed $2,000.

The H. C. of L. Lid Tilting.

"For six months the tax would be $1,000 to begin with. To this is added a penalty of $500 if the dealer is a retailer and $1,000 if he is a manufacturer. Besides these taxes there is the old occupational tax of $25 for retailers and $100 for manufacturers. This makes the average tax $1,525 for retailers and $2,100 for manufacturers of intoxicating liquors.

"The law provides that this tax shall be assessed by the commissioner of internal revenue. We have this year reported 500 cases for the Chicago territory alone, and have figured the assessments and forwarded the result to Washington.

In the Detroit territory alone $50,000 is collected each month and the business there averages about the same as ours. That $50,000 more than covers the cost of running the whole district under charge of Maj. Dalrymple."

"2,500 Saloons Operating."

E. J. Davis, superintendent of the Illinois Anti-Saloon league, declared millions could be collected here under this law.

"We estimate," he said, "that 2,500 saloons are operating in Chicago, to say nothing of the thousands of moonshiners. If this tax could be collected, and we will do our best to see that it is, it would mount into the millions."

It is not necessary to prosecute under the Volstead act to collect the tax. All that is necessary is to swear out the proper affidavits and send them to Washington. The tax is assessed there and the collector is notified. Many of these affidavits have been forwarded. It is possible the first notification some saloonkeepers will receive that they are charged with violating the law will be in the form on an order to pay the tax.

If You've Got It, Look Out.

Some doubt has arisen as to whether possession of liquor makes a man liable to the tax, but "dry" authorities hold that possession is prima facie evidence of an intention to make sales. In case of doubt the law places the burden of proof on the accused.

In many cases intoxicating liquor is the only property held by violators, and as this is seized by the prohibition authorities there is nothing for the collector to levy on to collect the tax. The tax can be revived at any time, however.

Closer Liquor Limit.

Closer restrictions on the number of prescriptions that physicians will be allowed to write for liquors will be made in the near future if recommendations made to Capt. Hubert Howard, federal prohibition director, are adopted.

"Although hundreds of physicians are out of books and clamoring for additional prescriptions," said Capt. Howard, "there are many others who believe that doctors should be limited to 100 a year or less.

"Dr. George H. Simmons, editor of the American Medical Association magazine and a number of other well known physicians have been in to see me recently. In their opinion the laws are too lax now and the disposal of 100 prescriptions every three months by physicians is injurious to the profession.

"Dr. Simmons said yesterday that after investigation he had found that the best class of physicians were not prescribing 100 prescriptions monthly."

Ninety-five cases of whisky were seized at Posen, Ill., late Friday by prohibition agents in a raid on the Roamer inn and a private home which had been used for storing liquor. Charles Jannet, the owner, was arrested and held in bonds of $5,000 by Commissioner Mason today.

Grab Two with Moonshine.

A detail of state constabulary—five in number—stood guard last night over 200 cases of Kentucky moonshine found Saturday night in a cache at 659 Custer street. Carl Grobel, owner of a saloon at 1928 North Halsted street, and Fred Zimmerman, 723 West North avenue, are being held as the owners of the liquor.

Marriage Barrier Broken

AMNESTY FOR MOST ENEMY ALIENS JULY 15

Washington, D. C., July 10.—Enemy aliens interned during the war and since released on parole will be given their unrestricted liberty July 15, except in cases of those under suspicion. An order for their release was signed two or three days ago by Acting Attorney General Frierson.

Most of the aliens interned during the war on their release were compelled to give bond and subject themselves to the restrictions of a parole, Mr. Frierson said tonight.

Inasmuch as a sufficient length of time has elapsed, all except those still considered a menace to public safety are to be given their full release. Determination as to those to be held under parole will be left to the United States attorneys in the districts in which the aliens live, Mr. Frierson said.

Department of justice officials were unable to give an estimate tonight of the number affected by the order.

VOLENTINE FREE AT LAST TO WED SCHOOL DAY GIRL

Court Annuls "Kidnap Marriage."

Daniel Volintine, Aurora's "poor little rich boy," who was left $1,000,000 when he was 14 and found himself an unwilling husband at 18, is at last free to marry the sweetheart of his school days, Miss Mildred Wessner.

Judge Adam A. C. Cliffe in the Kane county Circuit court at Geneva yesterday, granted his plea for an annulment of his marriage to Nora Udstad Volintine. The latter is said to have withdrawn her opposition following a settlement of approximately $10,000.

Volintine, who is now 23 years old, told Judge Cliffe he was attending the Northwestern Military academy at Lake Geneva, Wis., when, on Oct. 27, 1915, J. Bruce Amell, now assistant state's attorney of Kane county, and Dr. Eugene Pritchard, the Volintine family physician, appeared at the school and told him he would have to marry Miss Udstad. A warrant had been taken out for his arrest, he said they told him.

Girl Joins Party.

He said he was brought to Chicago in an automobile and that Miss Udstad joined the party here. They then drove to Crown Point, Ind., where, he says, Amell told him he would have to swear he was 21 years old in obtaining a license. The marriage was performed and young Volintine went back to school.

Four months later a baby girl was born to Mrs. Nora Volintine. Young Volintine denied parentage and produced Gustave Anderson of Grand Rapids, Mich., who admitted he was the child's father. Mrs. Volintine then obtained alimony of $80 a month.

When America entered the war young Volintine went into the army and was studying aviation when the armistice was signed. During his absence, Mrs. Ammon Wessner and her daughter, Mildred, occupied his home.

Wife Sues for $50,000.

In the meantime the court had reduced Mrs. Volintine's alimony from $80 to $60 a month. She filed suit for $50,000 damages against Miss Wessner and the latter was ordered to come into court and explain who purchased automobiles, diamonds, and fine clothes for her.

"Mildred and I have been sweethearts for years," Volintine said. "Now I hope we will be married before long."

"Our engagement never has been broken," said Miss Wessner, who is now 22. "We were engaged long before Dan was forced into this elopement with this other girl. We became engaged Dec. 23, 1914."

"Dan has always called me 'muzzy,'" Mrs. Wessner stated. "He really had no home, you know, when he came back from the war, and he came to live with us until his new home was finished."

STAMP OUT VICE OR FACE TRIAL: GARRITY TO AIDS

Chief's Order Seen as Omen of Shakeup.

Chief of Police Garrity last night issued an order to commanding officers telling them that vice and gambling flourished in Chicago and that handbooks and baseball pools were numerous.

He charged them with the responsibility of cleaning up their districts. Vice and gambling must be suppressed, he said. The order was taken as a hint that upheavals were coming in the department.

It had been rumored that Percy Coffin, former head of the city civil service commission, and State's Attorney Hoyne were investigating the police force and its failure to suppress violations of the law. It was known, too, that Capt. Thomas J. Caughlin had been called to the chief's office and that about twenty warrants had been sworn out for the arrest of keepers of resorts and gambling dives in his district.

Warns of Politics.

"Every effort must be made to suppress all forms of vice and gambling by members of the department in their respective posts or in their districts," said the chief's order.

"Immediately preceding primaries and elections it has been the custom for candidates to bolster up their political strength by attacking the police department.

"To a certain extent the members of the department are themselves responsible for this, because of their failure to see that every violation of law is promptly suppressed and the perpetrators vigorously prosecuted.

"The statement that the courts or others interested in prosecutions will not cooperate with members of the department is no excuse. The sole duty of members of the police department who find violations of the law is to take every step possible to suppress such violation by vigorously prosecuting the perpetrator.

"Excuses Will Not Go."

"If the courts see fit to discharge such violators, members of the department must be on the alert again to apprehend the violators and bring them into court.

"Excuses on the part of commanding officers in whose districts or precincts violations of the law exist, will not be received. It is their duty to see that their subordinates suppress such violations and properly prosecute the perpetrators.

"If their subordinates do not do this, it is prima facie evidence that the commanding officers are lacking in ability, and this will be made the basis of charges to be presented before the trial board when violations of the law are found in their districts."

M'ARDLE REGAINS JOB THAT DOESN'T EXIST, $35,000

Wins Another Victory in Old Busse Scrap.

Once more the courts have decided that Peter C. McArdle is entitled to the position of chief material inspector of the city division of public works and to $35,000 back salary. An order to that effect was entered in the Circuit court yesterday by Judge Oscar M. Torrison.

Mr. McArdle, a contractor living at 3644 Grand boulevard, does not rejoice overmuch because of the decision, however. He has been the victor in other court battles during the last twelve years, and every time the city has appealed, as it intimates it will this time. Besides, the job to which he is restored no longer exists.

Lost Out Under Busse.

The fight dates back to 1908, when Mr. McArdle was ousted by the Busse administration. At that time he asserted he lost out because he refused to cater to the "coal ring grafters."

Appointed to the position of cement tester in 1898, he was made chief tester in 1905, when the title of his department was changed to "the testing division." The same year the salary was advanced from $125 to $250 a month and seven assistants were added.

On March 12, 1908, Mr. McArdle was demoted to cement inspector at $125 a month and Harry C. Parkes was appointed to his former position. He was laid off by Mr. Parkes on Sept. 6, 1909, "because of lack of work," the latter said.

Following this McArdle was requested to resign under penalty of having charges preferred against him.

McArdle asserted he found out the charges could not be proved, so he refused to resign and was suspended. He then filed suit against the city.

First Victory Nine Years Ago.

In 1911 the case was decided in favor of McArdle, but it was appealed to the Appellate court and was returned to the lower courts. In the latter part of 1919 the Circuit court found for him, and again the Appellate court was appealed to by the city. Judge Thomas Taylor Jr. of the higher court entered an order on Dec. 31, 1919, affirming the judgment of the lower court. A writ of certiorari was then filed by the city to be heard by the Supreme court, but the latter body refused to hear pleas on the matter.

"Don't know where they will appeal it to this time," said Mr. McArdle yesterday, "but it would seem to me they have had enough."

The office of chief inspector was abolished in 1916 and Mr. Parkes resigned, so it may be Mr. McArdle now succeeds but to fail.

Anyway, Mr. McArdle gets $35,000—if the city does not win its appeal.

WHITE JUSTICE MID POLAR ICE TO TRY SLAYER

Ottawa, July 10.—A white man's judge is to be seated at a place north in the Hudson Bay territory to impress on the Eskimo the relentless justice of the white man's law.

This was the decision reached today by the department of justice in the case of Ouangwak, an Eskimo, charged with having slaughtered a fellow man to obtain his wife. This crime was alleged to have been committed near Chesterfield inlet, Keewatin, deep in the land of endless ice and snow.

Ouangwak is now in Ottawa, on his way to Montreal whence next week he will sail for the scene of the murder trial to be staged for the benefit of the natives.

With him will sail Sergt. Douglas of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the man who hunted him down, arrested him, and is taking him "home" as evidence that the "nothwestern mounted policeman never loses his man."

ERMANS GIVEN HANCE TO SHOW COAL HANDICAP

Conference Concedes Point in Treaty.

BY HENRY WALES.
[By Special Cable.]

SPA, Belgium, July 10.—In view of the stiff German resistance in the debate this morning to the terms of the Versailles treaty dealing with the delivery of coal from the German mines, Premier Millerand this evening abandoned the allied claim and agreed to submit the question to a mixed commission of allied and German experts. These experts are meeting tonight and will report to the conference tomorrow.

After the conference tonight Foreign Minister Simons of Germany said: "If the allies had forced their plan on us we would have had to refuse to go home."

In a pacifying speech this afternoon Premier Millerand declared: "We have no intention of chastising the Germans."

Morning Discussion.

At the opening of the morning session Dr. Simons, the German foreign minister, said it was impossible to reach an agreement on coal delivery without the experts from Germany and the allies getting together.

"The allied plan for the establishment of a fuel control commission in Germany provides for these discussions," said Lloyd George.

"Yes, but that doesn't diminish the total amount of the deliveries Germany will have to make," Simons answered.

Introducing Hugo Stinnes, representing the German mine owners, and Otto Hue, representing the German miners, Simons said:

"These men are not delegates, and the German delegation does not accept responsibility for what they are about to say."

German Coal Operator Rebuked.

Then Stinnes got up. "I rise to look every one in the face. Premier Millerand yesterday said that Germany was accorded the right to speak as a courtesy. I claim the right to speak, and as one not infected with the disease of victory——"

Here Premier Delacroix interrupted: "I object. This conference is an attempt at a peaceful solution. I ask Mr. Stinnes not to be provocative."

Stinnes resumed: "This conference is the ear through which Europe hears the facts. That's why I wish to speak. Without coöperation nothing can be done. That's why I speak as a right and not as a privilege. I cannot dispute President Millerand's figures concerning France, but his figures regarding German production are quite wrong.

"Demand Is Impossible."

The reparations commission demands 39,000,000 tons of coal this year. It is impossible to comply with this demand. The workmen of America, Great Britain and France have adopted a six hour working day, but to repay France German miners are working eight hours daily. They may consent to work one and one-half hours more, but that's the limit, owing to malnutrition. I recognize that Germany may fail to persuade the allies to moderate their demands, and this may result in the occupation of the Ruhr by force. If black troops are used the feelings of every white man will recoil, and the allies will not get coal. If the allies restart the European coal situation, which otherwise will be solved in three years, will be permanently disorganized.

"Europe is nearly exhausted. The loss of French coal was due to the ruin of their mines, which was a military necessity. In view of the right being on our side, we cannot accept and carry out the allies' decision."

Miner Wins Conference Favor.

Representative Hue of the miners showed a marked difference of demeanor. It was evident he created a much more favorable impression than his predecessor. He said:

"Let a commission of experts, allied and German, get together and study the conditions in France and Germany. The coal problem is international. Far from improving conditions, the allied plans will make matters worse. To reach pre-war production the underfed German miners must be nourished. The real question is to increase the output. That depends on the miners. No decision of the diplomats will do any good unless the miners support it. To use force will have exactly the opposite effect."

Apologizes for Operator.

SPA, Belgium, July 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—After the conference had turned over the coal problem to the experts, Dr. Walter Simons, German foreign minister, on behalf of the German delegation expressed regret that Stinnes had spoken in a disagreeable manner.

Discussing reparations, Dr. Simons said he would be able to announce the German plan tomorrow. He pointed out that German finances were critical and Germany needed allied help.

It was extremely important, said Dr. Simons, that the capital sum of reparations be known. He declared the German plan for coal now was before the experts, and announced he would submit to the conference tomorrow a plan for supplying material to the devastated regions.

BRITISH, FRENCH, GIVE BATUM TO GEORGIAN NATION

BATUM, Transcaucasia, July 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The British and French turned the city and province of Batum over to the Georgian republic today, completely surrendering possession. All the British and French warships saluted the Georgian flag. The Georgian shore batteries returned the honors.

The day was celebrated here as a great holiday and the streets were gaily decorated for the occasion, which was one of general rejoicing.

Conditions are quiet on the surface and there is no immediate trouble anticipated. It is reported a British dreadnaught and destroyer will remain after the other British forces depart.

JAP AUTOCRACY IS SHAKEN BY WAVE OF UNREST

Rulers Assailed as Militarists.

BULLETIN.

HARBIN, July 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—Evacuation by the Japanese of the Transbaikal region is scheduled to begin on July 20 and is expected to be completed within a month. The Japanese leaving the region will be brought to Manchuria.

TOKIO, July 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—Not since the advent of constitutional government has Japan seen such political turmoil as that prevailing during the present sitting of the diet. The government apparently is serene in the conviction that it will have the support of the Seiyu-Kai, or majority party. Nevertheless, in the fierce attack which the opposition is making upon it a display of liberal and free speech has developed that observers believe is destined to have an important effect on the development of constitutional government in Japan.

Repeated allegations that the government was controlled by the military, especially with regard to its Siberian policy, were followed by the sensational announcement of Yukio Ozaki, former minister of justice who recently returned to Tokio from a visit to America and Europe, that henceforth he would abandon all parties and wage an independent fight to defeat militarism.

Would Overthrow Militarists.

M. Ozaki declared that only by the overthrow of militarism could the good repute of Japan in the world be restored to its former lustre. He said he had abandoned the Kensei-Kai opposition party because his new attitude conflicted with the policy adopted by the party several years ago when it supported the naval extension policy at present in operation.

"The introduction of a budget of which one-third is devoted to a bloated increase of armaments is the height of absurdity," M. Ozaki asserted. "Japan never will win her rightful place among the nations until she throws off the tyranny of the military clique. World suspicion has turned against us because the world sees in Japan an aggressively imperialistic and militaristic country."

"Lenin and Hara Reign."

The climax of the attacks in the diet against the cabinet was reached yesterday when Representative Nagai, a youthful new member and a professor in Waseda university, declared:

"The Lenin autocracy is reigning in the west, the Hara autocracy in the east."

Another member, Kotaro Mochizuki, referred to the anti-Japanese agitation in California. He scored the Siberian policy.

The opposition parties introduced a resolution declaring lack of confidence in the ministry by the house, and listing reasons why the government should retire. The first of these was that, ignoring the popular demand, the ministry had refused to introduce universal suffrage. The second charged that by dissolution of the last diet the government had sacrificed the interests of state to those of party. The third declared that by its blundering economic policy the government had plunged the country into a financial crisis. The fourth set forth that the way the government had conducted its foreign policy had gained the derision and contempt of the powers. The fifth claimed that the government's indefinite Siberian policy had resulted in the recent tragedy at Nikolaievsk, Siberia, where 700 Japanese were massacred by the bolsheviki.

TESTS FOR TEACHERS GIVE PUZZLE FOR THE NIMBLE MIND

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—This is not a recipe for strong drink, but is a question rolled out before the graduates at the Teachers' college here:

"If ontogeny invariably ingerminates phylogeny, circumscribe the word giving the location of the Ouroq; if not, underscore the word that locates the mandible.

"England Foot Utah Face Peru France Arm India.

"If your answer to this question were to be construed as an index of your intelligence, what is the best you could do under pressure?"

After the teachers get through rolling this little question about, it is rumored it will be passed along to the two graduates of "fresh water" colleges who are now candidates for the presidency from Ohio.

SAY JAPANESE HAVE MINED GULF ON SIBERIA COAST

Shanghai Unions Allege Relief Cut Off.

[By Special Cable.]

SHANGHAI, July 10.—The Siberian coöperative unions of Shanghai report that the Japanese have mined the Gulf of Taracy, preventing relief from being sent to the Russian people in the maritime province. The British ship Fancy Muller, loaded with provisions for the civilians at Nikolaievsk, and dispatched by the Russians in Shanghai, was held by the Japanese navy at Vladivostok in spite of the strong protest from the British consul at Vladivostok.

The Russians in China have sent a petition to the Japanese government to permit a Russian mission to go to Nikolaievsk. No reply has been received. The Russians brand as false the widely spread Japanese report of a bolshevik massacre of Japanese in the maritime province. The Russians make the inquiry, "Why do the Japanese military refuse an investigation by either the Russians or the popular Japanese press?" They claim that the situation at Nikolaievsk is similar to the conditions at Vladivostok before the Japanese coup, April 5, following the American withdrawal, with the exception that the Russians probably will put up a resistance at Nikolaievsk.

Representatives of the Siberian coöperative unions here claim that the Japanese reports of massacres by the bolsheviki in the maritime province are only a cloak for taking over the maritime province by the Japanese.

GREER COLLEGE OF MOTORING.

The Day of Days

ONE HUNDRED little cripples, many of whom have never walked, were made happy yesterday. They were taken on a motor tour of the boulevards and parks and then were guests at a lawn party given by the Medinah Motor club at 1521 Sherwin avenue, Rogers Park.

There was a whoop of joy when the automobiles drew up in front of the Home for Destitute Crippled Children at Paulina street and Park avenue at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The children were wheeled out to the waiting machines or helped along on their crutches. Some, who have been strapped to boards ever since they were babies, were carried out in arms.

Once in the machines, they forgot that they were not as fortunate as other folks. They were having their one big day of the year. The lawn party lasted until 4 o'clock and half an hour later they were back in the home to talk of the wonderful trip until their next outing next summer.

OFFICIAL OF U.S. DENIES BUYING MILITARY MAPS

TOKIO, July 9.—Delayed.]—[By the Associated Press.]—In connection with the case of T. Oyama, arrested late in June charged with attempting to sell military maps, the American embassy today turned over to a representative of Oyama some 200 maps of Siberia which Oyama had left temporarily in the office of Col. Charles Burnett, the American military attache, saying he wanted to sell them. Before being able to regain possession of the maps, which Col. Burnett decided were of no value, Oyama was arrested.

Viscount Uchida, the foreign minister, wrote to Edward Bell, the American chargé d'affaires, informing him that Oyama in his deposition declared he had left the maps in the American embassy. The Japanese, he said, wanted them to use as evidence in the attempt to establish the guilt of the defendant.

There was nothing to show, according to Mr. Bell, that they were the property of Japan.

CHINESE REBELS MENACE PEKING; DEFY DIPLOMATS

Ignore Warning from Foreign Legations.

PEKING, July 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gens. Wu Pei-Fu and Tsao-Kun are reported to be moving their forces toward Peking along the Peking-Hankowa railway, in defiance of the warning given the government by the diplomatic corps here yesterday that in case of an uprising no fighting must take place in Peking, and that the city must not be subjected to bombardment.

Gen. Tuan Chi-Jui, former premier, who is exercising dictatorial powers, has appointed Tuan Chi-Kuie, a former war minister, to be chief of the forces moving to check the advance.

Martial law has been put into effect and the western gates of the city are guarded against the unauthorised entry of troops.

Warn: "No Fighting in Peking."

PEKING, July 9.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—Warning has been given the government by the diplomatic corps here that in case of an uprising, there must be no fighting in this city and that Peking must not be subjected to bombardment. Forces commanded by Tuan Chi Jui, former premier and minister of war, are surrounding Peking.

Gen. Wu Pei Fu, who has been relieved of the command of government troops in Chih Li, is near Pao Ting Fu, thirty miles south of here, but whether fighting occurs there will depend, it is said, upon the acceptance by Wu Pei Fu of his dismissal.

Chang Tso Lin, governor of Mukden, who has been acting as a peacemaker, has retired to Tientsin to await developments. He has several divisions of soldiers under his command.

Gen. Tuan Jui's threatening attitude is a result of the government's dismissal of Gen. Hsu Shu-Cheng, as resident commissioner for Inner Mongolia.

U. S. Marines There.

Washington, D. C., July 10.—American forces now in Peking consist of a legation guard of 375 marines, commanded by Col. Mason Gulick. While no American army forces are stationed there, the 15th infantry, the only American army detachment in China, is at Tientsin, about eighty miles from Peking, and could be brought up to the capital on short notice, officials said today. In addition to the American guard, a number of other powers have permanent legation guards at Peking.

The American marine guard is the largest at Peking. The total strength of the entire international force is estimated at 1,400 men. In the event of an attack this force probably would be commanded by Col. Gulick, who is believed here to be the ranking foreign military officer at the Chinese capital.

Japan's guard at Peking is only slightly smaller than that of the United States, while England's force is a third. Other countries which have armed guards there are France, Italy, Holland, and Belgium.

MEN AND SUPERMEN.

The American political instinct works reliably through the scheme of politics. It is not the object of the instinct to achieve grandeur and not always, if ever, to reach the highest effectiveness. Its object is democratic safety.

It is not the highest ambition of the American people to rule or to be ruled. It is to live fairly and securely. The people love glory, but it is the glory of the homespun. They fear too much leadership because it may be the grandeur of the purple.

Whenever the people get a dominating leader they take the first opportunity to get back to themselves again, to renew democracy by finding its source in themselves. They never want to go from King Log to King Stork, but always from King Stork to King Log.

It may be a safe thing that they have this reverting impulse in them. The presidency, in its potentialities and realities, is as unchecked an autocracy as can be found on earth. There is no other ruler on earth who could have made himself so completely the sum total of national thought and activity as Woodrow Wilson did. There is no other ruler who, failing in an election to get the power to act, would have arrogated it to himself anyway, who would have gone abroad alone to negotiate a treaty of peace, ignoring every other influence and power in the nation, and have brought the treaty home with the mandate that it was unalterable and inviolate, no matter what it might commit the United States to.

It is a powerful ruler who can proceed so unchecked, and Wilson by moral bulldozing nearly succeeded in his effort and now has the Democratic party pathetically asserting that he was right. No wonder the Democrats, chained to an assertion such as that, nominated a man from Ohio who will try to evade responsibility for any such thoughts and who will be presented as one of the plain people, a porch man who loves the phonograph and geraniums.

The American people sometimes in large numbers are indifferent to their political processes and do not want to be bothered by the means by which they are governed. They tire of politics and they tire of politicians, of political issues, and political debates.

They want to play baseball and golf, mind their gardens, go fishing and to the movies, read the newspapers and magazines, earn their living, and get enough money to buy an automobile. If indifference should increase for any length of time and if a powerful, autocratic, headstrong man, a dominating, willful man, should be in the presidency he might make the presidency a dictatorship.

One preventive is popular interest in preventing it. The other is personal interest in not doing it. The instinct of democracy is to select a man who will not have the ambition to do it.

Roosevelt was one of the best loved presidents America ever had, but many people were glad to go from his dynamics to Taft's placidity. Then they got Wilson's isolated autocracy and they'll be glad to get to Harding—or even to Cox.

Roosevelt was a leader who kept his feet on the ground. Wilson is an overlord who keeps his head in the clouds. Roosevelt was autocratic, but he lived in American tradition and he acted in American fashion. He built the Panama canal, he threatened Germany with war, he showed the fleet to Japan as a monarch might show his army to a rival, but he did all this in a fashion which the American citizen could understand.

Wilson is a greater autocrat because he does not live in the American tradition and does not act in the American fashion. He was peremptory, but he did not say the things or do the things which the American citizen understood. It was an act of complete sovereignty for Roosevelt to tell the German ambassador that he would send Dewey to meet the German fleet. Louis XIV. would not have acted more on his own, but it was an act in conformity with American ideas of telling the other fellow where he got off.

Wilson's act in sewing the nation up in a strange entanglement of European complications without a word of assent from the country was an act of complete sovereignty, but one without any American sanction.

No wonder the people are hurrying back to themselves.

WHEN SELF-RESPECT BREAKS DOWN.

It is a strange characteristic of Americans in quest of relaxation that so often they allow their self-respect to relax with their minds and bodies. It is a characteristic demonstrated most widely and completely by the hundreds of thousands of our city dwellers who seek their relaxation in picnic parties. Perhaps it is because the very idea of a picnic is a relaxation more complete than can be found in other forms of recreation.

At a baseball game we may relax our minds, but not our bodies. At a theater we may relax our bodies, but not our minds. At a picnic we relax both mind and body, and with them, it seems, our self-respect. By no other theory can we account for the utter indifference of the average picnicker to the rights and comfort of others.

Broken shrubbery, scattered newspapers, unsightly remains of luncheon, dangerous fragments of bottles, in the parks, in the forest preserves, in every patch of woodland and along every shady highway around Chicago after each holiday invasion by the picnic vandals prove it.

Self-respect is the only law which forces a man to keep his face clean, his shoes polished, and his clothing neat. Self-respect is the only law which requires a woman to keep her home in order. As a nation we do these things without a thought that we are doing them for any other reason than our own self-respect and comfort.

How is it, then, that we can accept the summer hospitality of the fields and woodlands and repay it by destruction? Certainly it indicates a temporary collapse of self-respect. Such vandalism leaves behind it proof positive that the vandals are utterly indifferent not only to the rights of others, but to their own future rights. It indicates not only a collapse of self-respect, but a collapse of intelligence. As we allow it to continue and increase we restrict our opportunities for healthful out of door recreation. If a return of self-respect will not stop it the latter thought should do so.

ENSLAVING THE WORKING CLASS.

More than a usual utterance of bunk must be expected in a presidential year, but when the season is over the first prize for pure, unadulterated twaddle will go to the assertion of Mr. Howatt of Kansas, that Gov. Allen's industrial court is "an attempt to enslave the working class of Kansas, and finally the working class of the United States."

We do not know how the Allen industrial court will work out. We have our doubts that even in an agricultural region it will produce the results hoped for. But when its opponents say it is an attempt to enslave any one they are talking nonsense with a set purpose. What the law is for, and Mr. Howatt knows it as well as any one else, is to prevent if possible industrial functions essential to the life of the community from being paralyzed in a controversy between employers and employés. It is an attempt to prevent the innocent bystander from being trampled under foot in a duel over terms of labor, over pay, over hours or working conditions, over jurisdictional quarrels, over any one of the many differences which bring about strikes.

Mr. Howatt uses the sounding phrase "enslavement." What is for a soapbox effect—to stop men from thinking, not to make them think. The Allen law does not compel any man to work or prohibit any man from quitting work if he does so as an individual. He is as free as any other man in this respect. But the law does prohibit him from agreeing with others to stop working temporarily for the purpose, not of leaving the job and seeking other jobs, but to compel the concession of terms. Even this prohibition does not apply—and ought not to apply—in ordinary business, but only in case the work which will be stopped is necessary to the public life or health, as the supply of fuel or transportation of food, or police or fire protection.

In other words, it is an attempt to answer the question whether a group of men like policemen, miners, or railroad men, who by leaving work in concert can imperil the lives of thousands, shall lawfully enjoy that special power.

The Allen law says no. Mr. Howatt and Mr. Gompers and other labor leaders say yes, and declare that unless these groups have the power to enforce their demands on their employers by imperiling the public they are "enslaved."

We have yet to see a fair discussion of this serious problem by Mr. Gompers or any other labor leader. Their discussion is full of talk about enslaving the working class, but the fact that the public, and this includes wage earners outside of essential industries, has a right to life and health is always shirked. Employers are prohibited by law from combining to withhold essentials and even from increasing profits. Mr. Howatt doesn't think that is enslaving. But, though a workman may lay down his tools and walk out at any moment, because a law says he must not conspire with others to paralyze the whole service, Mr. Howatt says he is "enslaved."

We invite Mr. Howatt and his confrères to look to bolshevik Russia for enslavement. There the individual worker is compelled to work. He is directed what work to do. He is prohibited from quitting work even as an individual. He is put into labor battalions and sent where his officers decide he is needed. That is, in fact, slavery, and it is under a government which claims to be of the workers and for the workers.

In America today the talk of enslavement of the working class is a sardonic joke. The American wage earner is the most independent individual in the country, and very often he is abusing his power. The question is not of his enslavement but rather of just public protection from an abuse of his powers.

Editorial of the Day

HINTS FOR "YOUNG IMMIGRUNTS."

[New York Evening Post.]

The immigrant today does not come docile and job seeking to fill the vacancies where America most needs new energy. He has almost always now a waiting adviser who, out of a superior American experience, delights to "tip off" the newcomer in the choice of his future work. These anxious, wide eyed throngs of Greeks, Italians, Luxemburgers, Arabs, Czecho-Slovaks, and Scandinavians all have some countryman in Minnesota or the Bronx who will warn them, under penalty of drudgery and low social standing, not to become farm hands, and, above all things, not to enter domestic service.

Yet these are the very places which most of the immigranta, by their previous training, have been naturally fitted to fill. Their effort might conceivably be turned into the dry channels instead of the flooded streams of labor. Eager and impressionable, they arrive at Ellis island, and are at once inoculated by their friends with a horror of the tasks they really prefer and which once were the most popular. So came the extinction of the general houseworker and the hired man. Disinterested action can hardly be spoken of in a land where these two are so passionately desired, but there is a plan which might be tried without the least coercion, and who knows with what halcyon results?

America has never explained to immigranta, catching them young, as they flitted by at Ellis island, the advantages of going on small farms or into households. Now, when these callings are as dignified and lucrative as and far more familiar than the lines they select, the immigrant hears of only the gloomy and old fashioned side of domestic service. We make no effort to explain the improvements which the proximity of the hired firl has induced, or to show the prospective hired man the difference between a tenant house and a tenement. The day of the old Castle Garden employment office is gone. There is no material from which to resurrect it. But the day for a bureau of information about farm and home work for immigrants seems fully come.

I cannot hope, like laurel-crowned Petrarch,
To give my Love six centuries of fame,
Or weave such lyric romance 'round your name
As he did when he lit against the dark
Of sleeping ages, like a little spark,
The song which burst into a deathless flame.
I strike my flint with high and eager aim,
But dream not many will its flash remark.
Enough for me, if when sharp, wintry age
O'ertakes you on your mortal pilgrimage
And drives you to seek solace by the fire,
You then take down my little book, desire
To warm yourself by dear remembered times,
Are glad I loved you, crooning o'er my rhymes.

AS nobody else has supplied an answer to the question, "What is an 'ideal week-end skirt'?" we will venture to conjecture that an ideal week-end skirt is one who is content to have the romance end with the week.

Forethought of a Man of Letters.

[From the British Weekly.]

In "By Way of Bohemia," Mr. Mark Allerton, who is a skillful craftsman, departs somewhat from the regular style of his novels and gives us an account of the new journalistic world of London and the complications between men and women which are there to be found. He has written a dedication to his sons, which runs thus:

"Should you read this novel when you are grown up you may come to the conclusion that your father has met a lot of rum people in his time. This is to assure you that he has never met anybody in the least like the characters he has tried to draw; that the firm of Periodicals, Limited, does not exist; that, in fact, he made up the story out of his head."

SOME HOT WEATHER HINTS.

A BLACK man absorbs heat quicker than a white one when both are working in the sun, but the black man starts sweating first and that brings his temperature down.

When a man is in the sun he not only feels hot but he is hot. If he can sweat enough and the sweat can evaporate, if air which is cooler than he is can get access to his skin, his temperature will fall to the normal in spite of the heat.

The blood is not thinned by life in the tropics. It is neither more watery nor is it less rich in iron. Drs. Breinl and Young, who investigated all of these questions in northern Australia, came to the conclusion that there is no tropical anemia, except as such condition results from infection with some kind of parasite.

But all investigators are agreed that heat lessens activity, acting either directly or indirectly. Huntington proves that men produce less in the hot weather of summer than they do in the changing temperatures of spring and fall.

Breinl and Young say there is a consensus of opinion that living in the tropics affects the nervous system and neurasthenia is more prevalent than in temperate climates. They speak of fits of depression alternating with states of exuberance, unwarranted irritability over trifling matters, uncontrollable outbreaks of temper. One of Kipling's gripping stories concerns a man who goes killing mad as a result of heat. Havelock Charles speaks of the "Punjab head" in Bengal, characterized by shortness of temper, forgetfulness, sleepiness, and disinclination to work.

Some attribute the craving for coffee and other caffein drinks and stimulants in general by people in warm climates to the result of the effect of the heat on the nervous system. By bathing, dressing properly, and the use of fans, the effects of heat can be greatly decreased.

The effects of heat in a warm climate can be greatly lessened by proper housing. In the first place, the house should be set so as to catch the wind. Flinders street in Townsville, North Queensland, deserves the reputation of being the hottest in the land because it is so laid out that the prevailing winds cannot get in to blow the heat out.

C. D. Lynch suggests a proper type of house for a hot climate. The outer walls should consist of double layers of brick or reinforced concrete with a three inch air space in between. There should be a hall 12x15 feet wide running through the center from before back and a cross hall from side to side through the center. The house should be set so that these halls catch the winds. The house should be set in foundations which raise the floors about two and a half feet above the ground. The rooms should be large. If the ceilings are high the space next the ceiling should have ventilation openings, else it will hold the heat.

While verandas are desirable to keep the heat of the sun from the side walls, the size of the veranda should not be taken from the size of the rooms. The gables under the roof should be provided with ventilators. Effort should be made to keep the kitchen as cool as possible.

Wherever electricity is available the house should be equipped with electric fans.

WOULD QUIT CIGARETS.

V. P. writes: "Please send me the cigaret cure. I have been smoking cigarets for about two years and have tried in vain to stop."

REPLY.

Repeat your request and send a stamped addressed envelope. When we had the cigaret cure printed, a couple of months ago, we thought a thousand would answer. About thirty requests a day are coming in for this reprint. A good many people seem to be unhappy over being in the toils.

EYE STRAIN USUAL REASON.

S. G. writes: "Kindly tell me the cause of sties and the remedy. I have had my eyes tested and find no serious defect."

REPLY.

The usual cause of sties is eye strain. In your case that seems to have been eliminated. Keep the margins of your eyelids very clean. Pull out loose hairs occasionally.

MANY PHYSICIANS AVAILABLE.

C. W. writes: "Where can one go for an examination for tuberculosis?"

REPLY.

There are private physicians expert in the early diagnosis of consumption in practically every community. In addition, most communities maintain consumption clinics.

BETTER SEE PHYSICIAN.

A. B. S. writes: "Is it bad for one with chronic Bright's disease, but who seems perfectly well, to go in bathing? I have heard that the skin must not be chilled."

REPLY.

The rule is that persons with chronic Bright's should guard against chilling the skin. Do not go in swimming unless your physician advises it.

TRY MUNICIPAL CLINIC.

New York writes: "Where would you advise a person to go for treatment of t. b. in New York? I have been to four doctors and they claim I haven't it."

REPLY.

The spitting of blood does not always mean consumption. If you are reluctant to accept the opinions you have had go to one of the municipal clinics or to a specialist on consumption if you can afford it.

HI COST EXPLAINED.

Chicago, July 9.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Could you ascertain why the Lincoln park commissioners do not put a stop to the extortionate charge of 10 cents for ice cream cones and plain drinks like coca cola or ginger ale by the refreshment vendors in Lincoln park?

The standard price of ice cream cones by the best stores all over the city is 5 cents, which includes 1 cent war tax, and yields over 100 per cent profit.

It is a mean form of profiteering that raises the price of this popular favorite of the little tots. SUBSCRIBER B.

Mr. B. is entirely mistaken about the standard price of ice cream cones throughout the city. The facts are that upon investigation made by this office it was found that the price this year is not 6 cents generally, but 10 cents. We found that the class of labor called "cone cutters" receive from $5 to $7 per day, as against $3 a year ago. Even the boys who work at these refreshment stands just selling candy are now being paid from 35 cents to 40 cents per hour, while last year they received but 18 cents per hour. It is a well known fact, which can be proven by investigation, that ice cream has increased materially in cost as well as the price of cones. There is in no sense the least bit of profiteering in the prices that are charged in Lincoln park on the articles mentioned by Mr. B. JOHN G. CANNON,
Superintendent and Secretary.

FOR CLEANING VACANT LOTS.

Chicago, July 9.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The lot east of us is vacant, and I think I am safe in saying it is the most disreputable looking lot in this section of the city.

I went out and burned the weeds and newspapers which covered the lot, but in the back it is full of old tin cans. The people who live in the house just south of us every once in a while dump tin cans by the barrelful on this lot. I feel sure they have no right to do this and I am asking you to find out what can be done about getting this lot cleaned and stopping these people from littering it up further.

We have no funds for the cleaning of vacant lots. Owners of dirty vacant lots can be compelled to clean them through acts of the department of health.

I notice that Mr. Johnson has already addressed a letter to that department relative to the matter, which, I presume, will receive attention. THOMAS E. HIRE, Superintendent of Health.

NOT FOR THE LANDLORD.

Chicago, July 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What action can be taken against a landlord to make him repair a gas stove that belongs to him and not to the gas company? He was told of the leak at the time leases was signed and since then, but has made no effort to have it repaired. It is necessary for some one to sleep in this room and the odor is becoming more disagreeable and unhealthy. R. H. A.

In general, the landlord is under no obligation to repair unless the lease expressly so provides. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NO DECORATING DONE.

Chicago, July 9.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—In the course of four months our rent was raised twice. In consideration of the second increase the landlord let us understand that he would put on new wall paper. As yet nothing has been done. 1. Can he, the landlord, collect the second increase, or must he first do the repairing? 2. How often may the rent be raised? G. E.

We assume tenancy is by the month.

1. He would probably be entitled to a reasonable time within which to get the work done, during which time you would certainly have to pay the agreed rent. If the time passed your better remedy would be to have the work done and sue him for the cost.

2. We know of no legal limit, if proper notice is given. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

WHAT WE FIGHT FOR.

Chicago, July 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Walter R. Avery, as an American, is privileged to like or to hate the English as he may choose. So is every other American. We are entitled to our opinions.

It is my opinion that a good many of the boys who wore American khaki over there thought they were fighting for the U. S. A. even though Wilson said it was for "democracy." You know the popular saying in the army, "No bunk for the troops," or something to that effect. Despite his mastery of rhetoric, Wilson fooled no one. The boys remembered they had taken oaths to defend the U. S. only, and they must have known that the preamble to the constitution read "ourselves and our posterity," without any mention of Belgium, France, England, Armenia, Mexico or Ireland. Indeed, we have sufficient reason for going to war only when our union, justice, tranquillity, general welfare or liberty are endangered by act or omission of any other nation or people. Congress is empowered to determine whether the reason or cause exists. In 1914 we had no cause for declaring war on Germany, otherwise congress would have done so, and as Americans we are bound to abide by congress.

To go aside for a moment, we may admit England had cause to declare war in 1914, but the English soldier swore to defend England and England's cause, not any other nation or other nation's cause.

Walter is in error when he implies [last paragraph of his letter in today's TRIBUNE] that England was fighting for us at any time in 1914 and 1918. In 1917 Germany by her acts endangered our liberty, so our congress declared war and agreed to fight with [not for] the allies. We were not of the allies because we were not party to the alliance. Our cause was distinct. Walter may go on sympathising with the English. Others may continue to sympathise with the Poles, Jews, French, Belgians, Indians [American or of India], Irish or Filipinos. I know of no court decision to the contrary.

I deny, Walter, that England was fighting for us in 1914 or 1918. Neither were France, Italy, Russia or Japan. We fight for ourselves, and it is my candid opinion that we will have enough wars to fight if we just continue to fight only for ourselves and our posterity, without binding ourselves to any alliances, leagues, mandates, doctrines or interventions. The boys who go are the ones who know. R. E. K.

DEFENDING THE PUBLIC SERVICE BOARD.

Chicago, July 3.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—Mr. E. W. Sholty's letter, "When Is a Public Service Board Impartial?" which appeared in the "Voice of the People" July 2, is inconsistent and unfair to the public utilities commission of Illinois. I take exception to his statement that "The Chicago public does not believe this commission is impartial, for indeed they have no reason to so believe." On the contrary, the Chicago public has good reason to believe the commission to be fair and impartial.

Mr. Sholty writes that "the decisions in the 'gas hold-up' of a year or so ago are too fresh in the memory of our people to be forgotten" and that "he is watchfully waiting for some decision by the commission in favor of the people as against the corporations which would lead him to believe them impartial."

Mr. Sholty probably refers to that period of the year 1918 when the gas company was accused of estimating meter readings previous to Aug. 1 when the new gas rates became effective, and basing the estimated consumption of gas at the new rate. Let's see, what were these decisions? The commission audited every account on the gas company's books and in every case where they found any possible doubt as to whether or not a meter reading had been estimated and the estimated consumption billed at the new rate, effective Aug. 1, 1918, the customer was given a rebate. Thousands of consumers who had never made complaint against the gas company received these rebates. Was this impartial?

It is the duty of the public utilities commission to get at the truth in public utility inquiries. Its rulings have been sustained by the highest court in Illinois time and time again. It has been declared the legal umpire between the public utilities and the people.

The public utilities commission is a body of experts paid by the state to see that justice is given to the people as well as to the corporations. I am informed that the commission employs a regular staff of engineers, expert accountants and investigators and that its findings are based on facts.

My observations lead me to believe that the erstwhile popular fallacy that corporations are soulless robbers is being rapidly dispelled, and the people are awakening to the fact that the public utilities commission is a fair and impartial body whose rulings are based on tangible information. WILLIAM F. DOOLITTLE.

ON RACIAL EQUALITY.

Chicago, June 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your article appearing in the June 22 issue of THE TRIBUNE in regard to the Abyssinian movement and recent outbursts of radicalism on the south side is indeed interesting, but far from the real facts.

The writer is an American Negro, loyal to the core to America and to the American flag, but not always adherent to the white or majority interpretation and execution of Americanism. The writer is in no sense a radical, nor does he countenance for a minute any form of militant radicalism. He does feel, however, that particularly your interpretation of the influence of Dr. Du Bois' doctrines and philosophy is misleading and entirely wrong. The statement that "Dr. Du Bois is read by virtually every intellectual colored citizen in Chicago" and that his doctrines are at the bottom of the present unrest among American Negroes is entirely wrong. The real source, growth, and promulgation of radicalism among American Negroes are due solely to the unjust and beast-like oppression which they have endured at the hands of the majority group in America. The truth is that Dr. Du Bois is not widely read by Negroes. The essence of his philosophy is one of public equality, which gives to every American citizen the same rights and privileges. The American Negro is not seeking so-called social equality. He is proud of his race and only asks that his women be given the same protection from white men that white men see that their women get from colored men.

"Race leaders" who are bowing to the desires of white people by misinterpreting and misconstruing the doctrines and influence of Du Bois are doing more to develop radicalism among Negroes than any other thing except the unjust oppression of Negroes by the white people.

It might also be said that the blowing headlines of white newspapers with unfounded facts in regard to the Negro are doing a great deal to increase radicalism among Negroes. E. E. ARMSTRONG.

NONFICTION.

"Instigations" [Boni & Liveright], by Ezra Pound.
"The Shadow Show" [Doran], by George Curis.
"Limbo" [Doran], by Aldous Huxley.

Last week's six best circulators in the public library were:

"This Side of Paradise," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick J. O'Brien.
"Economic Consequences of the Peace," by John Maynard Kaynes.
"Now It Can Be Told," by Philip Gibbs.
"Avowals," by George Moore.
"The Rescue," by Joseph Conrad.

"LILULL," Romain Rolland's heroic size satire on life and especially on war as an inevitable result of the illusion of the world, has been translated and is published in this country by Boni & Liveright, with cruel and unusual wood cuts by Frans Masereel. In the translation it loses much of the force which it had in the original, but it is still a bitter piece of literary work. Romain Rolland's attitude toward the war won for him a passionate hatred from his countryman and a dislike akin to an active distrust from most of the rest of the world. "Lilull" is his answer to the invectives which assailed his well protected hiding place in Switzerland. He has set down one of the most fundamentally gripping and most poignantly bitter satires that has ever been written. The only trouble with his satirical conclusions is that the major premise of his argument is wrong. Granted that war—all war—is an illusion which hurls unwilling brother against unwilling brother, he has done a smashing job of showing the world what fools its inhabitants be. But granted there are men who can fight nobly for an ideal, that illusion and her henchmaiden public opinion cannot fool all the people all the time. M. Rolland's elaborate satire becomes merely a brilliant literary accomplishment.

Strangely enough, Gilbert Cannan appears almost simultaneously with a satire on war and on the human race in general. "Windmills" it is called. Also, strangely enough, Gilbert Cannan succeeds where Rolland failed, and fails where Rolland succeeds. As an argument against war Gilbert Cannan's philosopher's conversation is completely convincing. His picture of the ultimate man bringing eternal peace by means of a navigable island and a secret explosive with which he first destroys Bondon and then with its ruins as an example brings the rest of the world to its senses is the most brilliant satirical imagining. His philosopher's propoundings of the causes of war are, unlike M. Rolland's, exceedingly convincing.

On the other hand, M. Rolland has done a literary job which is a tour de force. Mr. Cannan's work is shoddy. M. Rolland, all fire and art, creates a delicate burning vision, something to wonder at and admire as a work of art, too high in the heavens to be grasped as a torch by most men; Gilbert Cannan, with little art, but with a stolid scent for inflammable material, builds a fine crackling funeral pyre for much of the sentimentality of war, and makes a bonfire which even an honest man can see is well built. His "Gynecologia" is a very amusing picture of an Eve governed garden of Adam.

Linked as M. Rolland and he are—the one as the creator of John Christophe and the other as the translator of that marvelous literary monument—both of them as bitter opponents of war, their two books are immensely interesting in comparison with one another. The trouble with satires—on war or socialism or conventions or politics or any of the multiform breakings out of our somewhat measly human race—is that practically every one looks upon them as peculiarly dull sermons or violent apologies for the vita suas of misjudged authors instead of as the esoteric literary circuses which they really are. M. Rolland's entertainment is concerned with the ladies who hang by their teeth at the top of the tent and flop their draperies in the changing lights, and make admiring little boys and girls think they're angels. Mr. Cannan's specializes more in the solid comforts and buxom glee of the clown who turns out to be a better bareback rider than the gentleman with the silk topper and the too well-fitting gray evening clothes.

"Fiddler's Luck" is a nine-tenths fact, one-tenth fiction record of Robert Haven Schauffler's luck as a cellist, principally during the great war. He has already won for himself an audience of devotees through his articles on music in the Atlantic. Many of the chapters of "Fiddler's Luck" appeared there and in the Outlook. But despite their charm as magazine articles, the book is a pretty second rate piece of work.

There is an absurdly amateurish love story in it, about a girl with light hair and blue eyes. The recently acquired Mrs. Schauffler—who is Margaret Widdemer to the reading world—has the most haunting and powerful dark eyes, which may account for her husband's not doing much for his blonde heroine. To the musician, however, Capt. Schauffler's musical experiences will give a delightful few hours.

"Americans by Adoption" is the latest literary work of our fellow townsman, Joseph Husband. It is a series of short biographies of nine famous men who were foreign born and elected to die Americans: Stephen Girard, John Ericsson, Louis Agassiz, Carl Schurz, Theodore Thomas, Andrew Carnegie, James J. Hill, Augustus Saint-Gaudens, and Jacob A. Riis. It is the kind of book which, with no fanfare of trumpets and noise without, proclaims the essential royalty of true Americanism. Incidentally, it is a book which, in our great melting pot, might well be given to the boy just entering manhood, whose ideal has been gathered from a tradition in his home town far beyond the glimmer of the torch of the Goddess of Liberty—the ideal summarized by our corner fruit man who was almost in tears as he said, "I've been in business six years already and I haven't made enough money to retire back to the old country."

"Primitive Society," by Dr. Robert H. Lowie, sounds like a novel by Sir Harry Johnston with the plot left out. His wealth of social detail, his vivid pictures of the period he is writing about are equaled by Prof. Lowie. Result: A popular anthropology that has all of the atmosphere of a novel. It is the first easy book on primitive peoples since—I can't remember the man's name—Morgan, I think. Anyway, it's the last word in easy reading. It will give you a start to realize how essentially primitive we still are—or how essentially up to date the savages were. Their ideas about marriage and woman's place in politics, and things like that—read "Primitive Society" if you want to be able to dash off a bonmot that will shock a dinner table and leave your reputation intact.

Cynthia Stockley has written another fascinating story in "[illegible] Gods and Blue Demons." It is the tale of a vain and beautiful girl left in Kimberley by her husband; of an unscrupulous diamond king who falls in love with her; of her passion for the pink gods of diamonds, and the pursuit of her by the blue demons of remorse and threatened shame. I used "fascinating" with forethought. It is just that, with no pretense at being a masterpiece, only a story that fascinates the reader and lures him on to the very last line of the very last page.

"Daisy Ashford—Her Book" collects all of the immortal works of the Ashford family, including Angela Ashford, who puts to shame her sister's naïveté about babies in "The Young Visiters." In "The Jealous Governess" she tells the world the proud truth that the thought is, as it were, mother to the child, and that the phenomenon which threatened to ruin the social standing of the eager Algernon Moncrieff in "The Importance of Being Erneat"—the fact that he was born in a handbag—should only prove his noble birth, for his handbag had handles, and most babies come in mere boxes which are sold for from five pounds up to ladies who express a desire for them. As for Daisy herself—she had better have gone down to posterity as the author of "The Young Visiters" unadorned, and let the dead past bury its copybooks. "Daisy Ashford" is now and then mildly amusing, but if you are a fond mother or father of a literary child you will probably tell the truth about her abilities (for once) when you say that her art surpasses Daisy's in "Her Book."

"The Anchor," by Michael Sadler, is another of those clever, charming, well done English novels, written with just the filip of style that no one on earth but the younger English novelists have. But it is just another. It has all of the major qualities of greatness, but none of the minor. Like all of the delightful things that come from the pens of the talented young English writers, it keeps one up past midnight, but, once finished, it doesn't haunt one. For mere pleasure, there is nothing like them. If one insists on masterpieces—one feels like the person who comes into town through a blizzard to hear "Pelleas et Melisande," and finds they've changed the bill to a Puccini cream puff. But we can't hope for genius on every printed page. Charm is rare enough to be a largesse in itself. "The Anchor" has that, though it has not greatness.

"The Pointing Man," by Marjorie Doute, is a mystery story without a gum shoe or a set of false whiskers or even one of those fashionable young detectives who have the wisdom of the parlor snake and the harmlessness of the three gray spat. It is an oriental tale of a feud between two Burmese families and a white man's crime.

"Sheepskins and Grey Russet," by E. Temple Thurston, is one of those books which register with the reader as completely charming or just plain balderdash, according to the attitude of the reader toward such simple joys as the farm and such whimsicalities as a cow market attended by an amateur country man. I thought it was a charming book, of no permanent importance whatever, delightfully written, with amusing and friendly characters and a plot conspicuous by its absence of violence. It is the tale of the unadorned country life of a whimsical husband and wife whose passion for buying old houses and remodeling them led them into the purchase of the background for the story. Mr. Thurston has done some of his most whimsical writing in it, and if it weren't somewhat spoiled by illustrations a bit too realistic and there a trifle messy, it would probably have found for itself only friends. There are those, however, who can't bear the smell of the old fashioned new mown hay in a story. They are the ones who will say it's balderdash.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Alfred Tennyson.

On thy cold, gray stones, O sea!
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

O, well for the fisherman's boy
That he shouts with his sister at play!
O, well for the sailor lad
That he sings in his boat on the bay!

And the stately ships go on,
To the haven under the hill;
But O, for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still!

At the foot of thy crags, O sea!
But the tender grace of a day that is dead
Will never come back to me.

BRITISH ARMY TO SIT ON IRISH LID ON ORANGE DAY

Fear Celebration Will Start Trouble.

DUBLIN, July 10.—Troops being sent to the north of Ireland are not confining their activities to Belfast alone, but are being distributed in all districts in which it has been announced demonstrations in celebration of the battle of the Boyne will be held.

The explanation current here of the exceptional military activity is that the government had reason to believe Irish volunteers contemplated descents in force on various districts on the plea that their presence was necessary to protect Catholics, and that the government believes the military forces are the proper guardians of the peace.

No Disorders Expected.

BELFAST, July 10.—Confidence that order will not be disturbed on Monday, notwithstanding elaborate preparations for the celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, is expressed by officials here notwithstanding the sensitive condition of public feeling.

Demonstrations have been forbidden in the city itself, but arrangements have been made for a great massmeeting at a park four miles distant, to which all processions will lead. It is expected that 20,000 persons will march in the Orangemen's parade, and the delegates from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and the United States will attend.

Carson to Speak.

Sir Edward Carson, the Unionist leader of Ulster, will be the chief speaker, and will propose a resolution appealing to the government to deal resolutely with "the cruel and treacherous warfare being carried on in Ireland," pledging Ulster men to "ever do their duty as loyal British citizens, if called upon."

Saloons Stay Open.

Among the other resolutions will be one expressing the determination of Orangemen to "defend the civil and religious liberties for which their ancestors fought at the Boyne river."

Several detachments of soldiers in full equipment were detrained at suburban stations yesterday and marched into the city. The city council, at a meeting yesterday, defeated a proposal to close saloons on Monday, the vote being 28 to 27. Public meetings on Monday have been forbidden in Londonderry.

MEXICO FIGHTS ITS VICES NOW; WOULD BE GOOD

Agua Prieta, Sonora, July 10.—Following orders yesterday from the governor of Sonora ordering a crusade against vice of all sorts and subsequent closing of open saloons and gambling houses last night, officials today began raiding opium dives, arresting several Americans, Mexicans, and Chinese.

More than $56,000, including many checks on American banks, were confiscated by the raiders. Dives also are being raided and closed, and the sale of strong native drinks is being stopped.

Gen. Alexander Monje, military commander at Agua Prieta, declares the crusade will be continued throughout the state, while Mauro Castro, vice consul at Douglas, Ariz., says similar action is expected in Chihuahua.

POLAND ADMITS RETREAT

The Polish war office, in an official statement issued at Warsaw, admits the whole Polish front is retiring, but claims it is being done in good order.

1—Reports reaching Paris say Vilna, Minsk, Pinsk, and Brest-Litovsk evacuated by Poles.

2Ukrainians hold Kamienetz to protect Lemberg and Polish right flank.

LLOYD GEORGE URGES A PEACE WITH SOVIETS

Asks France, Poland, to End Fighting.

that at any time Russia might attack them, regarding aggression as the best form of defense, and the advantage with him who strikes fast, the Russian-Polish peace negotiations were broken off, the Polish army took the field. A swift blow into Russia followed, the Poles taking Kiev.

Reds Busy Elsewhere.

Meanwhile there was fighting and some bolshevik counter attacks, but the Reds decided to pause in hurling the remnants of the Denikine armies into the Black sea, and the British out of Persia, where troops had been landed and the city of Enzeli on the Caspian sea, cleared of the British, who retired in the face of a superior force. Pausing in these operations, the Reds turned their attention to the Poles about Kiev and other points where their successful offensive had carried them.

His equipment replenished by the captured tanks and armored cars of British manufacture, taken from Denikin's forces, Brusiloff moved his armies to attack the Poles. This took him nearly six weeks, but for the last two he has been in contact with the Polish forces.

Poles Far Outnumbered.

Outnumbering the Poles about ten to one, the Brusiloff forces have been turning the right and the left of the Polish line, while the center of the Polish position is in the marshes about Pinsk. This encircling maneuver is a military classic.

The historic gate to Russia, on the road to Moscow, is between the rivers Dvina and Dneiper. On the map this pathway lies between the cities of Vitebsk and Smolensk. On this line rested the Polish left flank when the forces of Brusiloff opened their recent great offensive.

Now the Poles admit a retirement from this line and reveal that the Russian cavalry has crossed the Beresina river at Bobruisk. On the first stage of their drive the Reds occupied Minsk, Volno, and Kovno, and now are advancing in a southeasterly direction on Grodno. The right claw of the Russian pincers now touch Baranovitchy.

Caught Between Pincers.

On the other arm of the pincers there is Budenny's cavalry in large force. There are threats of vengeance against Poland, heard from Moscow. Dispatches report "Lenin is swearing that Russia will not be satisfied until Warsaw is captured and punishment inflicted which will make the Poles remember the event for many years to come."

Meanwhile there appears no outside help for Poland.

CALLS REPORTS FALSE.

Washington, D. C., July 10.—The Lithuanian mission here today denied reports which, it was said, were circulated several days ago from Warsaw and which were to the effect that the Lithuanians and Germans planned a joint attack on Poland the latter part of this month and that Lithuania had made large purchases of war material from Germany in preparation for the attack.

"As an indication of the falsity of the reports," said a cablegram received by the mission from Kovno, "it is pointed out that Poland recognized the independence of Lithuania on the day following their publication and that an improvement of the relations between Lithuania and Poland is at once to be expected."

VILLA THREATENS A TERROR REIGN IF HE'S SLIGHTED

El Paso, Texas, July 10.—Francisco Villa, Mexican bandit and revolutionist, sent word to the border today by one of his agents that rejection of his terms by the new government in Mexico would cause him to start a new reign of terror in northern Mexico.

Villa, it was said, has discontinued his operations until July 15 as the result of an armistice arranged in negotiations last week.

FORD COMPANY BUYS RAILROAD, BIG LAND TRACT

Acquires D., T. & I. and 400,000 Acres.

Detroit, Mich., July 10.—The Ford company today announced the purchase of the Detroit, Toledo, and Ironton railroad and of 400,000 acres of forest and mineral land in the northern peninsula of Michigan.

The Detroit, Toledo and Ironton road is a coal carrier from the mines of southern Ohio, West Virginia, and Kentucky; has 454 miles of main track and 155 miles of sidetrack.

On the land tract purchased in northern Michigan the Ford company will build a sawmill and automobile body plant employing approximately 2,500 men. According to the announcement by the company all wooden parts used by the company in body construction will be manufactured at the northern Michigan plant complete and shipped to Detroit.

Evidence of mineral deposits in the tract has been found, according to the announcement, and in case sufficient iron is disclosed to justify such action, steps toward the development of mines will be taken.

The northern peninsula property surrounds Lake Michigamme in Baraga, Iron, and Marquette counties. The most probable site for the proposed plant, officers said, was near Republic, Mich.

It is expected that the railroad purchased by the Ford company will be capable of supplying Michigan's industries with all fuel needed. The Fords have no intention, it is announced, of competing for passenger business in purchasing the D. T. & I. It is likely that the new gasoline car of the interurban type on which the Ford engineers have been working will be used for the service.

Employes of both the northern Michigan plant and the D. T. & I. are to be brought under the Ford plan in the matter of wages and hours.

OPPOSES PLANS OF NORDAU FOR JEWISH STATE

LONDON, July 10.—Proposals that a half million Jews be taken to Palestine within the next year, made by Dr. Max Nordau at today's session of the international Zionist conference, were sharply attacked by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, who dclared he favored a more moderate program.

"Such an undertaking," Dr. Weizmann declared, "is impossible. The difficulty is not with the British government, nor the San Remo conference, nor the Zionist organization, but with the Jews who have failed to rise to the situation produced by decisions reached at San Remo.

"When Jews are prepared to sacrifice their flesh, blood, and treasure to the maximum degree, then they may undertake to settle half a million of their race in Palestine within a year. The question is not what the Zionist leaders or the British have done but what the Jews have done."

MY CHECKS? YES, BUT LET HUBBY TAKE THE BLAME'

'We've Parted, Anyway, Says Jailed Wife.

"I'm guilty," said Mrs. Clara Kroll Walters last night when questioned at detention home No. 1 concerning a number of bogus checks. "But if you're going to give me a writeup just say my husband sent me those checks and I cashed them thinking they were all right. You know the bank. He didn't have anything to do with it, but just put the blame on him anyway. I sounds better."

From Bridewell to Loop.

Mrs. Walters, who has been using her maiden name, Clara Kroll, has been employed as a stenographer by the Porter Langley Publishing company in the City Hall Square building. That is, she went there to work after she had finished serving thirty days in the bridewell on a larceny charge in April. She had been interrupted while on a cashless shopping tour in a loop store.

Yesterday, when she was taken into custody by Detective Sergeants Max Sallich and Mike Trant, she gave her address as 901 Sheridan road and her age as 20. She said she had been married to Leroy Walters, but they had separated a year ago. No charge was booked against her, but the police claim to have traced a number of bogus checks to her authorship.

Many Names on Checks.

One check for $18 was made out to August Heanisch, 3919 Lincoln avenue, by "C. Kroll, 2838 North Hoyne avenue," another for $35, made out to Louis Staubel, 3911-3913 Lincoln avenue, was signed "George E. Dawson" and indorsed by "Clara Kroll, 3836 North Hoyne avenue." Another for $52.50 in the same handwriting was cashed at a loop store by "Miss C. J. Kennedy, 1414 Diversey boulevard." Other signatures said to have been used were "L. T. Wheeler" and "J. W. Wheeler."

The first Mrs. Close was awarded custody of her four children and $20 a week allimony.

"FORGING AHEAD" ON WORLD COURT, ROOT DECLARES

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

THE HAGUE, July 10.—"Now forging ahead," Elihu Root said, in reply to a query as to the plans for an international court of justice.

"Everything is going very well, but that's all I can say for publication. We are all in good humor and optimistic. That helps some."

It is impossible to say, he holds, how much work the court will have at the beginning. It might even go for a year or so with hardly any cases.

Mr. Root seems to believe that the work here will be finished before the end of the month.

Mr. Cusack was born in Ireland, came to Chicago in 1865, and has worked at the brick making business all his life.

They had fourteen children, eight of whom are alive, and there are fifteen grandchildren. Three of the sons were in the World War and all returned home safe. There will be a family celebration at the residence.

KICKING HORSE KNOCKS LID OFF MURDER CASKET

Then Widow Admits She "Executed" Spouse.

BY WALTER DURANTY.
[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

PARIS, July 10.—The historic old Norman town of Bayeux, where William the Conqueror comes from, just witnessed the third act of a tragedy as dramatic as any of its storied past.

Fifteen years ago the Golden Lion tavern was kept by a couple named Huchez. The man was about 35 years old, considerably younger than his wife, and his good looks and reportedly errant heart had given rise to no small amount of scandal. In the fall of 1905 he disappeared—he had run away to America, it was whispered, and not alone.

Wife Glad He's Gone.

In reply to inquiries—Mme. Huchez was not a woman to encourage curiosity—the wife declared, "He's gone and it's good riddance. I don't care where he's gone to, but I guess he won't trouble me any more."

As it happened, I visited the Golden Lion at the beginning of 1906. I remember a very pretty waitress there and remember, too, how the local worthies with nods and winks alternately at her and the somber figure of Mme. Huchez behind the pay desk, conveyed the story of the innkeepers' flight and its supposed reasons.

A few months afterward Mme. Huchez sold the inn and opened a small café in Bayeux. She stayed there until a year or two before the war when she retired to a life of modest independence at Grenoble.

That was the first act of the tragedy. The second act is short and grewsome. A few weeks ago a restive horse was stamping impatiently in a straw heap at one end of the Golden Lion stable. Suddenly his foot went through the ground and a half hour later a hostler found him with his hoof firmly fixed in the splintered top of a wooden trunk.

Buried Treasure—Perhaps.

"Buried treasure!" was the word that flashed through the inn, and soon there was a curious group thrilled with the joyous anticipation of watching the hostler and his mate digging furiously in a gloomy corner.

A big, square trunk was brought to light and a sharp jerk of the pickax wrenched off the cover. The crowd that had pressed forward shrank back in horror—huddled in shredded clothing laid the skeleton of a man. The mystery of where Huchez had gone was a mystery no longer.

The police investigation showed the innkeeper had been murdered by a knife thrust.

The examining magistrate from Paris was not slow in developing a theory—everything pointed to Mme. Huchez as her husband's murderer.

That ends the second act. The third is stranger still.

A dignified, white haired old woman stopped yesterday at a small café near Bayeux station and asked for the office of the examining magistrate from Paris. Arrived there, she announced herself as Madame Huchez. She told the officials she had come from Grenoble to explain about her husband's death.

"I killed him," she said quietly. "He was rough, drunken and unfaithful. Then I put his body in a trunk and buried it in the cellar with the help of a male domestic. The latter took no part in the killing. He asked no questions and I told him nothing."

When the magistrate recovered from stupefaction, he gasped:

"Do you feel no remorse?"

"Why should I?" said the Madame. "He deserved it."

Then she returned to the station to await the return train to Grenoble. For, by the French statute of limitations, she cannot be prosecuted for a crime committed fifteen years ago.

OPEN CAMPAIGN TO REHABILITATE NATIONAL GUARD

"At present the Illinois reserve militia is the only armed protection for life and property the state has at its command. This organization will be mustered out Oct. 1, 1920, the men comprising it having enlisted only for the duration of the war. These have rendered invaluable service and will continue to do so until Oct. 1. It is imperative that a new national guard be organized before then. Otherwise, the state will be without protection. The thought is too serious to even contemplate."

This appeal was sent out yesterday to more than two hundred prominent speakers of Chicago by Uri Grannis, chairman of the speakers' committee of the Chicago National Guard commission. They were urged to help bring home to the citizens of the city the urgent necessity of rehabilitating the national guard. Many of the men appealed to served on the rostrum during the Liberty loan campaigns.

ENGLAND TO GIVE JAPAN THE SACK IF U. S. JOINS LION

Pacific Colonies Fight a Renewal of Alliance.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, July 10.—England seeks a treaty with the United States which will protect the interests of both countries in the far east, according to the best informed diplomatic circles in Paris. Pressed by its colonies not to renew the pact with Japan, it desires another means of assuring the safety of its Asiatic possessions in Australia and maintaining an open door to China.

Australia and New Zealand for the last four years have been urging upon the colonial office the necessity of finding a new alliance which will serve the same purpose as the Japanese treaty, at the same time removing as an ally a people whom they neither trust nor with whom they are in sympathy.

J. W. Findlay, son of Sir John Findlay, minister of the interior in New Zealand, who represented the colony at the imperial council in 1911 when the Japanese treaty was renewed over the protests of Australia and New Zealand, yesterday admitted both New Zealand and Australia have been urging a treaty with the United States for several years and that as far as the British empire is concerned there is every desire for an alliance.

Up to England Tomorrow.

Tomorrow England must notify Japan if the treaty in force is to be subjected to radical changes. It is probably no such notification will be given and that the old treaty will remain in force until it expires, July 10, 1921. If before that time Prime Minister Lloyd George and Lord Curzon have not negotiated an alliance with the United States on the question of the east, the treaty will be renewed practically unchanged.

The only clauses which must be reworded are those assuring the people of England the empire cannot be called into a war between Japan and the United States. In the treaty in force this clause reads:

"England cannot be asked to make war as Japan's ally on countries with whom she has a treaty of arbitration."

Official opinion in England declares the league of nations has succeeded the treaty of arbitration between England and the United States, and a rewording of this clause is necessary to continue to guarantee America's immunity from attack on the part of England as Japan's ally.

What Happened in 1911.

Mr. Findlay was secretary of the New Zealand delegation which came to England for the imperial council in 1911, and is in possession of much secret diplomatic history of the alliance.

"When Lord Grey entered into the alliance with Japan," Mr. Findlay said, "he made it perfectly clear to the Japanese minister of foreign affairs that England would under no circumstances involve herself in a quarrel between America and Japan no matter which nation was the aggressor. That was the reason for the insertion of this clause."

The Japanese alliance with England was made at a time when America's interest in the Far East was not considerable and has remained in force while the United States extended its influence in China and Siberia and increased its interests until now they are closely parallel with those of England.

"It is essential to the empire that it have an alliance with some power which will assure an open door to China and protect the British colonies and financial interests." Mr. Findlay said finally "America's interests in the far east will coincide with ours in the future. Both the American and British Asiatic and Pacific colonies have a common reason with America for resenting intrusion by the Japanese."

Dr. Meeker formerly was professor of political economy of Princeton university.

Admiral Horthy Asks Bethlen to Head Cabinet

BUDAPEST, July 10.—Admiral Horthy, the regent, has entrusted Count Stefan Bethlen with the task of forming a new cabinet to succeed that of Premier Semeden, which resigned June 21. Count Bethlen at one time was adviser to Archduke Joseph, the former premier, and was a member of the Hungarian peace delegation.

SCOTLAND YARD AID IS SOUGHT IN ELWELL CASE

Woman in Europe May Clear Up Mystery.

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—Investigation of the murder of Joseph B. Elwell now leads to London and Scotland Yard, in search of a woman who knew Elwell intimately, whose picture was in his house, and who is believed to have gone abroad.

Scotland Yard has been asked to locate this woman and to interrogate her for New York detectives. Her name and description have been sent to the London detectives.

The name of the woman is being withheld here. According to the story about her, she told a man recently she was going to Europe and that when Elwell obtained a divorce they were to wed. She was at Palm Beach when Elwell was there at one time. Letters passed between her and Elwell. Detectives are trying to locate some of these letters as well as to get in touch with the woman herself.

Believe She's in Europe.

Detectives tried to find this woman in New York since the murder of Elwell. Then they communicated, as the story is told, with police of other cities in this country in hopes of tracing the woman they sought to question. Now they believe she has sailed for England. The importance they attach to information she may have is indicated by the request to Scotland Yard to find her, if possible.

Assistant District Attorney Dooling was told today that newspaper men had heard about a quest for such a woman. He was asked for her name. He replied:

"Why mention her name? Elwell knew several hundred women. Perhaps he knew more women closely than any other man in a similar station of life in this city."

Mr. Dooling made known today he would continue investigation of Elwell's "love pension" list, as some of the turfmen's expenditures have been styled.

Three Know How He Was Killed.

Three persons, at least, according to Mr. Dooling, know how the murder was committed and who it was that shot down the racehorse owner in his home at 244 West Seventieth street in the early morning of June 11. This was characterized by a police official as being "two women and one man."

William Barnes, former secretary of Elwell, accompanied by his attorney, John J. Kuhn, appeared at the office of Assistant United States Attorney Albert C. Rothwell in the federal building today in answer to a request that he tell what he knows of Elwell's alleged illegal transactions in liquor.

Barnes balked at the first question put to him and on the advice of Mr. Kuhn he declined to answer. Mr. Rothwell then adjourned the hearing until next Tuesday.

TWO MORE WAR ROMANCES END IN DIVORCE COURTS

Two more blighted wartime romances ended in the divorce courts yesterday.

Mrs. Verna C. Plank of 4919 Fulton street said Capt. Joseph Plank left for France a few months after their marriage, and she never saw him again, but she opened and read pale-pink letters from France that expressed a love for "mon brave capitain."

Mrs. Plank said she learned her husband had shot himself in the leg to avoid being sent into Germany with the army of occupation; that he had been court-martialed and sentenced to twenty years at hard labor, then discharged because of insufficient evidence. Judge McKinley granted a divorce.

The homecoming of Lieut. Benjamin Provost of the medical corps was one of anxiety, he testified before Judge John P. McGoorty. He said he did not let his wife know of his arrival, but spied on her, with the result that he saw her and another woman meet two men at a hotel.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

It was stated in THE TRIBUNE on July 8, that Lake county, Indiana, is the only county in the country having four Elk lodges. The order has four lodges in La Salle county, Illinois. They are located in La Salle, Ottawa, Streator, and Mendota. All four marched together in Wednesday's parade.

In detailing the political rise of Gov. Cox, THE TRIBUNE, on July 7, said he announced his candidacy for the presidency last February in the Middletown, O., Journal. He made the announcement in the Middletown News-Signal.

GRANT SIX

BUILT TO STAY NEW

THE last $200 in the price of the Grant Six is what you pay for durability, and you get it. It would be easy to cut $200 off the price of the Grant Six and still produce a car that looked as good as the car we do build. True enough, we would have to use imitation leather instead of real leather, a cheaper top material in place of "Neverleek," cheap springs in the seat cushions, ordinary tape instead of felt anti-squeak pads between fenders and frame. We could not use a forced-feed oiling system in the motor, the self-lubricating bushings at various points, or the Columbia Axle with its one-piece housing.

Such a cheapened car might look like a bargain, but it wouldn't be. Quality is real economy—durability is worth having and paying for. So we have built the GRANT SIX so well that money will not make it any better, and when you've owned the car a year you'll be glad you paid the slightly higher price.

EASTMAN

MR. SCHUTTLER SEEMS TO HAVE HAD A WILD TIME

Cars Wrecked, Policeman Punched, but—

Peter Schuttler Jr. of 325 Fullerton parkway engaged on Friday night in very remarkable experience.

Schuttler was leaving the Marigold gardens in his roadster, according to witnesses. His car bumped into one of the cabs belonging to the Martin auto livery. He murmured an apology and scrooched from the first Martin cab into a second, damaging both.

Perceiving that he was opposed by an unusual number of hazards, Schuttler's anxiety to leave the vicinity increased, and he stepped on the gas again before he had fully decided upon his course. He charged into an automobile driven by J. C. Plummer, making Mr. Plummer very unhappy as well as an unwilling customer of a wrecking company.

Punches Policeman.

An angry crowd was gathering by this time, and Schuttler strove again to leave the neighborhood. He collided with a brand new Hudson sedan belonging to an Ohio Elk whose name has not been learned. The body of the Hudson was torn from the chassis and almost completely wrecked.

Policeman Edward Schoenecker of the Town Hall station ran out to Schuttler's car and told him he was under arrest. Schuttler denied this, stepped from his car, and punched the policeman in the nose. Schoenecker took Schuttler to the station and insisted that he be locked up.

Roger Faherty Appears.

In a short time Roger Faherty, son of Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, appeared at the scene of Schuttler's unhappiness and told Earl J. and Albert M. Martin, who are running the auto livery business for their mother, that he "would see that everything was fixed up all right."

Meanwhile the victims of Schuttler's wild driving appeared at the station to sign complaints against Peter Schuttler. They were told Schuttler had been freed. No report of the accidents could be found in the records at the station yesterday. No one in the station had heard anything about the Schuttler case.

"Young Faherty went to the station and fixed it all up," said a witness of the accident.

Martin Threatens Suit.

Albert Martin said he had not been "fixed up" yet. He said unless he was furnished with a sufficient consideration for the damage to his two cars suit would be started Monday against Schuttler.

Martin said the visiting Elk had also stated he wanted full repayment for the almost complete wrecking of his new car.

'We Shall Remain'

American Commander Who Made Famous Reply to French at Marne, Who Will Be Guest Here Tuesday.

Maj. Gen. Joseph T. Dickman.
[Copyright: Underwood & Underwood.]

1,000 HEROES OF MARNE TO FEAST HERE ON TUESDAY

Gen. Dickman Honor Guest at Third's Reunion.

One thousand heroes of the 3d division, the "Marne division," who helped block the road to Paris in the second battle of the Marne and turned the kaiser's horde of "supermen" the other way, will sit down to a banquet at the Hotel La Salle on Tuesday evening. It is the first annual reunion of the division, held on the anniversary of the opening of the great battle which turned the tide of the war.

Dickman to Be Guest.

Maj. Gen. J. T. Dickman, who commanded the division, will attend the banquet. It was he who, when the French high command gave the order to fall back, gave the now famous reply, "We will remain." How efficiently the division "remained" was mentioned by Gen. Pershing in his report when he said: "A single unit of the 3d division wrote one of the most glorious pages in the annals of American history."

Gen. Pershing and Gen. Robert L. Howze also have been invited to be present at the banquet, and one of the speakers will be Col. Halstead Dorey, who led the 4th infantry and was decorated with the Legion d'Honneur by the French government for four wounds received in action.

Wounded Here to Attend.

Men from the 4th, 7th, 13th, and 38th infantries, the 10th, 18th, and 76th artillery brigades, and other units of the division will be present. The wounded of the division, still at Fort Sheridan hospital, will be brought in to attend the meeting and banquet. The divisional colors will be brought here from Camp Pike, Ark., present headquarters of the 3d, and escorted to the convention by a guard of honor.

All "Marne division" men are invited to attend. Those who have not already received notices and tickets are requested to communicate with former Capt. Hal Beacom at 105 North Clark street.

DAY OF "DRIVES" FOR FUNDS PAST, SAYS "Y" CHIEF

Finds Public Cold to Indefinite Pleas.

L. Wilbur Messer, head of the local Y. M. C. A., feels that the day of the "drive" for funds has gone, not to return. Writing in the Official Bulletin yesterday, he explained why campaigns in the south and in the Rocky mountain districts for a blanket sum to carry out the work of the "Y" were such failures.

L. WILBUR MESSER.
[Matzene Photo.]

"The time is past when we can expect to ask a man for contributions and give him no information about where his money goes," he says. "And that is exactly what these blanket demands amount to.

Spell of War Gone.

"During wartime, when the fervor of organization and contribution was at its height, schemes of concentrated appeals were devised and carried out with good success.

"But that time is over, and the public should not and will not be befogged by indefinite appeals for funds with no clear objective, no stipulated scheme of management, no frankly outlined policy.

"The failure of the interchurch movement is a striking example. The public flatly refused to be driven into another general scheme. People wanted to give as individuals, to whatever end they wished, and they definitely rejected the scheme which refused them this privilege. General contribution to a central fund will never work in these post-war days.

Public Has Right to Know.

"I contend that any institution which is asking support from the public should be able to present good grounds for its request. It should provide its public with a frank statement of policies and budgets and a record of satisfactory service. If it cannot do this, it is unworthy of support."

DIVORCE SUIT BARES PARTING OF E. H. MASONS

Union of Noted Local Families Broken.

A suit to divorce Mrs. Belle Harvey Mason, daughter of the late Turlington Walker Harvey, founder of Harvey, Ill., was filed yesterday by her husband, Edward H. Mason of Glencoe, promoter of public utility enterprises in Colombia, South America.

Mr. Mason alleges Mrs. Mason deserted him in 1917. He says she is now living in San Diego with her youngest daughter, Virginia, 6 years old.

Disposition of Children.

Mr. Mason asks the court to give him custody of three of his children—Edward G., 18; Harvey Roswell, 10, and George Walker Mason, 8. He also asks the court to give Virginia to her mother and a proper financial settlement be made. Two other children, Belle Sheridan Mason, 21, and Elvira, 20, are not mentioned because they are of age.

Grandson of "Big Fire Mayor."

Mr. Mason is a brother of Julian Mason, managing editor of the Chicago Evening Post and Master in Chancery Roswell B. Mason, son of the late Edward Gay Mason, and grandson of Roswell B. Mason, mayor of Chicago at the time of the great fire in 1871.

The Masons were married in 1896. Mr. Mason returned to Chicago two months ago from a six months' business trip to Colombia, where his three youngest children were born.

HOTEL CLERK IN LOOP IS ROBBED BY LONE BANDIT

Shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday morning a man held up Austin Geesey, clerk in the Board of Trade hotel, 317 South La Salle street, and escaped with $135 from the cash register. The lower half of his face was hidden in a handkerchief.

A woman who would not tell her name called the police yesterday saying that a bullet-riddled auto had been abandoned at Forty-second street and Indiana aveue. The police tried to find the car, but it had gone.

BOND TANGLE STIRS VILLAGE OF GLEN ELLYN

Ex-Treasurer Signed the Names of Others.

Ten thousand dollars worth of bonds, alleged to have been forged, stirred up excitement in Glen Ellyn until yesterday, when explanations were made and it was learned nobody had lost a penny.

But the village board, it is stated, still intends to take action against Elmer F. Adams, former village treasurer, and the trustees may appear before the grand jury at Wheaton next Wednesday.

Signed Two Others' Names.

Adams was president of the Glen Ellyn State bank in 1918. He was village treasurer. He had a plan to effect a consolidation with another bank. He had let a paving contract for the village and he issued $10,000 in bonds, signing the names of John C. Simons and E. F. Wagner.

The merger failed to materialize; Adams was succeeded as president; he lost money in a big deal, and he was beaten for reelection as treasurer.

Takes Up Bonds.

He had sold the bonds to Otto Schneider of Forest Park. He took up $3,000 worth of the bonds. A few days ago Schneider wanted some coupons cashed. The cashier of the bank pronounced them a forgery. Adams was notified. He immediately paid Schneider $2,350 for four $500 bonds and the interest thereon, and promised to take up the rest of them immediately.

However, the board filed information against Adams yesterday with the state's attorney of Du Page county.

Chicago Sets Record for "Healthiest Week"

Chicago has just lived the "healthiest week in its existence," according to Dr. John Dill Robertson, commissioner of health, who said yesterday that the death rate per thousand from all causes was 8.2, the lowest figure in the city's history. The nearest approach to this figure was for the week ending June 24, 1916, when the death rate was 9.5 per thousand.

SAYS UNREST TO 'SINN FEIN IDEA FOR SELF ALONE'

It was Epworth League day at the Desplaines camp meeting yesterday. The Rev. Horace G. Smith gave the morning sermon and the Rev. A. T. Stephenson spoke in the afternoon.

Choosing as his text, "Love Your Neighbor as Yourself," the Rev. Mr. Smith said the spirit of today savored of Sinn Feinism, that is, "for ourselves alone," and this tendency is the cause of all the social unrest.

"Even in the national life is this Sinn Feinism found," he said. "Even in the slogan 'America for Americans' and similar patriotic phrases we find this disregard of others."

"It does not matter much," Mr. Stephenson said in his sermon, "what one possesses, but it does matter what use is made of his possessions."

He spoke of the apparent tendency away from religious forms, but said Christianity in reality was progressing rapidly.

The program today includes a morning service at 10 a. m., at which Bishop Thomas Nicholson will preach; the "love feast," at 9 a. m., under direction of the Rev. W. J. Hyde; a sermon by the Rev. W. J. Davidson at 1 p. m., and one by the Rev. R. L. Semans at 8 p. m. Bishop Nicholson will conduct the ministers' conferences throughout the week.

Maid and Friend Missing; Gems Also Disappear

Mary White, 17 years old, who was recently taken from a reformatory by Mrs. Dibrell P. Hynes and given employment in her home at 1519 Davis street, Evanston, as a maid, disappeared yesterday. At the same time Mrs. Hynes missed a $75 ruby ring, $200 worth of unset opals, and a suitcase. The police were asked also to look for Evelyn Benson, 13 years old, of 1823 Greenwood boulevard, Evanston. The White girl and Evelyn had been friends, and the police believe the older girl induced her to run away with her.

How Miss Sterling became a better file clerk—

She was a bright, clever girl and she was ambitious. But she had really never had a chance to make good.

She had taken the place of the regular file clerk who had left to get married. She had taken it without any special training, or in fact without any training at all. It had been hard to keep things running smoothly. Too many letters were being lost or misfiled.

One day Miss Sterling sat down to think it over. Finally, she made a decision. She was going to study filing—she was going to know more about it than anybody else in the office.

She went about it in the right way. She took a course at the Illinois School of Filing. She learned the fundamental principles that underlie all filing systems.

How the skies brightened! Miss Sterling wasn't guessing any more. She knew! There were no more lost letters—no impatient executives.

Naturally, everybody noticed the improvement in the Filing Department. Miss Sterling noticed it, too, in her Friday pay envelope.

Today she is Filing Supervisor and earning more than $30 a week.

She puts it this way:

"Every file clerk and in fact every girl who wants to better her position ought to study filing—just as a physician studies medicine or a lawyer studies law. The work is pleasant and it holds a wonderful future for bright, ambitious girls and women.

"The Illinois School of Filing is owned and managed by Library Bureau. They teach you not only the theory of filing, but also give a lot of actual practice in all kinds of filing systems.

"This school is located at 116 S. Michigan Ave., and the principal is Miss Gladys C. Bridges. Drop in to see her some day."

BOYS AND GIRLS WHO LEARN AND EARN HONORED

Achievement Class of County Gets Medals.

Garrett Triezenberg, a 16 year old graduate of the Evergreen Park school, is a hustling argument in favor of the back to the farm movement. In two years, by doing chores on a farm, selling the onion crop from one acre, and making a profit of $30 on a pig which he raised, Garret has saved $1,596.

Garrett was one of thirty-nine graduates of the new achievement classes of the Cook county public schools, who were awarded medals yesterday morning in the offices of County Superintendent Edward J. Tobin. All of them, boys and girls, have achieved distinction through their earning capacity at gardening, canning, sewing, music, and baking.

Following the awarding of the medals, the prize winners were given a luncheon at the Brevoort hotel and later visited a theater. The class was the first to graduate under Supt. Tobin's new system of combining practical and theoretical study in the county schools. The system provides for seven country life directors, who have charge of the students the year around, both at school and at home.

Girl Saves $1,200.

Tillie Guadagni, 17 years old and a graduate of the Stickney school at State road and Seventy-ninth street, has earned almost as much as Garrett. She boasts of a saving of $1,200, the result of canning.

"My father has given me a plot of ground in exchange for my help on the farm," she said. "I help him with the hoeing and planting and weeding, and in my spare time I take care of my 25 by 425 feet of tomatoes. In the winter I sew for the family."

Tillie is saving her money for a college education.

Takes Care of Family.

Elizabeth Vanderwall, 15 years old, of Blue Island, has no bank account, but she has turned to good advantage what she has learned in the achievement class.

"Mother was sick last winter," she said, "and I was able to take care of her and the family. I baked bread and cake and pies, besides doing all the rest of the cooking, so that mother didn't have to work a bit. Then I sew all the clothes for my two sisters, even their winter serge dresses. I make mother's house dresses, and I used to make my brother's waists. But he's 14 years old now, and I haven't learned how to make men's shirts yet."

The Medal Winners.

Those who received the eight star medals, which represent eight years of practical work, as well as eight years of study, are:

MASK TORN OFF, WANDERER IS CRIME ENIGMA

Woman Identifies His Slain Dupe.

playing his part of hero—perhaps exactly as he had planned it."

Wanderer was cool at the inquest, and now and then a half smile came to his straight, thin lips. But there was no smile in the eyes—a little too near together, those eyes, the psychiatrists say.

His only suggestion was that his confession be read to the jury. He talked freely with the newspaper men and calmly. He was sorry it happened, he said—and he might have been talking of anything else—but he was ready to be hanged. He picked up an undertaker's journal, smiled, and said he might as well pick out a swell casket while he had the chance.

Really, he wasn't a bad sort, he said. He wanted the newspaper men to understand that well. Not one of those fellows who gamble and carouse and lead their wives to divorce. Not a bit of it.

Nothing to pull off a little job like that. Nothing at all. He admitted he had no nerves. It was a good plan. Rather a stroke of genius getting the "poor bum" there to be killed, too.

But what's the use talking? If he has to hang, you'll see how calmly he can die. He's not afraid, he insists.

MOTHER'S GRIEF GREAT

Mrs. Eugenia Johnson, the mother of Mrs. Carl Wanderer, passed the most sorrowful day of her life yesterday.

The grief she felt when her daughter was killed was great, but, she said, it was easier to bear than the knowledge that Carl had killed her, had planned it in cold blood.

"I should never have believed it," she said, "if he had not confessed. If I had seen it with my own eyes I should not have believed."

She shuddered.

"Night after night I have seen them together, happy, loving, talking about the baby that was to be born within a little while. I loved them both very dearly.

"And after my darling was dead I tried to help him bear the blow. I would throw my arms about him. I would kiss him—him, her murderer! He seemed always to be greatly affected when I tried to comfort him.

"My heart ached for him. And now—O, how could he have done this thing? What possible motive was there? Why did he have to kill my daughter? He could have taken the money; he could have gone to the army; he could have done anything but this!"

"We are Christian people," she said. "We are taught to forgive those who have trespassed against us. Let the authorities prosecute if they must."

COWBOYS TOO ROUGH ON COWS, HUMANE MEN SAY

Obtain Arrest of Grant Park Showmen.

The ways of the west, particularly in the matter of cowboy etiquette, were questioned yesterday afternoon when warrants charging cruelty to animals were served on performers in the roundup show brought here to entertain the Elks.

GEORGE A. H. SCOTT. [Photo Matzene.]

George A. H. Scott, superintendent of the Illinois Humane society, signed the warrants which named "Tex" Austin, manager of the show, and John Doe, a steer rider, as the offenders. The warrants charge that the manner in which the westerners rode the bucking steers was in violation of the state laws preventing cruelty to animals.

The warrants were issued by Judge George B. Holmes.

Scott alleges that steers were "cruelly treated in the contests, and their shoulders broken in more than one instance."

"Tex" Austin claimed that what looked like hard treatment of the steers was only what they were used to. "If a steer is severely injured we immediately shoot him. But we're darn careful not to injure 'em, as they're worth too much," he said.

E. F. Caruthers, business manager of the show, said the charge was "funny."

At Chief Garrity's office it was said that, while the warrants had been served, "there's nothing that can be done to the cowboys."

Free 15 Film Operators After Sleuth Bomb Quiz

Fifteen motion picture operators seized by the police in a raid on their union headquarters, at 53 West Van Buren street, Friday night, were discharged yesterday when arraigned on the charge of disorderly conduct.

The police raided the place to get information regarding the throwing of stench bombs and breaking of glass in outlying theaters by an auto wrecking crew in a supposed effort to force owners to meet the new wage scale of the musicians, who are on strike for a 75 per cent increase.

The operators denied knowledge of the vandalism.

Shot in Legs; Accident by Her Husband, She Says

The Montrose hospital notified the police last night that a woman, shot in both legs, had been brought in by a man who hastened away. She is Mrs. Elizabeth Miller of 1827 Nelson street. She said she had been accidentally shot by her husband, August, as he was cleaning a gun. The police could not find Miller.

DEPARTING ELKS THANK CHICAGO FOR BIG TIME

Last of Visitors Go; Announce Prizes

The herd has disbanded. The rip-roaring goodfellow Elks have nearly completed their exodus from the city of their greatest convention. Last night E. C. Lewis, treasurer of the Chicago lodge, who has been in charge of the registration and information bureau, said the majority of the visitors had departed. The 1921 convention will be held in Los Angeles, Cal.

"Bill" J. Sinek received congratulations from many of the visitors before they left. "Bill" Sinek is exalted ruler of the Chicago lodge and largely responsible for the good time the delegates had. Mr. Sinek said he wished to express his gratitude to citizens of Chicago for the way they assisted in making it the greatest convention in the history of the order.

A complete list of the prize awards of the convention was announced yesterday. It follows:

Band contest—First, Dodge Bros.' Automobile band, Detroit, $650; second, Milwaukee Elks' band, $325.

Enoz Kills Moths

There is only one sure way of guarding against moth destruction—that is the killing of moth larvae and eggs. Moth balls, cedar chests, prepared bags, etc., do not do this. They are ineffective after the moth miller has once laid her eggs in the garment. Enoz Moth Liquid positively destroys every trace of moth infection. It is stainless and absolutely safe. Let us show you how it works.

PARTY LEADERS CAREFUL TO LET BONUS SLUMBER

Chance of Early Action Is Believed Gone.

Washington, D. C., July 10.—[Special.]—All chance of the passage of soldiers' bonus legislation next winter seems to have gone glimmering. Failure of the party platform to declare for the proposition seems to have deprived all hopes of favorable action by congress.

Supporters of the bonus bill had relied implicitly on the political convenience taking a stand on the subject. They had gone on the theory that political pressure from the ex-service men would be so strong that both parties would be sure to declare for some form of adjusted compensation.

Awaits Committee Action.

The soldiers' bonus bill as passed by the house a week before the recent adjournment is pending in the senate committee on finance. The committee has given the bill no consideration and may prefer to allow it to slumber without action during the coming session. Officers of the American Legion, however, are certain to agitate and probably will force the committee to report the bill to the floor of the senate.

Even in case the bill in some miraculous manner should get through the senate and a conference report is approved by both houses its veto by President Wilson is considered certain. The administration's view of the proposal has been made clear through a letter sent by Secretary of the Treasury Houston to the house ways and means committee flatly opposing any bonus legislation, and also by the attitude of the administration spokesman at San Francisco in the drafting of the platform.

Declare for Proper Treatment.

Both the Republican and Democratic platforms declare for proper treatment of the ex-service men, but both carefully avoid any specific mention of either the cash bonus scheme or any forms of adjusted compensation designed to aid those who suffered no wounds.

The Republican platform pledges the party "to discharge to the fullest the obligations which a grateful nation justly should fulfill in appreciation of the services rendered by its defenders on sea and land." This much of the plank in the Republican platform would appear to be broad enough to cover any form of bonus legislation. However, the plank goes on to declare that "liberal legislation for the care of the disabled and infirm and their dependents has ever marked Republican policy toward the soldier and sailor of all the wars in which our country has participated."

Money for Disabled.

The Democratic platform is along similar lines, but it is even stronger in its implication that the expenditure of money only for the care of the disabled and needy is justified at this time. The Democratic platform says:

"The government should treat with the utmost consideration every disabled soldier, sailor, or marine, whether his disability is due to wounds or to health impaired in service, and for the dependents of the brave men who die the government's greatest concern and highest bounty should be their requital. The fine patriotism, the heroic conduct of American soldiers, sailors, and marines constitute a sacred heritage of posterity, the worth of which can never be recompensed from the treasury."

The effect of both the Republican and Democratic platforms is to repudiate the policies of the party leaders in the house.

The action of the party conventions, both at Chicago and San Francisco, appears to have been a vindication for the minority among house members of both parties.

LAST CRUISE

Former Chief of Britain's Navy Is Dead.

LORD FISHER.

ADMIRAL FISHER, "DREADNAUGHTS' FATHER," IS DEAD

For Years Was Chief of British Navy.

LONDON, July 10.—The British navy today lost one of its most picturesque figures with the death of Admiral John Arbuthnot Fisher, baron of Kilverstone, admiral of the fleet, and former first sea lord of the admiralty.

The motto on his coat of arms, "Fear God and Dread Naught," was lived up to in his long career in the British navy. He was responsible for the building of the Dreadnaught and other battleships of like and larger class.

Admiral Fisher had been ill for some time. He underwent a surgical operation Friday evening. That was the direct cause of death. He received no anaesthetic, and was fully conscious to the end. A memorial service will be held in Westminster abbey Tuesday.

Starts Navy Career Early.

Lord Fisher was born in Ceylon Jan. 25, 1841, the son of an officer of a Highland regiment, and when 13 years old began his life career in the British navy.

From 1892 until 1904 he was lord of the admiralty and in the latter year became first sea lord, serving in that position for six years. During that time the British navy was almost made anew, about 150 ships being discarded as behind the times.

In 1910 he retired, but back he came in 1914 when the war with Germany broke out.

Taking up the job of first sea lord of the admiralty again in October of that year, he is credited with much of the planning that led to the bottling up of the German fleet.

Cabinet complications in 1915 led to his retirement from the first lordship. But his service to his country continued in various capacities.

His activities in a press controversy, in which he advocated a clean sweep of old officials as well as obsolete ships, earned him the name of "Scrap-the-Lot Fisher."

Admiral Fisher was married in 1866 and his wife lived until 1918. He is survived by a son and three daughters.

POWER COMPANY DISABLED.

Hazleton, Pa., July 10.—The plant of the Pennsylvania Light and Power company of the Harwood Electric company, was damaged by fire today when a lightning arrester blew out, causing the death of one man and a property loss estimated at $250,000.

FRANCIS BACKS TAX FEATURE OF CITY'S CAR PLAN

Charges Present Fares Are the Same Thing.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Commissioner of Public Works Charles R. Francis consented yesterday to make a statement regarding the mayor's traction plan. He also replied to a criticism of that plan by Walter L. Fisher. Mr. Francis is a member of the mayor's transportation commission.

He said the mayor's plan is to get legal authorization to do whatever is necessary and advantageous to have an adequate transportation system with a 5 cent fare.

The mayor's plan provides that any deficit may be paid from general taxation, as Mr. Fisher had pointed out, predicting the public will not stand for such taxation.

"Mr. Fisher has made a study of local transportation and his opinions are worthy of consideration," said Mr. Francis. The fact he was able only to make this one criticism of importance convinces me the mayor's plan is a good one.

"Now Paying Fare Tax."

"The answer to his criticism is that the people are now paying taxes, or the equivalent thereof, in the form of an excess over a proper street car fare. The people today are paying the cost of transportation, which we claim is 5 cents, plus all the cost of operation and interest on the investment—and considerably more. They are paying a profit to the stockholders. Under the mayor's plan that would be saved. They are paying on $75,000,000 assets which do not exist, as well as on a like amount which does exist. The payment is being now made in street car fares.

"If 5 cents will not foot the bill—although we feel certain it will—then under our plan taxes will pay the deficit, but there will not be as much to pay as under the present scheme. The people will save, anyway, taking that gloomy and in our opinion unwarranted view of it.

Cites Link Improvement.

"Incidentally, the people who ride on the street cars are now paying for the cost of the boulevard link and its maintenance in general taxes. Comparatively few of this class ever have an opportunity to ride over the link for pleasure or drive over it for profit. But because of this situation the street car riders are not complaining.

"Is it any more unfair that the large property owners, who benefit by the boulevard link, should aid in paying, by taxes, the deficit in the cost of transportation for those who ride upon the street cars, if there is ever a deficit, which we believe there will not be?"

Zone Plan Undecided.

Before the transportation commission on Friday Thomas Downs, consulting engineer, suggested fare zones. On that Mr. Francis explained his position.

"I had no intention of saying that the mayor's plan contemplates such zones," he said. "His plan is not a transportation plan. It is a plan to get legal authorization for the creation of a transportation district with five trustees in charge. These trustees will decide what the transportation plan shall be, whether there shall be subways, overhead cars, zones, or other features. All I intended to say to Mr. Downs was that the mayor's plan permits zones, but does not contemplate them nor provide for them.

"The mayor's transportation commission is not considering plans of transportation, but only a plan to get legal authorization to create a district and select the trustees, who, in turn, will decide all questions relating to transportation plans."

TRAINING, "NOT TOO MILITARY," IN FAVOR, KING SAYS

Veterans Opposed to Compulsion, Claim.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 10.—[Special.]—Representative King of Illinois, an opponent of compulsory military training, made public today a summary of replies received from nearly 750 war veterans who responded to a questionnaire on the subject. On the direct question, "Are you in favor of compulsory military training?" there were 316 affirmative and 409 negative replies.

Representative King, in summarizing the replies, said that the veterans of the world war will support military training if it is voluntary, does not interfere with education or work, court martial is eliminated, officers are "regular fellows," no Prussianism is tolerated, democracy prevails, and vocational and physical training are emphasized.

"Mild Form" Favored.

Mr. King said that many of those favoring universal training qualified their statements, urging that a mild form be introduced in schools and colleges and that the course occupy only a few weeks of the year. It was suggested that military training credits be required for graduation from high schools, normal schools, and colleges.

"Best Health Builder."

Some strong arguments in favor of universal training were received in some of the replies.

"It is the best health builder ever known," said one of the war veterans.

"We fought militarism in Germany" was the most popular argument used against universal training.

Wife of Coolidge Rival Killed in Airplane Fall

Salisbury Beach, Mass., July 10.—Mrs. Richard H. Long of Framingham, wife of the Democratic candidate for governor last year, and Gordon L. Groah of Lynn, an aviator, were fatally injured in an airplane accident here today. Gaston Cornet of Pittsfield, mechanician for Groah, was severely hurt.

The plane, in which Mrs. Long was a passenger and Groah the pilot, was wrecked on the beach in sight of several thousand persons.

Mrs. Long and Groah died in the Anna Jaques hospital at Newburyport.

Dr. Hough Will Preach in England During Summer

Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, president of Northwestern university, who recently resigned, will sail with his mother for Europe from Quebec on July 14. In a letter received by an Evanston friend yesterday he stated that he will occupy a pulpit in Birmingham, England, part of the summer and will attend the World's Conference on Faith and Order in Geneva, Switzerland from Aug. 12 to 26.

Perspiring Sailors May Look, Not Leap, in Lake

Residents of Lake Forest objected to the jackies plunging into the lake naked. A provost guard is now stationed at the beach.

DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through

Chicago Preference Is Swinging to the Dort

No greater triumph has come to the Dort than this steady rise in popularity in Chicago.

Naturally we are intensely proud of the way the Dort is winning Chicago's good will.

The circle of Dort owners is widening and extending itself with a persistency that can be accounted for only by the very unusual value that the car does represent.

It is an interesting situation because, as you know, buyers today have become exceedingly motor wise.

Furthermore, Chicago is the very heart of the world's greatest automobile market.

So this Dort popularity in Chicago can be construed as nothing short of undeniable proof that the car is actually a remarkable investment.

It is, first of all, an alert, agile, graceful car that handles with delightful ease.

Unusually long springs, a staunch frame and restful upholstery combine to make it a fatigue-less car to drive.

The simply designed, powerful Dort motor pulls with smoothness and delivers full power to the wheels all the time.

The Dort construction throughout is so accessible that service can be given any part very readily and inexpensively.

The entire assembly of the Dort chassis reflects the deliberate effort of the Dort engineers to keep operative and upkeep expense at the very lowest point.

Whether you are mechanically inclined or not, you cannot help appreciating the Dort lubrication system.

There are no small pipes to clog. No hidden grease cups to slip your memory.

Every part of the mechanism can be oiled very easily and quickly.

In the engine there is a plunger pump shooting oil right where it is needed.

Connecting rod scoops keep a constant oil-mist thrown on pistons, cam shaft, connecting rod bearings and tappets.

Although technically and actually the Dort is a "light car" it is surprisingly big and strong where weight and strength are desirable.

And this weight is scientifically balanced and apportioned so that great durability is achieved without affecting its economy in oil, gas and tires.

It is known among owners everywhere as a wonderfully "slow-wearing" car.

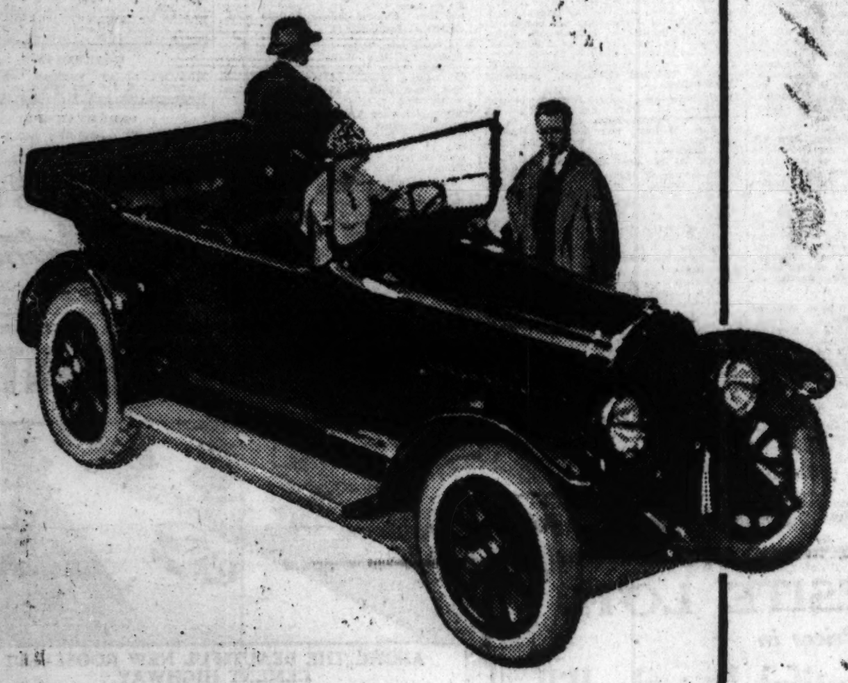
In connection with the accessibility of the Dort it is worth observing that the motor and transmission are removable without disturbing the body.

All frictional units are adjustable. All brake adjustments within reach.

As you check off one by one the points of Dort construction and Dort performance you cannot help but be impressed.

Today, with many good cars on the market, the Dort stands out as an exceptional car and an uncommonly desirable investment for you.

Back of its national reputation for long and loyal service at a very low cost per mile is the satisfactory experience of more than 60,000 owners.



With Every Dort Goes Geyler Service

The brand and stamp of service assured the Dort owner in Chicago is typical of Louis Geyler, the man.

It is broad-gauged, expert service delivered according to promise, and with courtesy.

The Geyler service establishment is ranked as one of the finest in the country.

And yet Geyler service cannot be measured by mere thousands of feet of floor space. It is a bigger thing than that.

Men of long practical experience head the department and behind them is a hand-picked body of veteran mechanics.

VICTORY BY YARD GOES TO BOLDEN IN MILE TRYOUT

Beats Langer in Feature Swimming Event.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

By the narrow margin of one yard Duane Bolden, former distance swimmer of Great Lakes, but now compsting under Illinois A. C. colors, defeated Ludy Langer, Hawaiian star, in the National A. U. one mile championship, one of the feature events of the first batch of Olympic swimming tryouts conducted by the Chicago Athletic association in the Lincoln park lagoon yesterday. The remaining events will be decided today at 3 o'clock.

MICHAEL McDERMOTT. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The struggle which the two great swimmers put up to earn the right to represent America in the world's games brought forth rounds of cheers from the 20,000 persons gathered around the lagoon. Owing to the perfect announcing system the spectators were given the names of the contestants. Each had his admirers, and every time they turned in the 100 meter pool a burst of applause greeted them as they straightened away on the next length.

Langer Goes Into Lead.

The pair went into the lead soon after getting the gun, but at the quarter mile Langer, with the tricolor club star by three yards. Bolden went to his task in the next quarter and at the end of the first half was led by a scant yard. His time for the distance was 12:22.

Clement Browne, the C. A. A. star, was in fourth position, with Kahele, the Hawaiian from Great Lakes, in third place. On the third quarter Bolden increased his lead to five yards, while Kahele pulled away from Browne and Leo Giebel of the New York A. C. ended up into fourth place. Langer, however, had a lot left and started to run on Bolden during the last quarter mile.

The pair put forth all the energy they had left, but Bolden was able to stave off the Hawaiian's challenge and went under the line a winner by a yard. Kahele was third and Giebel fourth. The winner's time was 25:26. Langer went under the line in 25:26 4-5, Kahele in 26:01 4-5, and Giebel in 26:15.

Breast Stroke to McDermott.

The next best race was the 200 meter breast stroke, in which Mike McDermott of Great Lakes, who swam for the Illinois A. C. before going into the service, defeated a classy field, including G. H. Taylor of the C. A. A., national champion. The Turk as McDermott is known in swimming circles, lost the national championship to Taylor in 1919 after winning it for nine consecutive years.

In yesterday's race McDermott led from start to finish. He swam in his old form and at the halfway mark was a yard in the lead. As the swimmers straightened out for the beat to the finish Jack Howell of the Oakland A. C. of California challenged the Turk, who was compelled to put forth all he had. The Californian finished strong but started his sprint too late, as McDermott touched the dock at least a yard to the good.

Duke an Easy Victor.

Duke Kahanamoku, the great Hawaiian short distance swimmer, was an easy winner of the National A. A. U. 100 yard championship, which he won in :55. Three heats were necessary to reduce the field to six starters for the final. Pua Kealoha, another member of the Hawaiian team, took the second heat in :54 3-5, the fastest time of the day.

In the finals Duke had things his own way, although his teammate and Norman Ross of the I. A. C. threatened to give him a race. The trio swam on even terms for the first half of the distance, but in the last fifty yards Kahanamoku, by use of his powerful sweet stroke, forged to the front and won by four yards.

Perry McGillivray, the great swimmer of the Illinois A. C., yesterday announced he will be unable to get away from his business to go to the games.

100 yard swim, National A. A. U. championship, first heat—Won by W. Harris, Hawaii; Herbert Topp, C. A. A., second. Time, :58 1-5.

Third heat—Won by Kahanamoku, Hawaii; J. K. Gillman, Great Lakes, second. Time, :56.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

In the Wake of the News

BOXING IN ILLINOIS.

THE American Legion stands ready to sponsor a boxing law in Illinois.

The American Legion comprises 700 active posts and 60,000 paid up members drawn from the more than 300,000 ex-service men in the state. It is organized. Politicians have a habit of giving heed to requests from any body of 300,000 organized voters.

Heretofore, proponents of boxing have had practically no organization, while the reformers were organized, and the reformers usually won. With the American Legion in the field the situation will be different.

The legion wants a clean sport, but not a pink tea, bill. With that viewpoint, all lovers of boxing agree. Clean sport does not mean prohibition of commercialized boxing. Revenue is necessary to induce the best exponents of boxing to perform, just as it is necessary to pay high salaries to the best ball players.

A clean sport bill should curb the crooked promoter and manager. It should provide a strong governing body. It should encourage amateur boxing, and not discourage professional boxing. That, we think, is what the American Legion wishes.

The present Illinois situation is a joke. Boxing is not allowed in Chicago. It is tolerated in several other cities, in the state by acquiescence of local officials, yet it is against the law. Chicago fistic followers may undergo the discomforts of crowded trains to Milwaukee, Racine, Kenosha, Benton Harbor, or East Chicago, and view flying maulies, but not at home. Verily, the ways of moralists are past finding out.

YANKEE NET TEAM DEFEATS FRANCE; BRITISHERS NEXT

EASTBOURNE, England, July 10.—The American Davis cup tennis team today won the right to continue in the fight for the trophy. Johnston and Tilden, the American pair, defeated their French rivals, Gobert and Laurentz, in straight sets in doubles, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2.

The victory gave the American team three straight matches, eliminating the Frenchmen. Johnston yesterday won his singles match with Gobert, and Tilden defeated Laurentz. The victory in the doubles today clinched the match for the Americans without the necessity of playing either of the two remaining singles matches on the schedule.

Meet British on Thursday.

The Americans will meet the British team July 15 to decide which shall play the Dutch team, the winner of this last match earning the right to play the cup holders, the Australasian team, for the trophy.

The Americans won the toss today and Johnston opened the service, winning the first game. Gobert followed and equalized the games after a long struggle in which deuce was called eight times. Johnston's forehand driving was noteworthy. Tilden took his own service with fine deliveries and great cross court volleying.

Fine Game by Johnston.

With the Yankees ahead, 4—1, Gobert, again serving magnificently, secured the sixth game, in which the lobbing of the Americans was short and some drives were neted by Johnston. The French pair, however, failed to secure another game, Tilden scoring on his service and Johnston on perfect lobbing and fine volleying.

The first four games of the second set went against the server. Then Johnston, serving, got the fifth game. He played wonderfully, scoring with a sensational half volley, another lob volley, and several smart shoulder height volleys. With Tilden's next service game America led, 5—3. Then Laurentz served a love game, but Johnston did likewise, taking the set.

Johnston "Kills." Ball.

In the final set the Americans showed superiority in all departments. Johnston played wonderfully, his forehand drives frequently killing the ball, while when serving he got right up to the net and punched volleys with tremendous power.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

Who is the season's greatest big league ball player?

The Answers.

P. F. LA VOIE, 4956 Washington boulevard, corset salesman—I think that for all around fine ball playing Eddie Collins, Sox second baseman, is the best so far showing.

FRANK J. O'BRIEN, 4754 West End avenue, automobile salesman—Ty Cobb, Detroit's outfielder, is the best player to my notion.

HOWARD CHICOINE, 1715 West Monroe street, automobile dealer—Bill Killefer is the best all around man the big league has produced in a long time.

CHARLES REYNOLDS, 805 North Larramie avenue, investigator—Ty Cobb is the best player in the big leagues. Others may beat him in some respects, but for being good at anything he does he beats them all.

C. FRANK BERG, 326 West Sixty-third street, men's furnishings—Walter Johnson, Washington American pitcher, is the best bet for an all-star big league man.

MEASURING OF RESOLUTE'S HULL IS COMPLETED

New York, July 10.—Measuring the hull of the America's cup defender Resolute was completed today and the yacht was taken from dry dock and towed to Sandy Hook. The sail area measurements will be taken as soon as possible and it is expected the defender will be given a tuning up spin early in the week.

The yacht's hull, which was scraped and polished during its stay in dry dock, was protected against fouling from oil during the trip down the bay by heavy canvas hung along the sides.

Measurement of Shamrock IV., challenger for the cup, probably will be completed Monday. The ratings probably will not be announced before Wednesday.

Women's Swimming Mark for Elthelda Bleibtrey

New York, July 10.—A world's record of 1:12 3-5 for the women's 100 meter free style swim, outdoors, was set today by Elthelda Bleibtrey of the New York Women's Swimming association in the Olympic final tryout at Manhattan Beach. Her time bettered the record of 1:16 1-5 held jointly by Fanny Durack of Australia and Charlotte Boyle of the Women's Swimming association.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 10.—It is doubtful if a regular major league club could have scored a run on Red Faber today. The poor, helpless Athletics never had a chance, and as Red's mates were in another of their frequent batting moods, the Sox captured an easy contest, 6 to 0.

All told the Sox poled sixteen blows. Six of them were two baggers and one was a triple. A lot of them were wasted, but there never was any doubt about the Sox winning after they scored a run in the opening inning. Rolly Naylor, alleged to be the star hurler now of Mack's kids, was on the slab, but he wasn't starring. It's pretty hard for a fellow to star with such a bunch behind him. Mr. Naylor must do his starring in exhibition games or something.

Outfielders Worn Out.

Naylor's work compared to that of Faber looked awful. In the ninth inning, when it looked as if some one on Mack's team might get hurt, Naylor was yanked and another unknown named Rommell came forth and got the side out. The Sox didn't care much about staying away from supper any longer anyhow. Connie's outfielders were getting worn out chasing drives. They always seem to be in the wrong spot. One wonders how they can do it so constantly.

The superb pitching of Faber was most pleasing to Boss Gleason and his boys. Not since 1917 has the Cascade boy looked any faster. He was throwing a lot of spitters, too, because the boys who were trying to swat him were bounding dead ones in front of the plate or bounding feeble grounders to the infielders. They managed to collect five hits from a generous official scorer. Three of the five were awful scratches.

Jackson Leads Wreckers.

General Joe Jackson was chief of the wrecking crew today with three singles and a double in five attempts. Eddie Collins got a two-bagger and a triple, while John Collins and Weaver poled a single and a double each and Leibold knocked out a pair of singles. The defense of the Sox wasn't quite up to standard outside of Faber's hurling, but his hurling was so good that a little thing like an occasional error didn't even bother him.

Regardless of the errors, the Sox displayed the same fighting spirit that has characterized their playing all season. Boss Gleason was quoted in a paper here as saying the Sox are bound to win the pennant. He said there isn't any other team hustling as hard nor any other with as much class or as strong pitching.

The Kid predicts the Sox will go into first place in about three weeks and stay in first place to the finish. After they have finished a tough six game series with the Yankees, starting the latter part of next week, one will be able to tell whether Gleason is right or wrong.

NOTES OF THE SOX

Philadelphia, Pa., July 10.—[Special.]—Tomorrow will be a day of rest for the Sox. Some of them, however, are going fishing.

Faber had a lot of stuff and plenty of speed in the game. He looked as good as he did back in 1917.

Umpire Connolly was banged about by foul tips all through the game. Once a hot one got him on the foot and Tommy took about a minute to recover.

A bunch of boys from Wilmington, Del., were up to see the game and brought with them an Elks' charm as a present for Claude Williams, who is one of them in the winter months.

Felsch might have poled his eleventh homer in the fourth if Walker hadn't turned in a great catch. He stabbed the ball with one hand just before it went over the wall into the bleachers.

A crowd of about 8,000 was present. It wasn't much for present big league conditions, but one wonders how that many could be interested in baseball here with a team like the Athletics on the field.

NOTES OF THE CUBS

New York once more today.

Friberg went into left field after Deal took Robertson's place at bat in the seventh. Not a Giant hit a fly to left all day, and the Cubs did not knock a fly in that direction until the ninth, then Twombly and Terry filed to Burns.

Frisch gave a demonstration of great pluck in the seventh. Merkle slashed a grounder at him and the ball struck the fielder in the groin. Staggering with pain, Frisch recovered the ball and threw out Merkle at first base, then collapsed. He was down and out for five minutes or more before he could resume his job.

The Cub camp followers who infest the territory back of the plate need to read the rules. A wrangle resulted in the eighth, when Herzog drew a pass and the fourth ball was a wild pitch. Somebody not in the game picked up the ball as it hit the stand and tossed it back to Smith. Herzog reached second in spite of that, but the Giants made a loud yelp because of the interference. Herzog would have made second anyway, but the interference might have held him on first.

MAN O' WAR SETS NEW TURF MARK IN DWYER STAKE

New York, July 10.—Man o' War, the Glen Riddle Farm's champion 3 year old, made a new American record in winning the Dwyer stakes at one and one-eighth miles over the Aqueduct racetrack today. He ran the distance in 1:49 1-5, or one-fifth of a second better than the previous record made by Borrow.

In winning his fifth race this year Man o' War had only one competitor, John P. Grier. He did not have an easy time of it.

The horses ran head and head almost the entire distance until rounding into the stretch, where both jockeys went to the whip and a furious drive ensued. John P. Grier held his own for 100 yards and then began to weaken. Showing his gameness, Man o' War gradually forged ahead and was two lengths to the good at the finish.

Jaffe Takes Lead in Master Chess Tourney

Atlantic City, N. J., July 10.—Charles Jaffe of New York went into the lead in the third round of the chess masters' tournament today with a total of 2½ points won and ½ point lost.

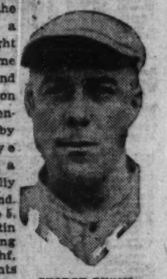
BY I. E. SANBORN.

After spotting the Giants eight runs yesterday before they turned a wheel themselves, the Cubs made a strong uphill fight for the third game of the set and might have won out but for a sensational stab by Larry Doyle which wrecked a determined rally in the fifth round. Final score, 8 to 5.



GEORGE BURNS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Speed Martin started pitching against Art Nehf, but the Giants had about as much respect for soviet Russia has for the league of nations. They pounded him into the shower bath with only one man out in the first inning, three runs having scored before Manager Mitchell lanked the string.

Kelly Poles Home Run.

Nick Carter went to Martin's relief, but before he could check the rampant Giants they had added a run in the first and piled up three more in the second by clean hard hitting. Nick stopped them in the third, but a home run by Kelly with the bases empty in the fourth raised the Giant total to three-quarters of a dozen runs.

Meantime the Cubs had been soft in the hands of Southpaw Nehf, but in the fifth his pals deserted him. Errors by Young and Bancroft upset the former Terre Haute star. Young muffed a pop fly for O'Farrell, then kicked the ball so far that Bob made three bases on it. That is considerable kick if you know about Bob's speed. Bancroft juggled a roller which gave Carter a life and let O'Farrell score. Nehf lost his equipoise at that and passed Twombly and Hollocher, filling the bases with nobody out.

Terry's Single Scores Two.

Terry spanked a single over second which scored Carter and Twombly. Merkle lined a sizzler to right, but Young pinched it on the fly. Robertson, who had fanned twice, hit a weak bounder to Nehf, forcing Hollocher at third, but Paskert came through with a single on which Terry registered.

Herzog tried to keep the pot boiling with a high drive over Doyle's head, but the former Cub leaped in the air, reached the pill with his mitted fist, and pulled it down. The force of the hit sent Doyle flat on his face, but he held the ball, and the rally was over.

Hendrix Finishes on Slab.

Carter held the Giants back after the fourth until he was taken out to let Tom Daly hit into a double play for him in the sixth and Hendrix finished without letting the enemy cross the plate again.

Nehf recovered quickly after the torrential fifth and allowed the Cubs only one more run. That was produced by Terry's double and Deal's single in the seventh, Chuck being sent to bat for Robertson, who had been helpless in front of Nehf's benders.

WHY IS GEORGES RUSHING HOME? ASK THE STORK

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—Just why Georges Carpentier, European heavy champion, made such a hasty exit from this country became known just prior to the sailing of the French liner Lorraine, on which the fighter and his wife left today for Havre.

M. Georges is not afraid of the mighty Jack Dempsey. No, such is not the case. Insistent questions by reporters had the "wonder man" perplexed, but Jacques Curley, his American manager, came to the rescue.

"Mrs. Carpentier is about to become a mother," explained the curly haired Jacques. "Therefore Georges is rushing her back to her homeland—to Dieppe, a coast resort near Paris.

"No, he's not going back to spend the $122,000 he made here. He's going to use that in an effort to rehabilitate his coal mines in Lens, which were destroyed during the world war. Georges lost about $500,000 there."

KERNEL COOTIE—SAFETY FIRST.

HOME RUN NO. 26 FOR "BABE" RUTH AS YANKEES WIN

Peck's Sacrifice Defeats Tigers in 10th, 7-6.

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—Babe Ruth's twenty-sixth homer, a drive deep into the right field bleachers, gave the Yankees a margin of one tally that enabled them to beat the Tigers, 7 to 6, in ten innings here this afternoon. The Tigers went into the ninth inning three runs behind. With two down, Hale batted for Dauss and doubled. Bush singled. Ainsmith, batting for Jones, tripled, and Cobb singled—three runs.

The Yanks filled the bases in their half of the tenth and Peckinpaugh, batting for Mays, brought the winning run in on a sacrifice fly. The game was marked by long clouting. Besides the twenty-sixth homer of Ruth, Bodie, Pratt, and Veach hit for the circuit.

Cincinnati, O., July 10.—Boston and Cincinnati divided a double header today. Oeschger pitched well in the first game, allowing the champions only three hits, Boston winning, 1 to 0. Luque also pitched well, Boston scoring its one run on a triple by Powell and a wild pitch.

LEONARD CROWN NEARLY LOST BY SLACK TRAINING

White Held Cheaply Until Tip Wises Champion.

BY RAY PEARSON.

No championship battle in many years has demonstrated the foolishness of a contestant entering the ring out of condition more than that last Monday at Benton Harbor, between Champion Benny Leonard and Charley White, his challenger, of Chicago.

The fact that Leonard won by knocking out White in the ninth round doesn't enter the contention, for it is now a matter of history that Leonard had a narrow escape from being dethroned as champion by the same method he himself employed to win the bout.

One of the things that a champion likes to do is to make the dear public believe he always has taken care of himself and that he always is in condition to put up a winning fight. But now read about Benny Leonard.

Looks at Bout as Pink Tea.

When Benny was matched with White he really did not consider the Chicagoan of any serious account. Always confident in his ability to take care of himself, he looked upon White as an easy proposition. He had the impression that he could dispose of Charley at almost any time he wanted.

At least, Leonard did not think until four days before the contest with White that he needed to be in his best condition to win. But Champion Benny was tipped off exactly four days before last Monday that White was in wonderful shape, that he was slipping over the left hook which has made him famous as a ring man, with wonderful force and precision.

Sees His Mistake.

Now Leonard, who everybody knows is a mighty smart fellow and capable of thinking for himself, saw his mistake, for he was overweight and far from condition to battle an opponent who ranks in the dangerous class.

What did Leonard do? He hopped right down to the tough grind in his training camp at Eastman Springs, and did everything possible to get himself fit for tough opposition. But four days isn't much—isn't enough, by any means, for a scrapper to condition himself. Benny did take off a few pounds, but the fact that he weighed 137½ pounds is ample indication of the fact he was not "right."

Won't Be Caught Again.

To those who are aware of this, the information will not be a big surprise, for Leonard learned too late that he wasn't entering a pink tea at the Benton Harbor arena. The chances are that he will not be caught napping again in this way, because he is an astute young man who makes it a business to take advantage of the errors of others. It is a lead pipe cinch that he will profit by what happened when he matched his right cross against White's left hook.

Think over what happened with White and it is not hard to believe that Champion Benny Leonard, who really is one of the greatest champions that ever entered a ring to battle in a lightweight contest, will never "take a chance" again. Imagine a fellow whom the champion labeled as a soft mark knocking him through the ropes in the fifth round with a left hook crack on the jaw.

It's hard to imagine, but it is all true, and Leonard will never forget it.

TENNIS EXPERTS START TOURNEY FOR CLAY HONORS

ates, from Coast, Shows Speed at Start.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Local tennis players battled in elimination tests in most of the first day's events of the annual national clay court championships which began yesterday afternoon at the South Side tennis club. While several of the out of town stars were on the grounds, they were not drawn for matches until today, and still more of the visiting racket wielders will not appear until tomorrow.

Wallace Bates of Berkeley, Cal., captain of the University of California's intercollegiate championship tennis team, showed that he will have to be reckoned with in the tournament by winning in the second round from A. M. Franklin, local player, 6—1, 6—0. Bates employed a hard forehand service, and picked up numerous points with a pretty backhand chop stroke. He drew a bye in the first round.

Peter J. Peel Victor.

One third round match was played, J. A. Graves of Chicago winning from J. A. Perfecto, a Filipino student in this city, 8—6, 6—0. Two club rivals, both of the South Side organization, met in a sharp contest in the first round, Peter J. Peel, the soccer authority, winning it from F. T. O'Brien, 4—6, 7—5, 14—15, default.

C. F. Geiger of Niagara Falls, N. Y., was eliminated in the first round by A. Lipman, a Chicago high school player, 6—1, 6—1. J. H. Van Leeuwaarden, who entered unaffiliated with any American club, having played in Holland and other European countries, found himself unfamiliar with the hard court style of play here and dropped his match in two love sets, to W. A. Painter, Chicago.

Hayes and Burdick Win.

In an exhibition doubles match, Walter T. Hayes and Ralph H. Burdick of Chicago defeated Alex Squair of Chicago and Edmund Levey of Berkeley, Cal., 4—6, 6—2, 6—2. The winners are western doubles champions, and after dropping the first set, ran through the second and third without great diccuity, theis game being marked by snappy volleying.

Another doubles exhibition is booked for 5 o'clock this afternoon, with Ralph Burdick of Chicago and Vincent Richards of New York opposing Wallace Bates and Edmund Levey of Berkeley, Cal. Summaries:

FIRST ROUND.

Harris, Chicago, defeated M. H. Burlingame, Chicago, 6—1, 6—3; J. D. Sheline, Chicago, defeated O. R. Seiter, Chicago, 8—6, 6—3.

THIRD ROUND.

J. A. Graves, Chicago, defeated J. A. Perfecto, Chicago, 8—6, 6—0.

In order to move the play ahead in the congested first and second rounds, officials last night announced local players would have to report for their contests this morning at 10 and 10:30 o'clock. Those with first round pairings will be expected to play that round this morning and the second round in the afternoon.

Bobby Jones Wins Title in Southern Golf Play

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 10.—Robert T. (Bobby) Jones of Atlanta, runner-up in last year's national amateur tournament, won the southern golf championship today, defeating Ewing Watkins of Chattanooga, 11 and 10. The morning round was made by the young Atlanta player in 69, breaking the course record and finishing 9 up on Watkins. Par for the course is 71 and Jones got birdies on four holes and scored par on only two. The afternoon round was played in a driving rain which made golf of the brand displayed in the first round impossible.

SETS NEW RECORD IN FINAL U. S. OLYMPIC DECATHLON TRYOUT

New York, July 10.—A new American record for the national decathlon competition—7,022 points—was established today in the Olympic final tryout by Brutus Hamilton of the University of Missouri. The former record of 6,858 was made by Alma Richards of Ogden, Utah, at San Francisco in 1915.

Hamilton, who won the national pentathlon championship here last Sunday, led a field of seventeen contestants in the decathlon tryout. Everett L. Bradley, University of Kansas, who finished second in today's test, also beat the former record with a score of 6,965. Following are the next six leaders with their point scores:

Robert Legendre, Georgetown university, 6,587.
Harry Goelitz, Illinois A. C., Chicago, 6,461.
Lieut. Eugene L. Vidal, U. S. A., 6,430.
Everett Ellis, Syracuse university, 6,217.
William Yount, Los Angeles A. C., 6,064.
Harold A. Jewett, Cornell university, 6,028.

In addition to the decathlon, there were two other Olympic tryouts—the national 3,000 meter steeplechase and the 10,000 meter walk. The chase was won by P. J. Flynn, Paulist A. C., New York, in 9:58 1-5. Joseph Pearman won the walk in 49:08 after William Plant, national champion, had dropped out within three laps of the finish. Plant fell on the track from heat prostration, but it is understood will be a member of the American team of walkers.

CHAMPION COACH QUITS MICHIGAN FOR ILLINI NINE

Carl Lundgren Returns to His Alma Mater.

Urbana, Ill., July 10.—[Special.]—Carl Lundgren is coming back to Illinois to coach the baseball team which he helped to pitch to its first championship just twenty years ago.

Since 1914 Lundy has successfully coached the University of Michigan nine and his relations with the Wolverines have been of the pleasantest, but his alma mater needed him.

CARL LUNDGREN.

George Huff, after twenty-four years of coaching, in which he had won eleven championships and tied for another, had retired as baseball coach. Potsy Clark, who tutored the Illini nine this season, resigned to become head football coach at Michigan Agricultural college.

Lundgren is spending the summer helping Branch Rickey with the St. Louis Cardinals, but in September will come to Illinois to become a member of the coaching staff that Director Huff has gathered.

Lundgren's name is permanently linked with Illinois' first successes on the diamond. He was a pitcher on the Illini teams of 1899, 1900, 1901, and 1902. The teams of 1900 and 1902 were western champions and Lundy's pitching was a big factor.

In 1902 as captain Lundgren led the famous Illini nine that invaded the east after cleaning up the west.

WOODS AND WATERS

BY LARRY ST. JOHN.

MORE CASTING GOSSIP.

IN bait casting the beginners' big problem is thumbing the line. Some pressure must be kept on the spooled line while the bait is going out; if the thumb is lifted entirely the line will overrun and a back lash or "bird nest" results.

When the novice experiences this once or twice he usually goes to the other extreme and retards the spool, so that the cast is a puny affair of ten or fifteen feet. The big idea is to keep some, but not much, thumb pressure on the revolving reel spool, and nothing but practice will teach the thumb to do its part.

These short casts directly at the water can be overcome a great deal if the caster will strive to get some height to his cast; if he will imagine that he must cast over the top of a high fence standing ten feet or so in front of him. This will induce him to give a little upward toss in his cast and when this is accomplished his troubles become beautifully less.

Striving to make long casts is the root of all evil in learning bait casting, and that is why some bait casters of experience never really learned to make a nice cast.

After the novice has mastered the back lash and can make casts of forty feet, the next stage is a quick retrieve, a stage of the game that some casters never achieve. Some do not realize its importance, but more never master it because they think that long distance casting is the chief end of man when he gets a casting rod in his hand.

As a result they let the lure travel as far as the corned beef and cabbage behind the cast will send it. Instead he should check the cast by a quick downward pressure of the thumb, which will make the line straighten without a bit of slack in it; then a little twitch to the left as he shifts the rod to the left hand, preliminary to reeling in, will keep the line taut and assures a hooked fish if one rises.

A quick retrieve also gets more strikes and prevents tangling of terminal tackle. Those who cast lures made up of several connected pieces like a wire leader, spinner, fly and pork strip, for example, can tell by the number of tangles they get whether or not they are retrieving quickly enough.

The pike, or so-called pickerel, of middle western waters is a fish of varying qualities. Ordinarily when taken from warm, weedy places, his fight lacks spirit and his flavor does not compensate for the generous quantity of fine bones he packs in his bosom. At other times and places he will strike with a great how-de-do and will really put up a fight—we have even had them leap beautifully on a slack line—but in most cases the "pick" does his best fighting after you get him into the boat.

Whether he fights well or poorly, however, there is one good feature about him that can be depended upon. We refer to his gullet. Gullet is the white tough skin on a fish's "chin," and no gullet equals that from our friend Spota, the pickerel.

When father was a boy, pickerel gullet was the favorite lure for casting and trolling, and it is just as good now. Hooked on behind a spoon or spinner it makes a dandy lure for bass, and it will last for a day or more of hard casting, being tougher than pork rind, and not so easily out by the weeds. So when you catch a pickerel, when you prefer to catch a bass, cut out his gullet and consider yourself lucky—it can be carried in the pork bottle.

Bait casters as a class put too much dependence on the rated pounds test of a casting line. Most casting troubles can be blamed on heavy lines, which have a tendency to slow up the cast and to back lash on slight provocation. At Catalina and other places they catch fish weighing a hundred pounds or more on 9 thread line, testing two pounds to the thread.

Of course they do not have to fight their fish in cluttered up places, as is often the case in fresh water fishing, but it shows what can be done with a comparatively light line. The twenty and twenty-four pound test line represent one extreme and the cotton thread the other.

A certain bait manufacturer, who is a good bait caster, recommends a line testing seven pounds, and he darkens and waterproofs the last two feet of it by putting it in waterproof shoe dressing.

Mostly because of its lack of durability this is too light a line for ordinary bait casting, but one testing ten or twelve pounds will hold about anything that swims in fresh water, and how beautifully such a line casts! Once he tries such a line a caster is not likely to go back to the heavier ones except for special occasions.

Exmoor Club to Hold Open Tourney July 22-24

Believing that Chicago's fame in golf was due to the young players who a few years ago had plenty of competition, the Exmoor club will hold an open tournament July 22 to 24. To make room for this the members cheerfully consented to postpone their annual invitation event. The tournament will be open to players associated with the U. S. G. A. and the Western Golf association who have a rating of 2 or less. Chick Evans and Robert Gardner already have promised to play, and the Exmoor officials will endeavor to get the cream of the western talent.

New Mitchell

$1750 F.O.B. Racine

Save $500 or more

The New Mitchell offers sensational under-pricing

THIS is an appeal to sanity in motor-car buying, as in other buying. It is an effort to induce you to make price comparisons before you decide upon which car you want to own.

The New Mitchell has already won its place because of new-day style and dependable mechanics. No car offers its new-day lines. No car of like price—or considerably more—affords finer performance nor longer lasting newness.

So we speak here exclusively of price. We make it the main consideration. Other considerations, while tremendously important, become secondary to money value.

New-way manufacturing

THE Mitchell price policy has always been conservative. Mitchell has always sought to produce the finest possible car for the lowest possible price.

The whole Mitchell organization is imbued with this idea. Countless savings are made by building the Mitchell complete in one factory. Even bodies and tops and the like, which are ordinarily bought outside.

Mitchell not only gains a unified car from a designing standpoint, but all the profits are saved that would have to be paid to outside parts makers and later included in the price of the car.

If this New Mitchell were built the old way its price would have to be at least $500 more. That would be inevitable.

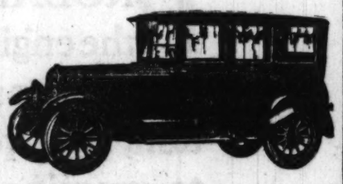
We challenge comparisons

THE one way for you to satisfy yourself that the New Mitchell is underpriced is to make price comparisons. Familiarize yourself with Mitchell superiorities. Then examine all cars of like price and up to $1000 more. Compare them with this New Mitchell.

See if you can duplicate Mitchell performance. See if you can find a car of such smart appearance. See if you can find such fine finish, such complete equipment, such roominess.

Make this investigation with the idea of saving money. But make no compromise in quality. Take the New Mitchell as your standard, and try to find all it offers for $1750. We are convinced that the New Mitchell will be your choice.

Visit our display now. Get all the facts. Then make your comparisons. If you agree that the New Mitchell affords the most for your money, then place your order early, so as to insure early delivery.

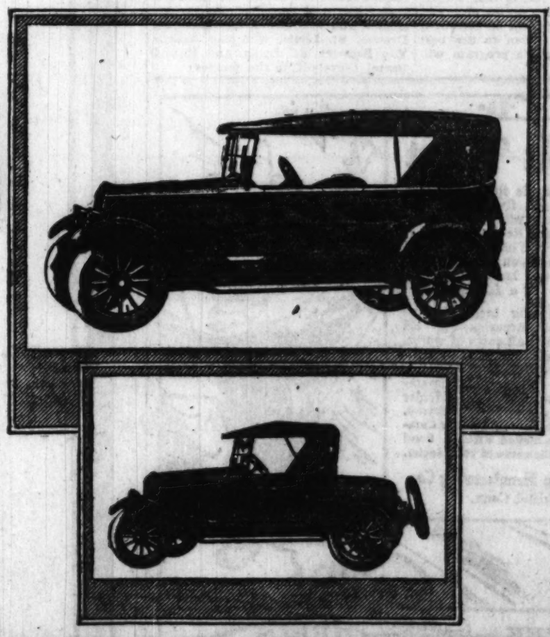


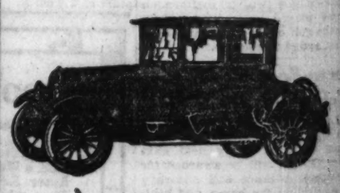
Future styles

Mitchell style is irresistible. Its new lines bring great distinction.

The blunt radiator of yesteryear now gives way to one which harmonizes with windshield, doors, etc. These are the lines you see on a smart yacht — graceful, blended, slanting lines that you always identify with smooth speed and motion.

Each is a future-style model.





Open or closed

The New Mitchell is presented in four attractive models: a 5 passenger Touring Car, a 3-passenger Roadster, a 5-passenger Sedan and a 4-passenger Coupe.

The two open cars are priced at $1750, the Sedan at $2800 and the Coupe at $2700, all prices being f. o. b. Racine, Wis., and with war tax extra.

BUILDERS SEEK MODIFICATION OF COAL CAR ORDER

Steel Mills Face Idleness, I. C. C. Is Told.

Washington, D. C., July 10.—[Special.]—Conferences between shippers and railroad officials in the Chicago district will be held in an effort to remove the difficulties caused by the priority order which confines the use of open top cars to coal. A suggestion that such conferences be held was made by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, today at the conclusion of hearings which have continued for the last three days before the interstate commerce commission.

Mr. Willard proposed that the shippers in the Chicago district meet at the call of C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central, a member of the railway executives' committee. E. I. Clark, chairman of the interstate commerce commission, approved the suggestion.

Plea Under Advisement.

The commission took the question of the modification of the open top car order, to which building material shippers in Illinois and other sections of the country have taken vigorous exception, under advisement. Chairman Clark indicated a decision would be given next week. The general belief was however, that the order would result in effect. Mr. Willard, who strongly defended the priority order, even proposed that it be continued for an additional thirty days after the original thirty-day period expires, ten days hence.

J. D. A. Morrow, vice president of the National Coal association, was another witness at today's hearing who defended the order. Mr. Morrow took flat issue with George H. Cushing, managing director of the American Wholesale Coal association, who has asserted there is no danger of a coal shortage, and that the priority order should be canceled.

Chicagoans Are Heard.

Several Chicagoans were included in a delegation of steel men appearing before the commission today. Among them were John Andrew Ronan, an attorney, representing the Hyman-Michaels company and the Iron Dealers' Traffic association; F. T. Bentley, traffic manager of the Illinois Steel company, and J. C. Keefe, vice president of the American Steel and Wire company.

The position of the steel delegation was expressed by J. F. Townsend, traffic manager of the National Tube company of Pittsburgh.

"The steel mills are blocked with steel products, many closed down, and others will be before July 20 unless some relief can be had," said Mr. Townsend. "We do not ask for a modification or change in service order No. 7, nor are we in favor of any more priority orders whatever.

What Is a Coal Car?

"What we venture to suggest is that your commission give an interpretation of exactly what a coal car is, because there are various views on the subject. It would seem as though flat or tight bottom gondola cars should be regarded as the type of car for general service, such as coal, sand, gravel, limestone, brick, lumber, scrap and steel products. All of these commodities are needed to operate steel mills."

The weekly report of the geological survey made public today shows a decrease of 3 per cent in production of bituminous coal during the week ended July 3 over the previous week. The total production of soft coal for the week was 10,235,000 net tons, a decrease of 305,000 tons from the previous week.

JOHN J. ARNOLD TO HEAD BANK UNION FOR FOREIGN TRADE

JOHN J. ARNOLD

San Francisco, Cal., July 10.—John J. Arnold, supervisor of the international business department of the Bank of Italy, has resigned to become a director in the proposed Bankers' Union for Foreign Commerce, and Finance. He will leave San Francisco for his new headquarters in New York on Aug. 1.

Mr. Arnold came to San Francisco in 1919 from Chicago, where he had been vice president in charge of the foreign exchange department of the First National bank. It was stated that consideration for his health, which had been impaired by a railroad accident in 1918, in which he lost both feet, impelled him to come to California.

CANADIAN RAIL LINES ASK BOOST IN FREIGHT RATES

Montreal, July 10.—The Canadian Railway association, representing all lines in the dominion, today applied to the railway commission for a 30 per cent increase in freight rates.

The association announced that the application was based entirely on present cost of railway operation, including labor and materials. These increased costs, according to the application, exceed by enormous sums increased revenue obtained from the rate advance granted in August, 1918.

Wage increases given employes were based on increases in the United States under the so-called McAdoo award. These added $80,000,000 to the annual operation costs.

HOW WE MAKE MONEY BY APPLYING INDUSTRIAL METHODS INSTEAD OF FARMERS' METHODS TO GRAPEFRUIT GROWING

The man who acquires wealth is the man who has organization working for him. Organization has given to the rich man what he has, while the poor man must be satisfied with what little "organization" has seen it proper to pay him. An investment in order to be safe and productive must rest on organization's unyielding bedrock of Big Volume Production and Big Volume Marketing. Such an investment should not employ the investor, but should be in the employ of the investor.

How We Built This Investment —For You

In creating this investment we selected land as the basis, for land is the most valuable and productive of all investments, permanent in nature and susceptible of big increases in value as the years go on. We selected land with a peculiar characteristic that makes it more valuable than other agricultural lands when put into production; then we built on this land a Big Volume Organization to clear, to plant it to grapefruit, thus giving it a high earning power, and we are now about to build a marketing organization that will be the largest grapefruit marketing organization in the world.

You Can Share in These Profits

You can share in the profits that this Big Volume Organization will obtain on the most common sense plan in the world. Our immense 10,000 acre perfect has been separated into 1,000 ten acre grapefruit groves. You buy only the land itself from us and get a warranty deed for it. After this you pay us the expense of clearing and planting this land to 780 grapefruit trees, which will come into bearing in a very few years. Our charges for the work of clearing and planting are based on actual cost—and what it will cost you as an individual, but what it will cost us as a Big Volume Organization, operating a 10,000 acre grove instead of a 10 acre grove. As long as you desire us to do so, we care for this land, harvest your crop, market the fruit and remit you the proceeds, less a reasonable overhead for our work.

You Can Live in Florida Near Your Grove

A beautiful townsite is being located in the center of this property and lots are sold at a very reasonable figure. Here there will be built this year a comfortable clubhouse, surrounded by beautiful grounds, where golf, tennis and other outdoor sports will be provided. This town is known as "Waterbury." It is but a few miles from the Manatee River and from Sarasota Bay. A short automobile ride will take you to the Gulf of Mexico—to the various beaches on the Gulf and on the Bay, to the towns of Bradentown and Sarasota—thus giving to the lover of motoring and to the tourist a fine opportunity for touring, bathing and other healthful recreation.

A Few Thousand Dollars Will Fix You Comfortably for Life

It doesn't cost much to give you both an income earning grapefruit grove and a home in a beautiful southern town near Iron the fashionable residence of the northern people of the United States. Those who have been to Florida know what profits there are in the raising of grapefruit, even on a small scale. Often, however, you get back of your grove a high power organization that can get the top market price, when your groves are being cared for scientifically by an organization employing expert horticulturists, when you are certain of having your trees developed to the very best advantage, your ground properly fertilized, your spraying done intelligently—then you are sure of better fruit and more profits. Those who will study the grapefruit industry in Florida know that big organizations there are making the big money, and that by applying the same principles that are in force in the factory, the mill and the warehouse to the growing of grapefruit one can get an investment that is a great, machine-like money maker in the employ of the investor day and night, putting him on even terms with even the wealthiest.

We Can Build You a Comfortable Income for Your Later Years

The average man finds it hard to save up more than a few thousand dollars in his lifetime; and this, invested in ordinary securities at 6% or 7% will hardly bring him in enough to pay even a low rent as a home or an apartment. We are giving such a man an opportunity to make a yearly income as great as would be the income on many thousands of dollars invested in average well rated securities. No better or more feasible plan of participating profits has, in our opinion, been worked out for the man of average income, and we invite an examination and a thorough discussion of the plan with you.

Get Our Beautiful Illustrated Page Booklet

We have prepared a 32-page booklet on this investment which we will distribute to those who are interested in the Waterbury project. As we do not wish to mail this document to the men who cannot carry it, we urge only those who are financially able to consider this investment to send for the booklet.

OUR BOOKLET, "AN INVESTMENT IN THE JAMES L. WATERBURY BIG VOLUME ORGANIZATION" WILL TELL YOU A LOT OF THINGS THAT WILL MAKE YOU WANT TO INVESTIGATE FURTHER. SEND FOR IT TODAY.

GRAINS ADVANCE AS BLACK RUST SCARES SHORTS

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

A black rust scare is on in the spring wheat territory. It caught a majority of the local element short of corn and oats and resulted in a wild bulge, numerous stop loss orders being caught on the way up. Offerings were light a good part of the day and the close was at the top, with net gains of 4½@5⅝c on corn, 2⅝@3½c on oats, 8½@11¼c on rye, and 2½c on barley.

While grain prices were on the down grade the greater part of the week, the rally yesterday resulted in corn finishing with a net loss of only 2⅜@7½c, as compared with the previous week, while oats were 1⅜c higher to 1⅜c lower; rye, 10@11½c higher, and barley, 6½c lower.

Houses with eastern and western connections were active on the buying side of corn. The government report showed a smaller total than the trade expected, and had considerable influence on sentiment, as did the great strength in rye. There was some buying of July and selling of September by a house with seaboard connections. Sellers of oats had to protect themselves on the bulge. Crop reports on the whole were favorable, with the forecast for warmer weather this week.

Elevator interests were good buyers of cash corn and prices were higher, closing at the top, with No. 2 yellow $1.63½ and No. 2 mixed $1.63.

July Oats Act Tight.

July oats developed further congestion and led the advance, closing 17½c over the September, against 16⅝c the previous day. Sellers of offers had to protect themselves in all deliveries on the way up. The recent heavy buying by strong commission houses had taken the surplus off the market, and it was in no condition to withstand any material change in the character of the news.

Premiums in the sample market were ½c higher, as compared with the July, with sales of No. 2 white at 11½@12½c over, fancy bringing more. Receipts light. A sale of Illinois new No. 3 white for first half of August shipment was made to arrive at 4c over September, against 2½c over the previous day for Iowa grain.

Houses with seaboard connections were good buyers of rye, and with a black rust scare on in spring wheat, prices advanced sharply to a new high on the crop, July selling above the outside figure made on the May future. Sales were made to the seaboard at 13c over September, track New York, for first half of September shipment, and at 5c over c. i. f. Buffalo for shipment by October 5. No. 2 on track sold at 3c over July.

Provision Trade Light.

Interest in provisions was limited. Offerings were light, with buying scattered. There was little new in the situation. Deliveries were 150,000 lbs ribs and 100,000 lbs lard. Cash trade was quiet as usual for Saturday.

Prices moved within a narrow range and at the close lard was 12½ to 17½c higher, ribs 10c higher, and pork 5c higher.

Packing here since March 1 aggregates 2,054,000 hogs, or 660,000 less than last year. Shipments of lard and meats were lighter and 33,309,000 lbs less than last year, the week's movement being 14,126,000 lbs.

Recessions in corn and oats from the top price at the close yesterday were due to profit taking by holders of offers. Good buying of offers on September corn and oats was a feature after the close.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A feature of the government crop report is the increase of 2,584,000 acres, or about 6 per cent, in the seven leading corn states. They have an acreage of 46,895,000, while the total for the country is 103,648,000, an increase of 1,573,000 acres, or 1½ per cent. Kansas, Missouri, and Nebraska lead in the increased acreage, while Iowa has 2 per cent more than last year, and is the largest corn growing state, with 10,200,000 acres, an increase of 200,000 acres over last year. Its condition is 3 points higher than last year.

Illinois is the second largest corn state, having an increase in acreage of 2 per cent, but its condition is 79, or 10 points under last year. Ohio and Indiana have a smaller acreage and a lower condition than last year, while Iowa, Missouri, and Kansas are higher.

The estimated yield of the seven surplus states is 1,454,000,000 bu, or 12,000,000 bu less than last year. This might easily be overcome between now and harvest, should weather conditions remain favorable.

Bear leaders in corn said at the close yesterday they expected black rust to be a bull factor in the grain market for a few days and looked for prices to harden, although they believe advantage should be taken of the bulges to make sales.

Active buying of July and selling of September corn was a feature of yesterday's trading, and had a strengthening influence. July advancing 5c for the day. It ranged from nearly even with September to 2c over, with the close nearly the widest difference of the day. Shippers and elevator people bought the contract grades of corn at 1½c to 2c over the July.

With trading in wheat for future delivery scheduled to start July 15, the black rust scare in spring wheat is expected to result in some rapid fluctuations. The world wheat situation is regarded by many as extremely strong statistically, and any material damage to the spring wheat crop might result in stampeding foreign buyers. Until the new Argentine and Australian crops are harvested, foreign purchases of wheat by Europe must be confined to North America.

The tied up condition of the rye market was illustrated by the advance to new high levels, with the July $2.31½, or 31½c over the September. Prices advanced 13¼c for July and 13½c for September from the low point of Tuesday. New York exporters have the July rye contracts and have bought steadily all week.

RESERVE BANKS GET READY FOR CROP FINANCING

That the Federal Reserve banking system is approaching the financing of the new crop movement and a consequent increased demand for credit, with loans already approximating record proportions, is disclosed in the weekly bank statements, issued yesterday.

Unless commodity loans now outstanding can be sharply reduced before the new crop movement gets into full swing, a condition predicated on an immediate and radical betterment of the transportation service, there is some suggestion that the federal reserve board may think it expedient to lower or suspend the 40 per cent reserve provision.

Such action is provided for by the federal reserve act in times of emergency, the 40 per cent ratio being purely an arbitrary mark, and bankers contend that a lowering or suspension of this ratio temporarily should not be viewed seriously as an impairment of the financial strength of the system. It is contended that the proper financing of the nation's crops is paramount to all other considerations in the credit situation.

Increase in Loans Shown.

The week-end bank statements were evocative of neither favorable nor unfavorable impressions of the credit situation. Both the New York and Chicago federal reserve institutions showed increases in loans, those of the eastern bank expanding $15,795,000, and those of the western bank increasing $8,184,000 in a new high record. The loan accounts of both banks offered signs of expanding borrowings by member institutions.

The New York bank showed a drop of $6,163,000 in deposits, a decline of $11,-000,000 in note circulation, and a recession of $19,000,000 in gold reserves. The bank reduced bills purchased by $26,000,-000, and the government returned about $7,000,000 previously borrowed. As a result of these and other changes, the ratio of total reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined remained stationary at 43.1 per cent, and the ratio of reserves to net deposits, after deducting 40 per cent gold reserve against note circulation, was 39.6, compared with 39.5 per cent a week ago.

Chicago Bank Figures.

In contrast, the Chicago bank's deposits increased $8,561,000, note circulation expanded $4,936,000 to a new high record, and gold reserves increased $1,916,000. With the expansion of loans, the member banks' reserve account increased $1,972,000. The bank reduced its borrowings from other Federal Reserve banks by $2,567,000. The ratio of reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined fell to 43.84 from 46.01 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, fell to 51.88 from 42.07 per cent.

New York Excess Drops.

The excess reserve of the New York clearing house banks declined $43,407,850 now standing at $10,017,800. This sharp decrease was due largely to the fact the member banks reduced their reserve account at the federal bank by $52,121,000, in spite of the fact their borrowings increased somewhat. Loans declined $38,-712,000, net demand deposits dropped $4,321,000, and time deposits and note circulation receded slightly. On the other hand, cash increased $12,902,000. Government deposits declined $26,263,000. The figures follow:

Loans by Twelve Banks Expand.

A further increase in loans to member banks and a decline in deposits were the chief features of the consolidated statement of the twelve federal reserve banks. Total loans expanded $16,399,000, the increase being almost entirely in commercial bills, but this was more than offset by a contraction of $17,494,000 in bills purchased. In spite of the loan expansion, the member banks reduced their reserve account by $34,457,000.

Total deposits fell $34,734,000, note circulation increased $12,134,000, while gold reserves and total reserves remained about stationary. There was a decrease of $27,437,000 in holdings of treasury certificates of indebtedness. Government deposits declined nearly $6,000,000. As a result of these changes the ratio of total reserves to net deposit and note liabilities combined rose to 43.1 from 42.8 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, rose to 47.5 from 47.2 per cent.

The FROCK FAN by Berta Ruck

Being the Story of the Girl With the Passion for Dress

I.

"A PENNY for your thoughts, Miss Kirkpatrick?"

"O! I wasn't thinking of anything, 'specially."

"Come, come! Must have been thinking of something. I wouldn't mind betting that it was about whatever lucky young fellow is due to take you out this evening, eh?"

But Dolly Kirkpatrick shook her head as she locked her desk in the manager's office.

At Welch's, the newest big frock shop in London, it was a minute after closing time. Hence, quite in order that the manager should exchange a few words apart from business with his private clerk.

She was 19 and anachronistically unsophisticated. The manner in which her "boss" eyed her as he spoke conveyed to her the fatherly interest of the kind old thing. Very similar was the first verdict of Little Red Riding Hood upon her wolf. Indeed, as judges of character, Miss Hood and Miss Kirkpatrick were about on a par.

Smiling absently as over some dream of her own, Dolly told him that she wasn't going out that evening with any one.

"Not?" The manager, across the glossily ornate office, still eyed the slim girl. "You'd got just the look on your face a moment ago."

Now, the young woman isn't born who will not "rise" to a comment on her facial expression. Even when that comment is made by one as bald, as middle aged, and as rotund as the manager of Welch's. Dolly rose.

"Is there a special 'look' for when one is expecting to be taken out to dinner?"

"Why, certainly!" retorted her employer. (He occasionally borrowed an Americanism from his chief, the owner of Welch's.)

"Certainly there's a 'special look.' That is, if the date is with a 'special man.' Miss Kirkpatrick, you are discovered."

"I'm not!" ventured Dolly, mutinous under the teasing. "I wasn't thinking about anything of that kind. I was only just thinking about—a frock."

"A frock, eh?" The man laughed, too. The girl thought he would drop the subject. Men were bored if you talked frocks. Especially men to whom "frocks" meant the day's routine and the years' commission. Frock talk was for the wealthy customer, not for the obscure employé.

Here, however, was the manager pursuing the topic quite sympathetically! A fisherman might have recognized his glance as that of the man who thinks he has hit at last upon the right bait for a peculiarly shy trout. But in quite an easy, casual tone he asked, "What sort of a frock? Any particular one you've noticed in the show rooms here?"

"Yes," Dolly sighed. She clenched her hands against her well worn skirt, and into her eyes crept back the look which had caught her employer's attention. The look of the woman dreaming of her heart's desire!

Frocks!

Blush colored tulle, light as dawn vapor, spangled with silvery showers; voluptuous velvet of midnight blue, fleeced by cloudiest gray chinchilla, brooched by one brilliant star; suave satin and frail georgette, united and kissing into life a creation of mingled jade and ivory; yes, a green gleaming wave with a crest of foam to drip from the shoulders of the nymph who should dive into this perfect frock.

Ah, if Dolly could have these and all the frocks she wanted! They were all she did want.

Some are obsessed by the craving for alcohol; some for drugs. With some the passion for clothes is as ardent, whether or not it be gratified. With Dolly it remained ungratified.

Now many girls can look well in cheap clothes. Dolly could not. Her lissome form cried aloud for the costly plainness of the French line. Other girls have personality that outshines any garment they could put on. Not so Dolly. Her small, fair, indeterminate face could light up only under the touch of passion—and frocks were the only passion she knew. She just knew that she could be transformed, by the right clothes, even as an uninteresting landscape is transformed into a paradise by a fall of snow. And the craving had grown even since her work had lain in a positive fairyland of frocks. Hanging in serried rainbow ranks behind the great glass panels, or set out on the stands, or displayed by the mannequins as they stepped delicately across the show rooms, she beheld daily just the clothes for which she longed. So near; so far!

Lunch time found her eating sandwiches in the deserted seclusion of her "set." In the diffused light of the huge emptied place she was honeysuckle fair.

Back in her dream, forgetting that she had as listener a middle aged business man with purposeful attention in his eyes, the girl babbled on as a girl babbles of her latest love.

"An angel of a little dark blue serge coat frock that came over from Paris this morning. (I went up at lunch time to look at the new consignment.) This one was so simple. But, O! O, the cut of it! And it's got an adorable little black belt and black buttons down the outer edge of the sleeves and touches of black beadwork just where you'd never expect them, but where you know they have to be, once you've seen them! It's a frock you could wear all day and every day without getting tired of it, because you'd know it always looked exactly right. And I'd been saving up for a new office frock."

"Well?" put in the manager, with that silky benevolence. "I know the little model you mean. I thought it looked like you when I saw it. I told Madame Laure. If you're wanting a new dress, why not buy that one?"

"Why not?" echoed the girl clerk, and laughed ruefully. "I asked how much it was. Thirty-five guineas to copy!"

Over the big cleared table the manager gave her another very swift look.

No. She was not hinting. Such a possibility would not have occurred to her. She was well bred; innocent, too, to silliness. Father a clever and unsuccessful doctor, tucked away in the country somewhere; people poor as church mice, proud as Lucifer; strict as Hades. No. Emphatically she was not a girl to whom one could offer clothes as presents. He wouldn't make that mistake. Try another way.

He said as if with friendly frankness, "Now look here. I could speak to Madame Laure, have her copy that model for you at twenty pounds."

Her lips parted. Then, forlornly, "But I've only saved eight pounds."

"Well?" He smiled, in what the girl put down as that fatherly fashion; she knew he had grownup children of his own! "Couldn't I advance you the odd twelve, and of course, stop it out of your salary each week?"

"O!" She hesitated.

He waited.

"O! But—but it is so good of you!"

"Not at all," declared the manager briefly, and she did not sense the sudden wolf-gleam in his eyes. "I don't like to think of any nice girl who does her work as well as you do fretting for lack of a frock she'd fancy. It's only a bit of a loan, from a man old enough to be your father. Not even a loan—an advance! Do as you like, Miss Kirkpatrick." He shrugged his thick shoulders as he rose rather heavily from his chair. "If I were you I'd go up and talk to Madame Laure about that frock tomorrow. I'll see her first for you. You go up at lunch time—or not, just as you feel inclined. Good evening!" He opened the door.

"O, thank you so very, very much," murmured Dolly Kirkpatrick, overwhelmed. She went out, down in the lift, into the store entrance, passing the big show windows, curtained now, and only showing as huge squares of amber light.

Blackly silhouetted against the nearest square, she passed two masculine figures, one taller and slimmer than the other, coming into the building. The slim, younger man had a quick turn of the head as the girl went by.

Dolly did not even see him. (Men imagine it is for them that women dress. But the true "frock fan" is she who dresses without a thought of men.)

Already Dolly almost knew that she would order that frock.

Already (though this she did not know)

The DAZZLE PLOT

by C.N. and A.M. Williamson

she was taking the first step along a path that would lead her—where?

II.

She ordered that frock.

Then another.

Later, a third!

"With three dresses a woman can go anywhere. That is, if they are the right ones," decreed Madame Laure, head of the show rooms. She was one of those sallow but faultlessly turned out French women with disillusioned, not unkindly, eyes. "But the English ladies," she turned her quick palms upward, "they choose thirty-three dresses, always the wrong ones! In buying clothes, mademoiselle, there is one thing to consider"—she held up an impressive forefinger, "you have only one back. Why buy, therefore, for the cupboard? A street dress, perfect of its kind; an afternoon frock, also perfect; a perfect toilette for the evening. Behold all that you need."

"Of course," murmured Dolly, covetously, "but you see I can only order the little serge coat frock."

Another ineffably French gesture. "But! All is perfectly simple! Monsieur who spoke to me this morning explained that Mlle. Kirkpatrick was to have ver' special terms and could be permitted time, time, time as much as she will before paying. Actually, he himself will regulate the account here, while mademoiselle repays in installments, is it not? Like that scarcely noticing the expense. So, mademoiselle, I have here une veritable occasion, a such bargain as little robe of the afternoon. Your new coat frock there is très chic. But when you make a visit or go to a matinee you will wish for a change. Something more flou, more pretty. And mademoiselle, who has so much the sense of clothes, and the figure for des toilettes exquises! Regard me this frock—here."

She produced the little robe of the afternoon. It was temptation itself in suppliest charmeuse; color a warm gray gleaming to violet; hem, sleeves, and neck fringed by dark monkey fur. Displaying it, the temptress murmured of its show room price, quoted another sum, expatiated, smiled, persisted, dominated the tempted one in a manner that none but a French saleswoman achieves—a manner that leaves her victim in a state of positive, unreasoning, humble gratitude for defeat.

Dolly Kirkpatrick went down in the lift from the show rooms to the manager's office, wearing the new coat frock, leaving behind her the afternoon gown for some slight alteration, and intoxicated by this, her first draught of that for which she had craved. At the floor between that of the show rooms and of the manager's office the lift stopped to admit another passenger.

This was a young man whom Dolly did not remember having seen before at Welch's. Young men were, so far, completely lost upon this girl; so far she was oblivious of anything that could not wear a frock. Wrapped in this obsession of hers, this clothes "complex," she would probably never have noticed the tall slimness of the figure that stepped into the lift, or the ease of the gesture (something "not London" about this) with which, seeing a lady in the lift, he pulled his hat from his dark, classically small head. However, for once Miss Kirkpatrick did find herself noticing something about a man's looks. She noticed this young man's eyes. They turned very quickly upon her, gave her a glance of surprise, delight, inquiry, all perfectly courteous, before they turned quickly away again. Bright, deepset eyes, of a warm gray gleaming to violet, and fringed with lashes that seemed thick and long as a fur trimming to those eyes; eyes to haunt a woman's dreams.

All Dolly thought was, "That's man's eyes were exactly the color of my new afternoon frock."

She entered her office and felt all day that she worked better for being so well dressed. The manager himself, all benevolence and watchfulness, voiced this as his own impression just as he was going out.

He added, as if carelessly, "How many new dresses is Madame Laure doing for you, Miss Kirkpatrick; three, isn't it?"

"Two; this one, and an afternon frock."

"O! Better have some sort of a little evening gown while you're about it, hadn't you?" he said.

III.

Realization came very suddenly a week or so later.

"And when is the new evening frock to be finished to fit you?" inquired Dolly's fatherly employer at lunch time. His tone was more than kind now, more than interested. A woman wiser than Dolly would have called it "possessive." Dolly, however, smiled ineffably toward the thought of her newest love, the evening gown.

Needless to add that it was plain, dead black. Madame had not even hesitated between it and the white frost frock with the overdress of tiny glittering icicles. The frost frock model was perhaps more uncommon, but she had mademoiselle's flawless skin of a blonde to flatter; against the girl's young back the black chiffon looked like a fall of soot across a fall of snow. No, she would not allow a touch of color; that would be supplied by the live rose flush of excitement in Mlle. Kirkpatrick's little face when she put on the gown.

"It's finished!" breathed Dolly rapturously. "I took it back to my rooms yesterday. I'm going to wear it to a dance that some people I know at Richmond are giving on Saturday."

"Wear it before then!" suggested her employer. And now even Dolly noticed a change in his voice. Even Dolly's blank innocence was conscious of the difference in the man's glance, intent now upon the look in her own face. A quick little thrill of discomfort shot suddenly through her as she sat at the desk opposite to his. What did he mean by staring at her? What did he mean by the tone of his "wear it before then"?

He leaned forward, adding, "Wear it tonight, the pretty new frock. Put it on when you get back. Then I'll call for you later, d'you see? Take you out for a nice little dinner somewhere."

Dolly's fair head lifted, alert, discomposed. The tone of the man, not the words, sent a further thrill of uneasiness through her. She suddenly seemed to see, not her "middle aged, rotund, kindly boss," who spoke to her as if she were his own daughter, but a stranger.

"Dinner——" she began.

"Yes! That's it. Just the two of us."

"O—it's very kind of you," faltered his clerk, "but I—I think I'd—I think, if you don't mind, that I had better not."

"Now, why not?" A note of ingratiation in the voice which did not reassure.

Dolly, rather flutteringly, "Isn't it supposed to be not quite businesslike to go out to dinner w-with the people one is working with all day?"

"Ah, stuff and nonsense, my child! This isn't going to be 'business,'" laughed the man, getting up from his seat. "This is a pleasure I've been looking forward to for a week now. I meant that pretty frock for you to wear when you came out with me, to be sure."

He took a step toward her, smiling into her aghast little face. And now at last Dolly Red Riding Hood did see the wolf-gleam between his puffy lids. "Why do you suppose I got you the frocks?" he asked. "Eh?"

Dolly rose, too, clutching the back of the chair. "You got them for me?" she faltered. "You? But I—I bought the frocks myself. At least, I—I am going to pay for them, of course."

"Of course!" he echoed with a laugh, still good humored. "But when? Sixty-odd pounds takes some saving up out of a salary of £3 a week, my dear. Especially when your other savings have gone on shoes and silk stockings and oddments to wear with the new frocks. Clothes are a very expensive hobby these days. Very expensive, as you'd find. Better leave that bill to me for the present, eh?" He took a step nearer. She stood motionless, seeing in one flash what she had done—seeing dismissal, debt, disgrace as dim looming shapes ahead and not knowing now where to turn.

"Eh?" he said. "However, if you feel you'd like to give me something on account, what about a kiss now——?"

A little horrified cry escaped her. He, exasperated at the instinctive recoil and by the horror on her small face, caught her firmly by the arms.

"O, don't pretend to be shocked!"

She struggled in his tightening grip. With a crash the chair fell to the floor. It drowned the sound of a tap on the office door.

"Don't—don't—please!" she gasped. But the sagging face with that wolf glitter in the eyes was thrust closer to her own face that she flung desperately backwards on her slim white neck.

"You won't, won't you?" he growled, crushing her arms in his fingers. "We'll see."

Sudden as a pistol shot another voice rang out over the manager's shoulder. "Here, you, sir! What's this?"

Upon which Dolly's arms were released so abruptly that she reeled, and, to steady herself, caught with wildly groping fingers at the desk. But it was not merely the desk that, for some seconds, gave her such comforting support. It was a man's hand, and it belonged to the dark young fellow, tall and slim, who had just swung into the manager's office.

Followed a few moments that seemed to the girl a whirling aeon. She was conscious, through a haze of shame and suspense, of her employer standing there, purple flushed, hangdog looking, before the stranger; she heard the young, clear voice of that rescuing stranger raised with an intonation not of London, not of England.

"I'll speak to you afterward. Don't let me keep you from your luncheon!"

The door closed behind the defeated back of the manager of Welch's. Then, standing there "as if the whole place belonged to him!" thought Dolly, the strange young man turned to her.

"Sit down, won't you," said he, unsmiling, but courteous. It was only then that she realized he was the young man she had seen in the lift. "My name is Davies," he added. "I am a friend of Mr. Welch's. Now, I'm afraid you've been having an unpleasant time, Miss Kirkpatrick."

Dolly, still too dazed to be surprised that he knew her name, murmured shakily that it was her fault, that she hadn't thought; that she ought never to have let that—that dreadful man persuade her to buy those frocks.

"Frocks?" took up the young man with the Welsh name and the American voice. "What's that about frocks?"

Dolly, choking back her sobs, looked up into the steady young man's face with the deepest bright eyes and the clean mouth. Poor judge of character though she was, for once she made no mistake. Here was a friend, straight and kind. Here was a man to be trusted. She faltered out to him the whole story.

A moment's silence in that glossily ornate office. Young Mr. Davies stood, one hand on the manager's desk, looking down at her gravely.

"Isn't it frightful?" Dolly gasped. "What do you think of it?"

The young man's gravity lifted for a second. He smiled at her. Very simply, very pleasantly, he said, "You fool child!"

Then he was grave again. Thoughtfully he said, "Sixty pounds' worth of clothes. That's about $250. And Welch's pay you—what is it? Three pounds a week. You'll pardon my butting into your affairs, Miss Kirkpatrick, but you seem to need help."

"O, I should think I did!" muttered Dolly, clenching her hands against the faultless skirt of that unpaid for coat frock of hers. "I don't know what I shall do next."

The young man said, "You can't stay here, working for Mr. Welch's manager any longer."

"O, no!"

"You'll have to take a new position in some place—a position that brings you in a higher salary so you can save up to pay for those dresses."

"Yes, exactly," said the girl clerk despairingly, "but where can I get that? This was the first place I've worked in. I couldn't ask him for a reference."

"Young Mr. Davies' lips tightened somewhat savagely. "It's he who'll need the reference, I guess. I could—I could have Welch fire him right now. But I don't believe I'll do that. He's too good a manager, and I'm a business man first of all. I believe in keeping folks in the job they do best. I know his type. Straight in business, straight with other men; can't help being yellow where women are concerned. I'll see he gets"—again the flash of a boyish smile—"another brand of amanuensis. And as for you, Miss Kirkpatrick, I think I can put you on to the position you should take."

"O!" murmured Dolly, her miserable little face brightening into half credulous hope. "Could you? Could you?"

"Surely," he said, quietly. "I've a—friend who's just starting a new enterprise. It works in just nicely with"—he glanced about the office—"with this new business of Mr. Welch's. They're offering good pay to their people, those that can do the work right; now they believe in keeping folks on the job they do best."

"But is this anything I can do?"

"Sure! It's frocks," an odd note in his voice over the word—almost the savage note of masculine jealousy. "Trying out the loveliest new frocks. Scores of 'em a day. Ah, you'll like that? Very few English women can step into the style of the day after tomorrow without looking scared it'll bite. They thought of a mannequin from Paris, but that wasn't the idea. It was to show the French gowns beautifully worn by an English girl. Your job, Miss Kirkpatrick."

"To be mannequin in some showroom?" asked Dolly Kirkpatrick doubtfully. "I didn't know they paid enough for what I must save——"

The young American shook his black head as he turned to the desk.

"Showroom nothing! You've a genius for dress that's worth more than that. Judging from what you've told me it's all—all you care for; well, let it help you. Now I'm going to write the card to introduce you to the director of this place. This is for fashions on the films."

IV.

Did you see those marvelous colored fashion films that, primarily an advertisement for the wares of the Maison Welch, were quoted by all London as the top note of artistic production? Did you watch that girl on the screen who appeared in frock after wonderful frock? Notice her manage the billowing opera wrap all a-droop with feathery green as a weeping willow droops under its plumes of June foliage? Enjoy her gesture with the fan as she turned to draw after her the train that followed her like the sweeping tail of a white peacock moving ghostlike over a lawn? Wonder who the unnamed graceful blonde might be?

It was Dolly Kirkpatrick, working like a Trojan to pay off a debt. Her contract with the big cinema firm had been a generous one, but she earned every penny of it.

Dolly's screened image, exquisitely arrogant, beckoned orders to a maid; then stepped languidly forward in a dream dress held upon her shoulders by strings of pearls and puffed over her slim hips as if invisible fairy fingers held out her skirts in admiration of their butterfly fragility—and

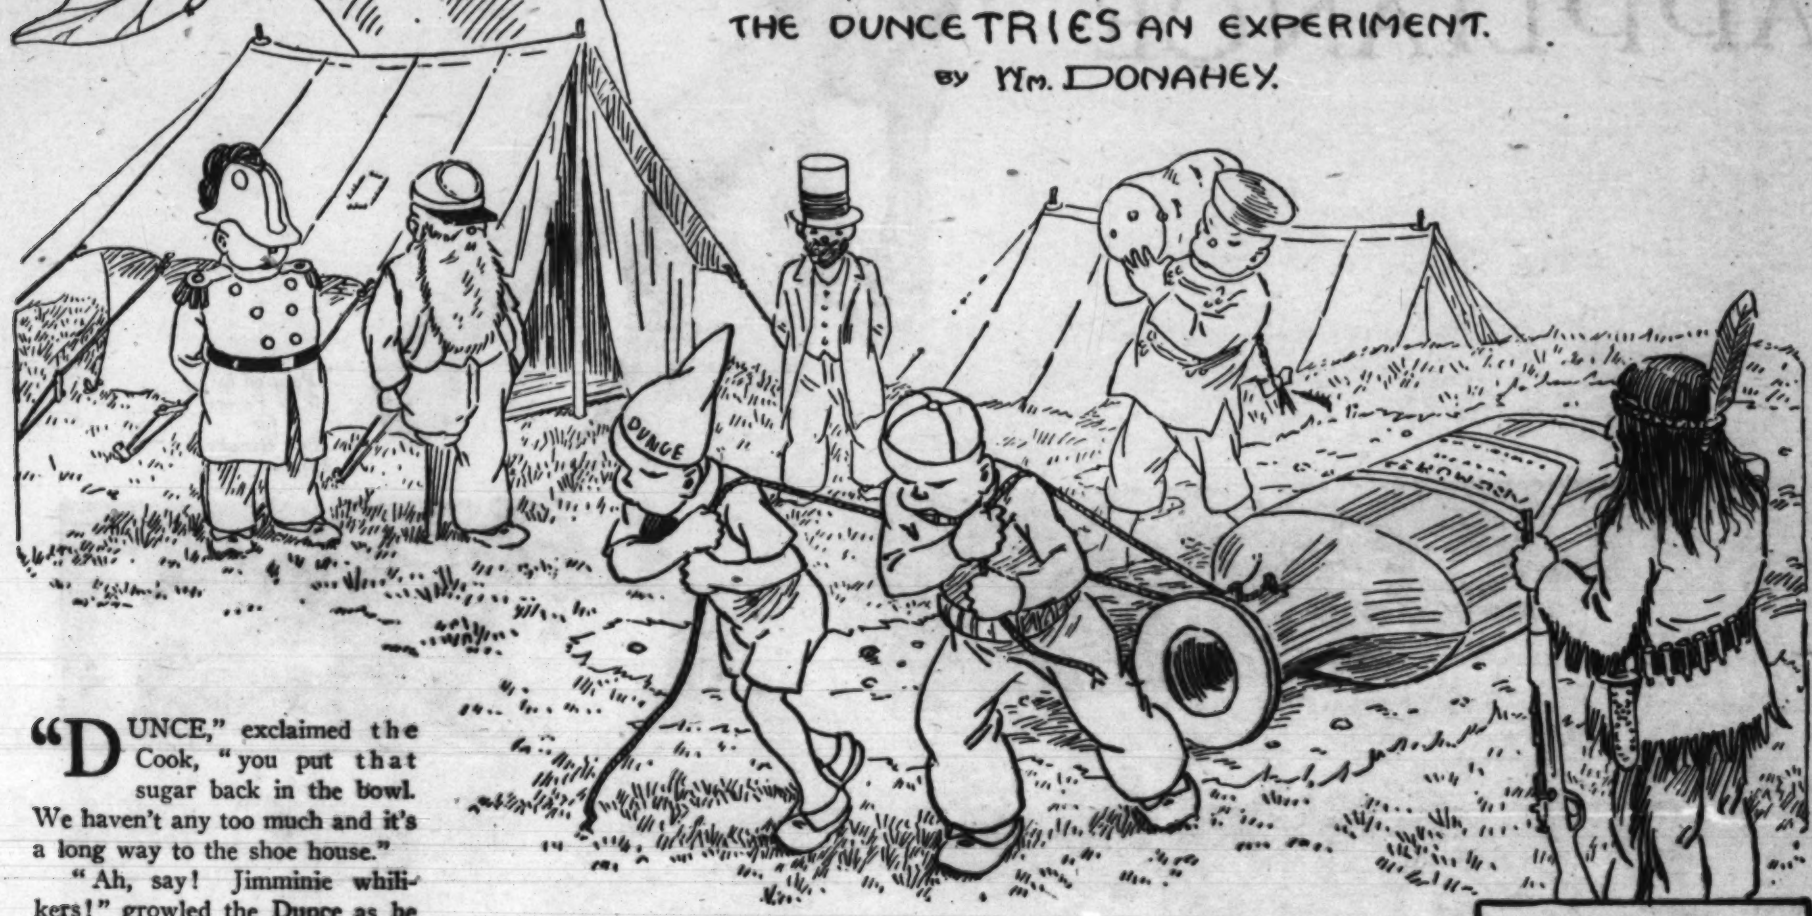
THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE DUNCE TRIES AN EXPERIMENT.
BY Wm. DONAHEY.



"DUNCE," exclaimed the Cook, "you put that sugar back in the bowl. We haven't any too much and it's a long way to the shoe house."

"Ah, say! Jimminie whilikers!" growled the Dunce as he dropped the tiny sugar spoon back into the hazelnut shell which served the Teenie Weenies for a sugar bowl. "I just wanted to put a little on my bread and butter."

"You eat entirely too much sweet and you do not need it on every piece of bread and butter," said the Cook, moving the bowl up to the other end of the table.

The Dunce glared at the Cook and, leaving the mess table which stood under an old straw hat that had been made into a dining hall for the Teenie Weenie camp, he strolled along to the creek bank and sat down.

Presently he noticed a bee buzzing about a head of clover near by and he sat staring at the bee for some time.

"Jinks!" exclaimed the Dunce after he had studied the bee for a long time. "I've got it," and jumping to his feet he ran off to the Cook's tent as fast as his short legs would carry him.

"Y-y-you can keep your old sugar, Cook," shouted the Dunce as he dashed up to the tent where the Teenie Weenie dishes were being washed. "I'm goin' to have somethin' better than sugar."

Gogo and the Chinaman were helping the Cook with the dishes and when the work was done the Dunce motioned the two Teenie Weenies to follow him.

"I've got an idea and I want you to help," said the Dunce when he had led the two Teenie Weenies a little distance from the camp. "I've got a scheme by which we can have all the sweet we want and it won't take much work to get it."

Both the Chinaman and Gogo were very fond of sweet things and they asked the Dunce to explain.

"Well, this is what my scheme is," said the Dunce sitting down in the shade of a leaf. "I have been watching a bee for the last half hour and I think we could catch a bee and put him in a bottle and make him make honey for us."

"Excuse me," cried Gogo. "I certainly won't fool with no bee, for they are mighty mean customers when they get mad and you-all can't get no bee into a bottle without gettin' him powerful mad."

"It's easy, Gogo. It's as easy as anything," cried the Dunce. "All we got to do is to sprinkle a little sugar around the open end of the bottle. Then put some inside the bottle. The bee will eat the sugar around the bottle first and then he'll go into the bottle after the rest. All you got to do then is to stick a cork in the bottle and you got your bee."

"It would be a little more work, but it certainly would be a lot safer to make some sugar out of the clover blossoms," suggested Gogo.

"Ah, that's too much work," answered the Dunce. "You have to gather the clover and then boil it down and fuss over it and all we got to do to get honey is to get a bee and let him do the work."

"Allie samee honey him pretty good," suggested the Chinaman.

"All right," said Gogo, smacking his lips over the thought of a dish of honey. "I'll help yo', but I'm tellin' you-all it's a mighty dangerous piece of work."

The Teenie Weenies found an empty bottle near by and dragging it to the creek they washed it and then placed it in a sunny place on the bank.

"The bee has got to eat," said the Dunce. "So we'd better put some clover blossoms into the bottle for him."

After several clover blossoms had been stuffed into the bottle the little fellows scattered some sugar around the bottle and then hid behind an old tin can to watch.

After a time several bees gathered about the sugar and presently one big fellow crawled inside the bottle.

This was the very thing the Dunce was looking for, and running to the bottle he caught up the cork, but before he could get it into place the bee flew out.

"Run for your life!" cried Gogo as he saw the angry bee turn on the Dunce. "Jump in the creek before he stings you-all."

The Dunce gave one frightened look over his shoulder and then dashed towards the creek, only touching the ground about every six inches.

Reaching the bank of the creek the Dunce gave a mighty leap and dove head first into the water. The bee circled around above the water and every time the Dunce popped his head up for air the bee would make a dive for him.

Gogo and the Chinaman ran for help and soon returned with the Indian, who fired several shots at the bee from his tiny rifle. The shots frightened the bee and he made off through the bushes while the chattering Dunce waded to shore.

"S-s-s-say, m-m-men," gasped the dripping Dunce, "don't say anything about this matter to the rest of the Teenie Weenies." "They'd tease me a lot about it and I'd never hear the last of it."

"We won't," promised the three little fellows, and the Dunce looked very much relieved.

The Teenie Weenie picture can be colored by yourself this week, with either crayons or water color.
The tree in the background should be light brown and the leaves green.
The tents can be colored a light gray, the grass green, and the ground a light tan.
The cork on the Chinaman's shoulder should be dark brown and the bottle should be colored lightly with bluish green.
The sky can be colored a light blue and the gun which the Indian carries should be dark brown.
The Teenie Weenies' hands and faces should be colored pink, except Gogo and the Chinaman.
The Chinaman's hands and face ought to be colored a light tan, while Gogo's face and hands should be a dark brown.
Color the Teenie Weenies' clothes any colors you like best.

"With three dresses a woman can go anywhere. That is, if they are the right ones," decreed Madame Laure, head of the show fatherly employer at lunch time. His tone was more than kind now, more than interested. A woman wiser than Dolly would have called it "possessive." Dolly, however, smiled inefably toward the thought of her newest love, the evening gown.

Needless to add that it was plain, dead black. Madame had not even hesitated between it and the white frost frock with the overdress of tiny glittering jicles. The

A little horrified cry escaped her. He, exasperated at the instinctive recoil and by

"Isn't it frightful?" Dolly gasped. "What do you think of it?"

The young man's gravity lifted for a second. He smiled at her. Very simply, very pleasantly, he said, "You fool child!"

Then he was grave again. Thoughtfully he said, "Sixty pounds' worth of clothes. That's about $250. And Welch's pay you—what is it? Three pounds a week. You'll pardon my butting into your affairs, Miss

The DAZZLE PLOT

by C.N. and A.M. Williamson

"THE DAZZLE CLUB! That name's going to stick," said I, with the evening paper in my hand. "I wonder if it'll do us harm or good?"

"Remains to be seen," said Tremayne. "Anyhow, it's our own fault. We might have known what effect our decorations would have on the journalist chaps."

We were partners. The rather jolly little house in St. Peter's place was mine, also the idea of turning it into a smart night club with futurist decorations. The capital was Jim Tremayne's. We'd served together in the army, at first as lieutenants, then as captains. We didn't care to take any one else in with us in the scheme; and as Jim thought his brains and heart too soft to fit a club secretary, I had accepted the post. This was the opening night of what we'd intended to call the Lytton-Tremayne club, and the unanimous christening given by the journalists had somewhat upset our minds. "The Dazzle club!" Would it attract or repel the set to whom we wanted to appeal?

Little did we dream in our wonderings, pro and con, what that name was to mean for us! Yet even at that moment the Future was knocking at the door, or rather, she was pressing the electric bell.

"A lady wishes to see the secretary, Sir Patrick," announced a butler, who had been my father's before me. [He didn't go well with the "dazzle" but not the wildest night bird of a club could get a bad reputation with a Panton at the door.] She wouldn't give her name."

We were to open at 10, and it was now 9:20 A lady who wouldn't give her name had no business to come alone and ask for the secretary at such an hour. Still—

"Is she young, Panton?" I inquired.

"Yes, sir."

"Pretty?"

"She's beautiful, sir. The most beautiful young woman I ever laid eyes on."

"Show her in," I said.

Jim and I were in the room off the entrance hall, which was to be used for secretarial business. Naturally, having heard such a startling account of my visitor from the conventional Panton, Jim stayed.

She was shown in, and—well, the old boy hadn't exaggerated. Speaking of dazzle! Not that she was futurist in effect. Her style was no later than the Helen of Troy period; and she wore no diamonds or other jewels. It was her beauty that dazzled. She was in evening dress, and her head was uncovered. She had red gold hair, flowing back in gleaming ripples from a broad, low forehead. Her immense eyes were either dark hazel or brown. Her complexion was white as lilies, and she was so young that it must have been natural. Her lips were rose red, and she had the kind of dimples that don't wait for a smile, but come and go with a breath. She wore a frock of flame-colored tulle or something, and a cloak of gold tissue.

"Which of you is Sir Patrick Lytton?" the vision inquired in a delicious voice—Irish, perhaps; which my own is—though not so delicious.

I answered to the name—on my feet, of course, with Jim by my side.

"I am Miss Tynan," the girl introduced herself. "Miss Eve Tynan. (I knew she was Eve, before she mentioned it.) "And I want to become a member of this club."

I don't think I gasped. But I did stammer. The dream was a lady, and looked like a fairy princess. Still, rules are rules, and conventions conventions. I was sputtering out a question or two. Might I ask who proposed her, etc., etc., when she quietly broke in.

"I know a man's supposed to propose women members," she said. "But I've no friends in London. I'm a new-comer. I can't give you credentials. I don't want to tell you things about myself. All I can say is this: I've no dreadful past. I'm quite, quite a respectable person! Won't one of you propose me?"

Heavens, what a girl! She took our breath away, though not so much that each of us didn't try to rush out a "Yes!" before the other could speak. I defy any man with blood in his veins to have done differently.

Jim got in his "Yes" first.

"I propose Miss Tynan as a member of the Lytton-Tremayne club," he exclaimed.

"No, the Dazzle," she amended, almost putting our hearts out of action with her sudden dimples. "It's the 'Dazzle' that draws me. I think it will bring me luck.

Our dance was interrupted. "Fire!" yelled a voice.

And speaking of dazzles, is Miss Gina Dalziel a member of your club?"

For a second I was nonplussed. Then I realized why the South African heiress should connect herself in Miss Tynan's mind with the word "dazzle." Of course, the girl's father had left to her the celebrated "Dazzle" diamond, as it was called, one of the finest stones ever found in a South African mine.

I replied that so far, though we had already a considerable membership, no one had proposed Miss Dalziel and we'd heard nothing of a desire on her part to join.

"I should love to see her, and the Dazzle diamond," said Miss Tynan. "Some one told me she always wears it. A girl like that would! Do either of you know any one who knows Miss Dalziel?"

The adorable look of appeal she turned first upon one, then the other of us, was enough to drive a man to lies. But fortunately I was slightly, vaguely acquainted with a man who'd once mentioned Miss Dalziel as if she were his friend.

"I'll make Willie Townshend bring her round here one night," I promised.

"O, do! And let me know when, so I can surely be here. Miss Dalziel is certain to wear her 'dazzle' to dance at the Dazzle club. It would be tempting the god of luck not to!"

Jim and I began to think that the name the journalists had fastened on us was likely to prove a stroke of fortune. Hadn't it already drawn to us a dazzling dream, beautiful enough to make any night club by her presence alone?

So that is the way the great affair began.

Our first night was an immense success, largely due, we felt, to Eve Tynan.

"Who is she?" every one asked. And it went around that Miss Tynan was a distant relative of Capt. Tremayne's, a girl who'd lived mostly "in France or somewhere."

Her dancing was as wonderful as her looks, her voice, her clothes and everything else about her. Even women admired the girl—those who hadn't flirting husbands or susceptible sons. A delightful aunt of mine with plenty of money and "go," who didn't mind calling herself an old maid, took an immense fancy to Miss Tynan—found out that she was staying at the Savoy; refrained from asking further questions, and proceeded to "make friends." If there'd been any particular reason why a dazzling girl should wish to attract a middle aged spinster, I might almost have thought Eve Tynan angled for my Aunt Constance Brett. But—why should she angle?

The great interest of that first evening centered upon Eve. Without her, I suppose that our opening would have been much like the opening of any other new dancing and supper club; but the wonderful Miss Tynan made all the difference to us that Cinderella must have made to the prince's ball. We knew that men would come back in the hope of seeing her again if for nothing else. And so it proved. If Miss Tynan didn't turn up at the club, there was disappointment; something missing, as if ozone were left out of the atmosphere, the bubble out of the champagne. Jim and I thoroughly realized that she was our mascot. But there was nothing mercenary in our feelings for her. We were both head over ears in love. I knew it of Jim. He knew it of me.

Of course she was a mystery. That, however, only heightened the charm. For all we could tell, she might be a witch, who'd laid aside her broomstick because she liked staying at the Savoy and dancing at a smart London club, better than careering through the night sky on a broomstick.

For a month the course of our infatuation "ran smooth." Miss Tynan came nearly every night to the club, and sometimes we saw her by day, generally with my aunt, Miss Brett, or some other woman of position whom she'd fascinated. She was charming to the men she met, but showed no sign of liking one better than another—unless it were Jim or me. But suddenly she vanished.

She did not come to the club. It appeared that she had left the Savoy with her maid-chaperon. She had not mentioned whether she would return, nor had she given an address.

That was the longest week of my life—of Jim's too, I think—that week of her absence. Then, on the eighth evening, just at the hour when she had first walked in upon us, the telephone bell rang in my office. I picked up the receiver and heard Eve Tynan's voice.

"Where are you?" I asked. Jim was near, and by my tone, my expression, he guessed who spoke.

"I'm not ready yet to tell you where I am," she answered. "Besides, judging by the way you and Capt. Jim Tremayne have treated me, I can't think you care. What have you done? You often told me I was your 'mascot,' and you both owed a lot to me, yet the one little favor I asked and you promised to grant, you forgot all about . . . . Why, to get Miss Dalziel to the club, wearing the Dazzle. What—you tried, but didn't bring it off. Well, you ought to have tried till you did bring it off. And I'm not coming back to the club till you do. O, not that I care, except as a test. That's it. It is a test, of your friendship—gratitude—what you like. How are you to let me know, did you say? O, I'll ring you up again tomorrow at this time. If you haven't succeeded then, I'll ring once more. After that, it will be too late. I shall simply be gone out of your lives."

If our brains hadn't been yelled down by our hearts, we might have said to ourselves that Eve Tynan was acting in this dramatic way to prove her power over us, to make us feel we would do anything to have her back. But it really wasn't such a difficult feat after all to get hold of Miss Dalziel for one of our evenings. I'm not fond of touting, but I did tout for that South African heiress; and when—true to her promise—Eve rang up at 9:30 next evening, I was able to say, "Townshend has been out of town, but he's bringing Miss Dalziel tomorrow night after the theater. He says she does always wear the 'Dazzle diamond.'"

"Very well," Eve replied. "I'll be with you at 11, and bring a guest."

So that was that. And Jim and I were able to tell every one who asked about her, that Miss Tynan had 'phoned she was coming back tomorrow night. That would insure us a big crowd! We didn't mention that she was bringing a guest. It seemed a fact of small importance. We could trust her, we thought, to introduce only suitable people. She had already brought in several guests—charming women whom she had got to know at Aunt Constance's house.

What was our surprise, therefore, when Eve sailed in with a man—a man whose looks gave our hearts a jolt—Jim's and mine.

Not that the said looks were repulsive. On the contrary! Which was the cause of the jolt. The fellow was almost as handsome a human being in his way as Eve was in hers. In fact, they were a gorgeous pair, and Jim and I felt as if we had large, cold boiled beets under our left breast pockets.

Miss Tynan introduced this big, black haired, blue eyed creature as Mr. John Wensleydale. What did the name remind me of, I wondered. What, I mean, besides Yorkshire scenery and cream cheeses? Vaguely, in the back of my brain, hovered some sensational memory.

Men who generally turned up late at the club were early that night, in order to secure dances with Eve; but Jim and I, being, in a way, her hosts, were on the inside track. We thought we might have our choice of dances. We were disappointed there, however. She had promised several to Wensleydale. He wouldn't let himself be introduced to other girls, until Miss Dalziel appeared. Then, by the flash in his eyes, one would have said that instantly he forgot Eve for her.

This pleased us (for we'd begun to worry), yet at the same time roused our indignation. That a man should look in that way at a Gina Dalziel when an Eve Tynan was in the room showed that he was "on the make." Neither Jim Tremayne nor I had met Miss Dalziel, nor did we particularly pine for the honor of knowing her, but we got ourselves introduced, to please Eve. She, it seemed, didn't want to meet the owner of the Dazzle diamond. She merely wished to gaze from afar, and satisfy her curiosity. But she did want an introduction for Wensleydale!

"After all, Eve can't be in love with the chap," I told myself, "or she wouldn't actually throw him at that money bag's head."

The money bag in question was a plump, dark girl with fine eyes, who might have been handsome if her nose hadn't been too long and her neck too short. She was like a full blown poppy in her dress of scarlet tulle, and she would positively have blazed even without the diamond. With it, she scintillated!

Most women would have worn a thing like that as a pendant, displayed against a white breast. But Miss Dalziel was bent on being original. She had the "dazzle" slung on her forehead, which it practically covered, for the forehead was low and the diamond in its setting was the size of a silver five shilling piece. It was like plastering a star between the eyes, a star that sent forth rainbow rays in all directions and blinded jealous glances.

My first dance with Eve came just at the time that Wensleydale was having his first

THE FROCK FAN

this was all that the public, lounging comfortably on its velvet cushioned seats, knew of the work. It had never a glimpse of the big bleak cinema studio near the Embankment, the place that resounded like a railway station—Clang! Clang! Clang! By your leave, there! Poiden me, ladies, poiden me!—packed with the activities of a giant carpenter shop. Hammer! Hammer! Hammer! Bang! Bang! Bang!—and of the back of a theater—Lights! Lights! Now let her go! Now shoot! Stop, stop, stop! Carpenter here! Go back and do that over again. Now, Miss Kirkpatrick! Where the several kinds of Hades is that—ah, you'll have to wait a bit. Lights, Fred!

Day in, day out, from cheerless morn till chillsome eve, this was the scene in which "Miss Kirkpatrick, the dress artist for Welch's," spent the next months of her young life. Under the ghastly lights that turned her first green and mauve, then chalk white and petuna pink, she posed in her "set"—the cardboard room that made her background, or changed her dresses in the dressing room that was a sieve of draughts, or stood about waiting for her instructions, watching the work on another picture moving out of the way of hustling workmen, and always going over a sum in her head. How soon, on her present salary, could she hope to pay back that £60 to Welch's?

The young American had told her that he had explained things all right to Mr. Welch himself, and that she would not be worried, she could take her own time. The time dragged fearfully to Dolly, just the same. Even the "best" week, when she had kept £10 of her earnings to send in a registered letter to the cashier at Welch's, seemed long to her. It was a weary life. The chief high lights in it were, as a matter of fact, those visits to the studio of her friend, young Mr. Davies. He seemed to be as well known to the director as he was to the carpenters. All had something to say to him, all looked out for the slender figure in dark blue with the tiny American service button in the coat. He had, as well, the right to the British silver badge, for he was of the company of those many "Canadians," so-called, who slipped across the border of their country to join their English kin in the first year of the world war—afterward transferring to the A. E. F. This Dolly had heard about him, and that now he was "in business" in London. But she had not even wondered what Mr. Davies' precise "business" might be. Always he had time for a glance, a friendly greeting for her.

"Say, Miss Kirkpatrick, you look tired to me," he remarked one afternoon when Dolly, who had already made six changes of raiment since lunch time, was leaning limply against her "property" dressing table.

She stood up straight and smiled at him. "It's only the effect of these lights. Anybody would look tired with a green bice complexion and mauve lips!"

His glance seemed to recognize a tiny, every day bravery. He said nothing. But when, two hours later, Dolly left her place of toil, she found at the street corner a dark blue car drawn up at the curb and a saluting chauffeur.

"Miss Kirkpatrick? Mr. Davies said I was to drive you on to your rooms, miss."

"How sweet of him!" thought the exhausted Dolly, with a sigh of relief, settling herself back in the car. She smoothed the folds of her afternoon frock, assumed as a change from the serge, because the weather was now springlike.

Touching that gray charm stuff gleaming to violet with fringes of black, she murmured, "It's just the color of that man's eyes."

Then she put up her head and told herself firmly, "When it's paid for I know what I shall do!"

V.

With the receipted bill next to her lightened heart, Dolly went through her morning's toil of "registering" the earliest summer models of garden party and river frocks.

Lunch time found her eating sandwiches in the deserted seclusion of her "set"; she meant to catch the director before he went out of the studio. She had something to say to him. At least, she would have liked to say it to some one else first, if she could catch a glimpse of that some one.

Suddenly she saw him pass between the cardboard screens.

"Mr. Davies!" she called, and her voice fluttered like a prisoned bird, she couldn't say why.

He turned. His eyes lit at the sight of the slim figure sitting among the property furniture, wrapped in a pre-war kimona of washed out pink. In the diffused light of the huge emptied place she was honeysuckle fair.

"Mr. Davies. Yes, please do sit down for a moment. I've something to tell you. That £60. Isn't it lovely? I paid up the last of it yesterday!"

"Congratulations!"

"Thank you. And my contract here ends this week!"

"You'll be getting another contract offered now, Miss Kirkpatrick, I guess."

"Yes," she said. "But—now please will you not think I'm ungrateful? Please will you know I do realize what that contract meant? It saved me. But—I don't want to sign another contract for this sort of work," said Dolly Kirkpatrick, "not—not even if these people are friends of yours, Mr. Davies."

He nodded in a noncommittal way. There was nothing noncommittal in his glance, which was of tenderest and completest approval. But she didn't see it. She was not meeting his eyes this morning.

Presently he said, "You'd like some other sort of a job, maybe."

"I was thinking," she began, "about going on a farm. Yes, don't laugh at me! Or if I could get a post as swimming instructress at a girls' school——"

"Why swimming?"

"Because I swim rather well. Besides—O!" she cried out suddenly, involuntarily, "I want some job that has nothing to do with frocks!"

And now she looked at him, not dreaming that he would understand this thing that had happened to her. She was cured of the obsession. Frocks! What did they convey to her now? An idea that was forever inseparable from images of discomfort. Forever she would associate "frocks" with toil, early rising, uncomfortable journeys, with this studio of noise and harassment, with the lack of fresh air and sunshine, with deep physical fatigue, with backache, with headache, with being boxed up with the same inconsiderate people day after day, and with the deadliest boredom of all, that of standing, standing, standing about, being kept waiting—that one thing on earth that fills a woman's soul with hate.

Gently the young man asked, "Do you expect me to take this as stop press news?"

"News?"

"Why, yes, that you'd gotten so that you didn't care a great deal about frocks any more. Why, in the name of all get out, do you imagine I picked this job for you?" demanded the American. "I meant you should get to hate the darn things. While you were so crazy about them I knew I hadn't an outside chance you'd get to——"

His voice trailed off huskily.

He looked at her, the purpose of months a-gleam in his handsome eyes of violet gray. She flushed vividly, turning away.

Very gently, quite respectfully, but with the utmost firmness, young Mr. Davies placed his arm about her shoulders. In his other hand he took her chin, raising her face so that perforce she had to meet his gaze. It held her, telling her in some seconds a volume of those things for which there is no spoken language. He waited, still holding her with those courting hands, those courting eyes. Then, as at last a soft sound broke from her, joy and mirth in his face, he spoke.

The half dozen words he uttered may look banal enough on the printed page, but the tone of them held all a lover's triumph.

"O, what a great big sigh!" he muttered. And said no more, putting off for the present all further verbal explanations.

What did it matter that his girl didn't yet know that he, Davies himself, was the owner of the vast studio where they sat, not caring whether it were in a railway station or a rose garden. What did it matter that she hadn't been told that her lover was also the head of the "Welch's," and that his bride might choose from his or any other show rooms all the trousseau frocks she would?

Mere details!

The main fact was that with her fair head fitted into his shoulder she sighed and sighed in delight under his kisses, and that her small face was now alight with "the look."

Passion, that had been all for frocks, was now transmuted. And hers were the lips that first breathed its new name.

"O!" sighed Dolly Kirkpatrick once more. "My sweetheart!"

with Miss Dalziel, and I hurried to do what I was afraid some one else—Jim among others—would do before me if I let my chance slide. I told Eve that I'd been in love with her since the first night she came to the club, and that my misery during her absence had been beyond words. "Do say you'll marry me!" I begged.

"O, I'm so sorry! I can't," she breathed.

"But if you're sorry you can't, you can," I urged.

"No—no. You mustn't ask me!"

"Is it some one else?" I couldn't help persisting. "Jim Tremayne, perhaps."

She shook her head, as we danced.

"I know he's proposed, because he's had a dance with you."

"If he did I—I've forgotten."

"As you'll forget me."

"I won't forget either of you," said Eve in her softest voice. "You've both been splendid to me. I—I'd be proud to marry either one of you. I'll remember you all my life."

"Did you say this to Jim?"

"Much the same."

"Why don't you toss up for us, then?"

Eve laughed, but quite faintly. She seemed to be in a grave and rather wistful mood. "I couldn't possibly marry one of you. Soon—very soon—you'll understand why you two, though almost the nicest men in the world, are the last two in it I could dare to think of."

"You're very mysterious!" I reproached her.

"I always was. You accepted me on—face value."

"O, Eve," I groaned. "I know I've no right to ask, but are you engaged to this Wensleydale?"

"No-o," she said with an odd note of hesitation.

"But you will be?"

"O, anything can happen in this world!" she exclaimed, beginning to show impatience—which I deserved. "If I do get engaged to Jack Wensleydale I'll write and tell you."

"Why not by word of mouth? Wouldn't you have courage?"

"I'll write," she repeated.

And at that instant our dance—every one's dance—was violently interrupted by something—somewhere, that sounded like an explosion.

"Fire!" yelled a man's voice. And then like a shot the lights in the dancing room went out. There was a smell of smoke. The music had stopped. One or two women screamed. There was a crash of breaking glass.

My first thought was for Eve—to see that she didn't fall, or get caught in a stampede. But she wrenched herself from my arms almost with violence. "I'm not afraid—don't worry about me. Go and get a door open, so we shall have light!" she gave me orders in a firm voice.

"All right. Stay where you are—close against the wall," I said, and went groping for the nearest door. Other forms were groping, too, and we collided with disastrous consequences. In a moment, however (it couldn't have been more) my fingers found a door knob. I turned it, and opened the door, only to come upon blackness beyond. Evidently the electricity had failed all over the house; but it was good to see no flames, and the smoke was no thicker than before.

I called the name of two or three men servants—shouted again and again, "Bring candles!" And there had been no more than time for a few stumblers to follow me into the dark supper room, where they brought tables smashing down, when a couple of footmen appeared like ghosts with candles in tall silver sticks.

They had phoned the nearest fire station, and before we'd found the cause of the smoke and failure of light, an engine had come tearing up. Then it was promptly discovered that there was no fire! And the electricity hadn't failed. It had simply been switched off in the dancing room and adjoining supper room. It needed only to be turned on again.

"You've been spoofed, sir," said the fireman, who seemed to boss the show. "Some one's played a practical joke on you. Detonating powder in a paper bag! Or—have any ladies lost their jewels? And is anybody missing who ought to be here?"

"My diamond!" shrieked Miss Dalziel. "It's gone—it's gone! It's stolen!"

Also there was somebody missing—three somebodies: Eve Tynan, John Wensleydale, and a singularly intelligent footman who had been engaged about a week before.

Still, there wasn't much in that—it would seem. A good many people were eager to go as soon as they could. But on consultation it was decided that the police must be sent for, and every one volunteered to be searched for the Dalziel diamond. Needless to say, it wasn't found. It never has been found. Nor were Eve Tynan, John Wensleydale, and the intelligent footman ever seen again by us, or by any one else in London, though I must admit they were looked for by the police and an expensive private detective engaged by Miss Dalziel.

Eight weeks after that night—the climax of the "Dazzle plot"—a letter came from Eve. She had addressed it to us both—Jim and me—and began "My two dear friends."

"Now, you know," she went on, "why you were the last two men I could think of marrying. I deceived you. But you will forgive me when I explain—if you haven't already. Jack and I didn't 'steal' that diamond. It was rightfully ours. My father and Jack put all their money and much killing hard work into a diamond mine in South Africa. They had no great success, but they'd reason to suspect that the Kaffirs were selling stones to a man named Jake Dalziel. They could prove nothing, even when he went back to England and swaggered about with the so-called 'Dazzle diamond' which father and John Wensleydale Sr. were sure came from their mine.

"Then one of the Kaffirs was nearly killed in a native row, and before he died confessed selling an immense stone to Dalziel. He could not sign his statement, however, and Dalziel simply defied Wensleydale, who followed him to England and claimed the diamond as his property and his partner's.

"Jack was a boy of 17 at school in Johannesburg, and I was only 10. You, too, were boys of Jack's age; but perhaps you remember the Wensleydale-Dalziel shooting affair. Jack's father tried to shoot Dalziel, and Dalziel shot him dead instead; self-defense!

"My father was a delicate man. He'd gone to South Africa for his health, after my mother died, and had taken me with him. The tragedy of his friend and the loss of the great diamond that would have meant fortune, broke his heart. Child as I was, I understood everything, and I vowed that some day I'd get the diamond back. I was quite alone in the world when father went, and there was very little money. But an actress who was in Johannesburg just then put me on the stage as a child actress.

"Jack left school and went to work in various ways. We met sometimes—drawn together by our common fate—and we wove a hundred plans how to get the diamond. We saved up our money and made a joint fund. Jack took lessons from an expert retired thief. But years passed before we were old enough, or rich enough, to go to England and set about our mission in a practical way. Meanwhile, Dalziel had died and left the diamond to his daughter.

"No sooner were we in England, than the war broke out. Of course, Jack enlisted! I went over to France and nursed in a French hospital, where they take you without training. You know what happened next!

"We had only one accomplice, brought in at the last; a pal who'd been in Jack's regiment. He made a nice footman! I promised I'd be engaged to Jack from the moment he got the diamond; but he hadn't got it when you asked me, so I didn't tell a fib.

"Thank you both for all you did for me, consciously and unconsciously. Do you regret it? I don't believe you do! I shall think of you often in our South American home, where there's no extradition for (alleged) theft, and we shall be rich on the proceeds from three diamonds which once were one. Yours gratefully,

"EVE WENSLEYDALE."

Do we regret what we did for her? No! We still remain dazzled. We always shall.

MICE AND MEN

THE STORY THUS FAR—Having regretfully but firmly rejected Tripp Hart, an old time playmate, Merrial Houlton betakes herself to England, ostensibly to leave her father free to recover from a financial setback, but in reality to carry out certain mysterious plans having to do with her dead mother's English relatives, who did not welcome her father into the family circle when he was married, and have coldly ignored him ever since. The Beauforts—Alice and Winifred, their mother, and Hubert, an invalid brother—receive their American cousin with mixed emotions, but Merrial proceeds blithely to make friends in her own way. Things, she finds, are rather at sixes and sevens. Her own brother, Dick, who has been in England at school, turns out to be a hopeless expatriate, ashamed of his American origin, which he has kept a secret. Alice Beaufort has met him, without knowing that he is her first cousin, and has fallen in love with him. Winifred is unhappy over an affair with Kenneth Stanton, a young man who appears to be neglecting her. The pitiful plight of Hubert, the invalid, arouses Merrial to prompt action, and she enlists her father's aid in sending over an American specialist to examine the boy. Then she astonishes the Beauforts by moving, bag and baggage, over to the home of Aunt Jane Coke, another of the English relatives, poor but proud as Lucifer, and, to Miss Coke's consternation, calmly makes her kitchen the center of a flourishing neighborhood trade in quince preserve, cabling Tripp Hart meanwhile to find a purchaser for the recipe. While this venture is under way, Kenneth's neglect of Winifred is explained by a letter from Gertrude Hart, Tripp's sister and a notorious flirt, telling of her engagement to young Stanton, whom she has met in Paris. Merrial has just tackled the job of straightening out this tangle when her brother, Dick, appears on the scene and makes a further mess of things by flatly denying his relationship to the American girl. His better nature asserts itself, however, and he confesses his silly masquerade and departs, leaving Alice Beaufort heartbroken. Merrial is invited to spend a week-end at the ancestral home of the Rivingtons, distant connections, Lord Rivington having shown symptoms of falling in love with the girl. At the same time Tripp Hart sends word that he has come to England to help Merrial with her quince preserve business.

TWELFTH INSTALLMENT.

A Surprise or Two.

"I THINK I know now what makes the difference," Merrial murmured, half to herself, as she sat beside Henry Rivington in his roadster, gazing out across the rich tamed beauty of the English fields and woods—"rolling country," as it is so well termed.

They were going at just the right pace; no attempt at speed, but fast enough, in the solid two seated car, to catch the ever changing perspectives of foreground and distances, lush meadows rising to grazing and plowed lands, broken with young covers of larch, and heavier copses of ancient beach and oak on the far hillsides.

Lord Rivington bent towards her.

"The difference?" he questioned.

"Between the beauty of English landscape and American," she replied. "Have you read Alice Meynell's 'Spirit of Place,' or 'Earth Breath,' by A. E.? They gave me the key to it, I think."

"Yes, I know them both. And what is the difference?"

"In America—I mean our real America, the west and the newer, less settled parts, where our grandest scenery is—the spirit of place is still virgin—not yet infused with the spirit of man. It's as if the old gods of nature still possessed it, and no shrines had yet been built to the gods of men. While here—everywhere you feel that the spirit of an ancient race possesses the very rocks and the soil and the trees. The gods of nature lurk within, because they never die; they're real, immortal gods. But they know themselves dispossessed now by the gods of the race. Perhaps they await the time when they shall return."

"I suppose that's what I felt in Canada—the lack of historical suggestion or atmosphere as one rode about, or crossed the continent by train. Here the countryside seems to unfold page upon page of history; it's a jolly old place, England," he laughed contentedly.

"It's wonderful—and I do love to think you will always let us share with you; its history is ours as well as yours, and we want you to make us feel a right in it, not just as visitors but as joint owners, you know. England mustn't forget its cousinships, must it?"

"Far from it," he agreed, smiling down into her eyes. "Without them, wherever should I be now?"

"Or I?" she laughed back, responding to his personal twist to her trend of thought. "Though Aunt Jane reminded your mother that ours is not a relationship—we're merely connections, she says."

"It's true, though, that we began with a business relationship, through quince preserve. By the way, how is it going?"

"I've got to ask a favor about that. Shall we pass a telegraph office anywhere?"

"Lots of them—every little postoffice is a telegraph office, you know. But you've not brought business with you on this holiday, have you?"

"Well, you see—I told you I'd got to go to London on Saturday, and now I find that the Preserve company must see me about it on Friday."

"O, but," Henry Rivington protested, "I won't let you go; you simply can't. Tomorrow! I shan't be able to show you half my treasures."

"I hate to think of going—indeed I do. But I received a tiresome telegram just before I started."

"Let them come to you; much better; don't seem too anxious, you know," he said sagely. "Tell 'em if they've got to see you tomorrow they'll find you at Rivington Old Hall, and you'll give 'em five minutes there!"

"Well—but are you sure you don't mind? And perhaps I ought to say half an hour, don't you think? You see, it's Tripp Hart, and he's come all the way from America to investigate the chocolate and magenta agent's report—the real agent, you know," she added mischievously.

"Tripp Hart? He's a friend of yours, isn't he? Didn't you speak of him to me before?" He looked down at her keenly.

"Yes—so I did!" Merrial tried to emulate the pink of Rivington nonchalance, and with marked success. "You see, he brought up the Heart-o-Fruit Preserve company after the chocolate and magenta agent had been down to taste the preserve."

"Hart of the Heart-o-Fruit! Ah! I see," drawled Rivington. "That was clever of him," he added enigmatically. "And he's an American, you say. Mother and I met a—a perfectly 'stunning' American Miss Hart in Paris last winter, when he were calling on the Stantons there. Mrs. Stanton was an American, you know. Miss Hart had Kenneth Stanton in tow, I think," he added a trifle tartly.

"Why, Hen—Lord Rivington," and she blushed furiously at her excited slip of the tongue, "that was Tripp's sister, Gertrude. How ex-tra-or-di-nary! What a funny little world we live in. And isn't she quite wonderful—Gertrude, I mean?"

"Well, yes—quite 'stunning,' as you call it over there, don't you? But you see—well, she and Stanton——"

"O, but Lord Rivington, she's a southerner by training, you know—and that means so much in those things, or so little, rather! I'm sure there was nothing serious in it."

"Really," he drawled; "I didn't quite understand, perhaps."

His tone was so evidently nettled that Merrial's mind lept back to her night talk with Gertrude in Boston. Could it be? Was Henry Rivington her rod of steel? Was he? He certainly would never unbend to Gertrude's method of competition for her favor. "I'll wager he is; ten to one, in anything you like," Merrial bet herself; "I'm sitting at this moment beside Gertrude's master man of steel!"

The car was slowing down, and she heard Rivington remark that she could send her telegram from the little postoffice at which they had drawn up. In a daze of preoccupied speculation Merrial entered the tiny place and composed the following telegram to Tripp in London:

"Come and find me at Rivington Old Hall tomorrow. Consult Guide Book. Longing to see you strictly on business. Your bestest pal, MERRIAL."

"And now for tea," Rivington rallied her as she came back to him, waiting to tuck her into the car again by his side. "I've thought of an old farmhouse of ours whose tenants will just dote upon giving us of their best. What do you say? Bread from a wood oven, butter and cream from the dairy, eggs from the nest; we'll hunt for them ourselves and get the very latest edition, what?" He was as exuberant as a boy now that they had left behind them the cloudy reminiscence of Gertrude Hart's disturbing charm, and perhaps a trifle of dubious speculation anent Merrial's business projects, with Tripp as purchasing providence.

"That will be heavenly—and I'm just pining for it; there's nothing like this kind of thing for giving one an appetite, is there?"

"Nothing—unless it be quince preserve," he retorted.

And soon Merrial had another bright sidelight upon that colorful feature of English life, the unique relationship between the tenantry and their landed overlords; the perfect balance of deference and independence from the former, with patronage and respect for their independence from the latter; Lord Rivington's manner of hearty friendliness towards the farmer himself, and perfect consideration and courtliness to his hostess—the happily flurried and proud chatelaine of the old stone farmhouse, mistress of the fowl and dairy departments as her husband was master of the beasts and the land! Such wholesome happiness and content was not quite to be expected from what Merrial had heard and read of English rural conditions; but here, at least, it proved itself before her very eyes.

Perhaps not all tenantry were blessed with a Rivington for overlord, she surmised!

"Mother said she would be over at the hall in time for dinner, so we shall have time to ramble about the old place a bit before she arrives, unless you're too tired," he suggested solicitously. He was tucking her into the car again, with his fine Rivington air of deferential proprietorship.

"Oh, that will be just perfect; I couldn't bear to wait for it all till tomorrow," she sighed, happily.

As the shadows of the lovely summer evening began to lengthen they made their way down from the old farm, on its dominating hillside by winding lanes, towards the lower levels of the river valley, where, in its stately park, lay Rivington Old Hall.

"It's funny," said Merrial to her companion, "I thought there couldn't be two men in all the world more different than you and Tripp Hart. But there's a very striking something you have in common."

"Thanks," said Lord Rivington, briefly. "I shall like to meet him tomorrow."

Henry Rivington's face had never been more serene. His eyes were fairly glassy with serenity. Nevertheless there was a nervous movement in his fingers.

"You must have a tremendous influence, Miss Houlton," said he. "You strike a man this way and that like a shuttlecock. There, you've spirited a rancher into the preserve business and here you've thwarted the ambitions of a first class collector of antique furniture. I still think you owe me some substantial amends on that score, you know."

"I do," cried Merrial, earnestly. "I owe you any amount of amends. I've been worrrying over that. There's not a thing on earth that I can do for you. You've no invention that needs exploiting and you're not engaged against your will to a—whirligig. Now, are you?"

"Heaven forbid! A whirligig is the last thing I should choose for the purpose. But have you been assisting all these unfortunates lately?"

Merrial shsook her head.

"I don't progress," said she, sadly. "Maybe I might do better for you if I knew what you needed."

"And what should you say I needed?" he inquired, with a humorous look at her down his straight nose.

She considered him with her head bent sideways, daintily.

"Dynamite," was her direct verdict, at which Henry gave one of his gentlemanly "ha ha's."

"So you think the universe would be well rid of me?"

"Oh, no." Merrial was seriously apologetic. "I didn't mean enough dynamite for that. Just—well, shake you up a little."

"Try it," he suggested. "Do you think you could?"

"No," she answered, "I'm not explosive enough; besides, I'm really in awe of you."

"Are you really?" said Henry, dryly. "Shouldn't have noticed it."

"Oh, yes," said Merrial. "If I shut my eyes to your car I feel as if you were Sir Philip Sidney and Sir Walter Raleigh, and all the other chevaliers sans peur et sans reproche rolled into one. There's something fairy-storyish in a title to an American, you see. It's almost mythological to every one but a Newport 'cottager.' I dare say I feel the way Alice did when she met the Unicorn—who, by the way, wore an eyeglass, too. You're my first 'fabulous monster,' your lordship."

"Thanks," said Henry, while Merrial gave him an arch mock dip of her birdlike head. She looked as slim as "meadow grass" herself.

Henry, like Alice, remembered the "Belle Dame sans Merci."

He could not help but remember, too, the "palely loitering" knight. Would England without Merrial some day be to him a place where "no birds sing"? He found himself in the grasp of something that disturbed his serenity. He had never felt any great mistrust either of the things he desired or of his powers of attaining them. But suddenly this light, slight, pale faced girl, whose soft, warm arm touched his, seemed a perilous quest. It was not too late to harden his heart against her. Too late? Henry's own astonishment fairly took life to gape at him; he had first set eyes on the fairy child with her apron and her spoon just a few short weeks ago!

The car was humming softly through a great gateway and flashed a mile or so through the broken arcade of shadows to a wide, sun reddened front that seemed, with its vines and gables, its rosy chimneys, and circling swallows, as "immemorial" as the old trees and velvet stretches of lawn that led, length after length, down from the entrance steps of the massive old house to yew walks and flowering terraces. He left the car at the great front door, opened by an ancient servitor, who received an affectionate greeting, as they passed on together into the hoary old building. Rivington at once began to show off its beauties. Merrial followed her escort like a trustful and enthusiastic child, shaking her head in wonder over his dates and his stories, flitting into corners and down passages, "composing" prettily in small paned windows, till she ended by rekindling for her companion a half forgotten glamour that flushed his own face proudly at the last.

"It was adorable of you to bring me here," said Merrial. "It was worth coming to England for. I shall think—oh, so often—of this house, and of you."

"You—you are going back?" he asked.

Then, as she nodded gravely, he came and stood before her, as she sat on the arm of an old carved chair.

"If I could persuade you," he said, "you would change your mind!"

She drew a sharp breath and rose to her feet; but he took her hand and begged her to sit down.

"You can't escape it now," he said, almost sternly, but Merrial besought him.

"Not here," she entreated, "not here! It wouldn't be fair, Lord Rivington."

Her panic was so obvious, and had, in its quick frankness, so amusing an aspect, that Henry, who was cool enough for all his shaking fingers, laughed.

"You owned that some amend was due to me, and now you are begging off," he said.

"Oh, but it's not fair—not here, in the midst of all this. I'm—I'm not free!"

"Are you quite fair to me?" he asked her, standing near, with his fastidious hands locked tight behind him. The Rivington eyebrows were very straight!

Then her face flashed up to him, white and quivering, its impish smile broken into sparklets by eyes that were moist with emotion.

"I can't," she murmured tremulously. "You are too—too secure, too—"

"Too greatly in need of dynamiting, eh?" he said. "I am not quite so adamantine as I evidently appear. Don't you know what you were doing when you beckon a man into your cave with those eyes and feed him with enchanted sweets?"

"But I thought you were an agent," she pleaded. "You know I did! Oh, please don't be a big man with a stick! Let me get away a little from this wonderful house, and these yew trees, and the lawn. Isn't your cave more enchanting far than mine? And—and your eyes are very nice, too, Lord Rivington. Oh, I—I think this kind of thing is harder for me than anything else in the world. I am not stupid about other things, but about this you'd be surprised if you could know how confused and strange I am. I make mistakes and make myself unhappy—bitterly; and what's worse, I make other people very unhappy, too, and I hate myself so afterwards, because I have meant to be kind and I was really cruel. And I have thought it was real when—oh, don't let me be cruel to you, dear Lord Rivington!"

"Her ladyship has arrived, your lordship," quavered the voice of the ancient servitor as he passed by them towards the great doorway at the end of the hall.

As she dressed for dinner that evening in the old tapestry hung bedroom, with its monstrous high canopied bed, to which a stately dame had escorted her with all the dignity of a duchess in reduced circumstances and of a bygone age, Merrial had to face much searching of the heart and many twinges of conscience.

"I like him—yes, even to loving him in a way; but do I love him, even to marrying him? That's the question. And now I've got to answer it. O, dear—why must it always come to that, when I really don't want it, a bit! I've not played my game of chess a bit cleverly."

She wandered down, dressed for dinner, to muse by the stick-fire—lighted in deference to the place rather than for any practical need—in the old wainscotted hall, with its generations of portraits, its ancient flags and armor, and its giant hearthstone surmounted proudly, over the stone mantel, with the armorial bearings of the Rivingtons. Could she live up to all this—or back to it, rather?

And then her memory took her traveling over the Atlantic, and across a continent, to the ranch at Crystal creek, with its log-hewn house, hung with skins and Indian bead work, adorned with antlered heads—not as of history, but along with the very guns and knives and gear that were still being used year in and year out, in the life of the place as it now was; a house of today, and a very part of the western ranges which had become to her, spiritually at least, bone of her bone and flesh of her flesh.

"Ah, Tripp, Tripp! I can never give it up—never," she murmured. "And I guess you're part of it, for you, more than any one else, gave me the spirit of it. O, what have I done, what have I done?"

And in real dismay and bewilderment of mind she gazed about her at this ancient home of the Rivingtons almost as if in terror lest it should close in upon her, like a tomb. At the sound of a footstep coming down the wide stone staircase she turned her head, expecting to see Lord Rivington. She started back, almost faint with amazement; it couldn't be!

But it was; it was Tripp's voice.

"Merrie," he said, coming gently towards her. "It's all right—it's me, sure enough."

Merrie," he said, coming gently towards her. "It's all right—it's me, sure enough. I got your wire, motored right down—and Lord Rivington insisted on my staying here, instead of at the inn."

"O, Tripp, you dear, dear Tripp," and she buried her head in his coat and let her tears come unrestrained.

"Steady, little girl, steady," he said. "I ought not to have scared you like that."

This matter of fact, simple comforting way brought her quickly to herself.

"It was so silly of me," her laugh was a little quavery. "I was just thinking—about Crystal Creek, and father, and—and you."

She became tongue-tied, while he released her, and stood at a kind of questioning attention, as who should say: "And now that I am here, what?"

But after the impulsive outburst of the first greeting a sudden chill of estrangement seemed to fall between them. As she took him in with her searching look she found that his face was thinner and graver than of old.

"I didn't realize how homesick I was till I saw you, Tripp," said she, again instinctively apologizing for her outburst. "But I've been away such ages, and—a home face is—good!"

"You've not seen Dick?" asked Tripp.

"Only for a few moments; he's at Oxford, taking some special course. Poor old Dick!" But here she gave a little choke and put her finger tips on Tripp's arm. "He's—he's getting sensible again; you won't"—she managed to manufacture a smile—"you won't have to smash his eyeglass; he's done it himself."

"Good work! He's the real stuff, Dick, if he only knew it. And how about quince preserve, Merrie?"

"Haven't you seen the report? I thought you came over for that."

He winced; it was a trifle too direct, even for him!

"Well, you see, I only got to London late yesterday, and I had to complete all the business of the purchase of the company. The reports are all on my desk there, and I did just glance at them. But what do they matter?"

She looked at him so keenly that he quailed, and added: "I'll go into them directly I get back on Saturday, if you like."

"O, dear me!" she said, "I thought you'd brought your company's decision with you."

Tripp drooped; he was going to be held "strictly to business," that was evident!

"It's Aunt Jane's recipe, you know, Tripp; I want to sell it so that she shall not be so dreadfully poor; I want her to get a little income from it. She's so proud that no one could give her anything, you see. She doesn't know about it yet—that I'm trying to sell it, I mean. She wouldn't let me, if she knew, I expect."

And then Merrial changed the subject.

"Gertrude's been up to mischief, Tripp—Kenneth Stanton, you know; I wrote to you."

Tripp frowned. "Singeing another moth, eh?"

"Yes—but this moth is terribly singed; more than he deserves; and it's hurting more than himself, too."

"Moth singeing is a law of nature, Merrie. You can't help a moth. Takes something pretty thick to shield flames."

"Couldn't you make her do something about it? Tripp, you really must help!"

One of Tripp's eyebrows flew up comically.

"O! I must. What must I do?"

"You must write to Gertrude."

"No. I tried that once. It's not only moth wings that Gertrude makes to smart. I've not forgotten my lesson."

Merrial looked amused.

"Why? What did she say?"

Tripp fixed his eyes upon Merrial.

She told me," he answered slowly, "that a man that had managed his own love affair so badly was not the man to give advice."

Merrial was scarlet.

"O, Tripp! What a shame!"

Her eyelashes were fluttering over wide pupils.

"I admitted the justice of the rebuke," went on Tripp coolly, "and since then my motto's been 'Hands off.' After all, what's the use, Merrie? Gertrude and I will never understand each other. She's lived with the Baltimore aunt; I've been out on the world. She's south; I'm west. When I left her she was a little soft kitten in a pinafore; when I came back she was Gertrude. She thinks I'm raw material; I think she's a whirligig. Fight it out with Gertrude yourself, old girl."

"I can't," said Merrial. "Not about this. We've always been on the surface, Gertrude and I. Besides, she was furious with me for throwing you over, Tripp."

Humor and hurt fought with each other for an instant in Tripp's face. Humor held his mouth corners when he next looked at Merrial, but angry pain had conquered his eyes.

"You're—frank, Merrial," said he, and she gave him an apologetic glance that somehow succeeded only in routing humor altogether from the strong bronzed face

"Then I must write her myself," sighed Merrial. "She can snub me this time. The same remark might apply, mightn't it, Tripp?"

"Not by a whole lot," he answered grimly. "She said my 'love affair,' remember. Savvy, Merrie?"

"Savvy," answered Merrial, but she did not look altogether convinced.

"What did you come over for then, Tripp?" she murmured a moment later. "You don't care anything about quince preserve. What was there in it for you?"

Of course, her question and her smile were teasing him, but Tripp took his time for a reply. He went over to the fireplace, searching her gravely with his deep eyes.

"I came to see your—Englishman," he said at last.

"My Englishman? I haven't any Englishman."

But just at that moment Lord Rivington came down stairs. Tripp laughed his big, gay laugh, and Merrial blushed, annoyed.

"Mr. Hart doesn't mean to let that recipe get away from him you see, Miss Houlton. I think he half suspected I was after the agency for it myself," and he laughingly told Tripp the story of his deceptive tastings.

"That's the trouble," commented Merrial. "Once I allow these agents to taste they keep tasting and tasting, but never come to the point and buy. I shall have to make a rule: No tasting without a deposit, down."

"As a business woman you weren't at all surprised to see him tonight, now were you, Miss Houlton?"

"I'm afraid I gave myself away completely. I should have seemed to expect him to rush here, of course—but the fact is I thought at first it was his ghost, haunting the historic home of the Rivingtons!"

"I think we'd better not give her another shock, Lord Rivington. She might turn into a ghost herself. Who do you think came with me, Merrie?"

"Who? Not Dick?"

"No; guess again."

She pondered, deeply puzzled, then flashed up at him.

"Not Dad?"

"No. No such luck for you," as he saw her face fall. "Just Gertrude."

"Gertrude? Here? Why—why, how?"

"She got a notion into her head to come over with me—said you wanted her to; and when I got your wire this afternoon in London she insisted on our hiring a machine at once and motoring right down. We meant to find an inn to put up at, but Lord Rivington most kindly——"

"Nothing could be more delightful, I'm sure," Henry Rivington drawled. "You see, as I said, my mother and I had met Miss Hart before, at the Stanton's, in Paris. It's a great pleasure to have you both with us."

And now down the staircase, arm in arm with her hostess, swept Gertrude the Heartless. Strangely, Merrial at once thought to herself that here, certainly, was her sure defense! Gertrude should be turned to account—she must be set to work to melt and bend to her will Lord Rivington. She felt it in her bones that he, verily, was the rod of steel that had resisted her wiles in Paris. Heavens be praised. Gertrude was, on this occasion, a very present help in time of trouble!

THE STORY THUS FAR—Harriet reluctantly but firmly rejected Tripp Hart, an old time playmate. Meeting him at Bar Harbor, Harriet tells him she is to leave her father free to recover from a business relationship, through quince prevention, what?" He was as exuberant as a boy now that they had left behind them the cloudy reminiscence of Gertrude Hart's disserve. By the way, how is it going?"

"I've got to ask a favor about that. Shall fairy-storyish in a title to an American, you see. It's almost mythological to every one but a Newport 'cottager.' I dare say I feel unhappy, too, and I hate myself so afterwards, because I have meant to be kind and I was really cruel. And I have thought it was real when—oh, don't let me be cruel to La-may Face Powder is Guaranteed Pure and Harmless.

Good face powder cannot injure the most delicate baby skin. The trouble is, too many powders are made according to the old-fashioned formulas, made largely of rice powder. Rice powder is starchy, and, like bread flower, it is quickly turned into a gluey paste by the moisture of the skin. This paste clogs the cuticle, swells in the pores, causing enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. The worst of it is, many of the most expensive powders are made in the old-fashioned way with "Poudre de Riz," which is French for rice powder. If you really value the charm of a lovely complexion, use a harmless face powder. There is no reason why you cannot get a guaranteed pure face powder. A specialist makes a harmless powder by using an ingredient doctors prescribe to heal the skin. Every time you apply this improved powder you give your complexion a real beauty treatment. There is a guarantee of purity printed on the box, certifying it does not contain white lead, rice powder or any harmful substance. If you want to get this harmless powder, learn to pronounce the name correctly. It is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame).

Because of the great demand for pure La-may, it is now the most popular complexion powder sold in New York. When you use this delightfully pure La-may, you will say you have at last found the perfect powder, the powder that really stays on until you wash it off.

Thin, stringy, oily hair and a dandruff-choked scalp make a girl painfully self-conscious when she knows some one is looking at her hair.

War's Wonder Healing Agent

The new antiseptic, discovered for war wounds, now used for gargle, mouth-wash, gum infections, skin eruptions, dandruff, etc.

The high death rate among the wounded, early in the war, was a serious Allied problem. Thousands died from blood-poison and lock-jaw, due to infected wounds. American scientists came to the rescue with a new chlorine antiseptic which conquered infection and healed wounds often in one-fourth the usual time. Over 50,000 physicians and dentists are now using it.

Every home and factory may now use this wonderful healing agent in the form of Kloria Tablets, easily used by dissolving in ordinary water, and very inexpensive.

Kloria doesn't smart, is soothing, harmless and not poisonous. Yet it destroys germs more rapidly, more efficiently than any antiseptic ever known before. That is why it heals so quickly.

In tender, bleeding, shrinking gums, Kloria attacks the germ cause, with amazing results. All gum soreness and bleeding usually disappear in one week. It also makes the most effective mouth-wash for preventing tooth-decay, gum infections, tonsillitis and contagious diseases.

Kloria takes the place of all old-time healing salves and antiseptics. Cuts, sores, boils and burns often heal in one-fourth the usual time. Skin eruptions and itching, eczema, dandruff, ivy poison, etc., promptly fade away. Kloria also destroys all offensive body odors instantly.

Sold by druggists or mailed prepaid for 50 cents. Money refunded if not entirely satisfied.

Package gives directions for making proper strength solutions for all uses. The liquid keeps perfectly in a bottle, ready for use.

Mid-Summer Savings on Fine Furs

The stunning models illustrated on this page reflect the accepted modes for the coming season. Their correctness is assured by the reliable House of A. Bishop & Co.

37031 Hudson Seal Cape-Coat, 48 in. long, $775.00

ALL indications point to the fact that substantial savings can be made by purchasing furs now for winter wear. The prices quoted by us represent unusual values and are quaranteed to be at their lowest point.

The decided shortage of fur workers in America not only has limited the manufacture of fine fur garments just at the time when Fashion dictates specify the wearing of furs in abundance, but foretells rather sharp price advances in the future. In fact, the demand is quite likely to make it almost impossible to secure satisfactory fur garments later in the season at any price.

Present showings are complete with the very newest—naturally earliest selections will be the happiest. The distinctive touch so characteristic of things of genuine worth is quickly discernable in the creations we have selected for our host of customers.

In order that purchases may be made conveniently, we invite reasonable deposits and will store selections, without charge, until the season's opening.

Remodeling and Repairing

The same difficulties which exist in the manufacture of furs make it imperative that you order remodeling and alterations immediately. You will be much better pleased with results.

HELEN FERGUSON—isn't she pretty? Miss Ferguson is an Illinois girl. She was born in Decatur in 1901 and educated in Chicago. Her first work for the screen was done for Blackton, in "Safe for Democracy." After that she played for Metro, Vitagraph and Goldwyn. She has just finished Jack London's "Burning Daylight," with Mitchell Lewis, for Metro.

Miss Ferguson is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds and has brown hair and eyes. We even know her telephone number. It's Columbus 10028, which doesn't mean that she lives in Columbus, Ohio. —Mae Tinee.

EILEEN PERCY was "discovered" by Douglas Fairbanks. She was his leading lady for some time; then she played for Robertson-Cole and was afterward seen in Hampton-Hodkinson's "Desert Gold." Then she got married.

She announced it was good-by fame, hello domesticity, for hers. Now however, the announcement is out that she returns to the silent drama in Fox productions.

Her first picture for this company will be "Her Honor, the Mayor." —Mae Tinee.

THE INTERNATIONAL SUFFRAGE CONFERENCE in session at Geneva, Switzerland, last month. Twenty-five countries were represented at the gathering by about 200 delegates and alternates, including two from Chicago—Mrs. Jacob Baur and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis. One might, perhaps, have expected the galleries to appear more crowded. However that may be, it is interesting to note, in the right foreground, the evident equanimity with which the delegations from Great Britain and Germany found themselves seated side by side.

TWO OF THE FRENCH DELEGATES to the suffrage conference—Mme. Cremieux and Mme. Malaterre-Sellier—obligingly pose for a photograph in front of their taxi on their arrival in Geneva. No one seems to have objected to the suspension of traffic, but can you imagine what would happen if a Chicago camera man proposed a similar proceeding in the loop?

LADY ASTOR, M. P., and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt of New York, president of the International Women's Suffrage alliance. Lady Astor, who was one of the famous Langhorne sisters of Virginia, delivered a notable address at the conference, and Mrs. Catt, of course, presided over its sessions. The photograph was taken in the convention hall at Geneva.

A FRESHENING treat, indeed—a sparkling, icy drink of Ward's Orange-Crush or Lemon-Crush during a hot day's work at the office. Their fruity flavor and deliciousness cool and brace you through and through. Specially delightful is an Orange-Crush or Lemon-Crush ice-cream soda!—or sundae!—or malted milk!

These drinks are honestly pure and wholesome because the rare flavors come entirely from the delicate, luscious oils pressed from freshly gathered oranges and lemons, combined by the Ward process with finest granulated sugar and citric acid—the natural acid of oranges and lemons.

Interest Runs High at Portrayal of Parisian Fall Dress Decrees

THE number of representatives of America's leading stores that are daily visiting the Parisian dress showing is evidence of widest recognition of the unique fashion-function that Crown performs—proof of the thorough acceptance of Crown as the closest point of contact with Paris in America.

The speed with which our designing staff in Paris creates and transmits adaptations of new dress modes, the constant broadening of the service it renders to every American store of fashion-standing, are both brilliantly exampled in this Autumn display.

So many new dress models are already added—fashionable fabrics are so inclusively represented—the display is so complete and comprehensive in price-range, that it is a more productive source than ever of that Parisian atmosphere and authenticity, which the better stores realize must be part of their Fall dress showings to assure their definite success.

"THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN NEWPORT"—Miss Geraldine Graham was accorded this title by general consent at the Rhode Island resort last season. This photograph was taken at Belmont Park, L. I., during the recent United Hunts meet.

SIX PEOPLE WERE KILLED in this wreck of the Chicago-bound California limited on the Santa Fe railroad near La Junta, Colo. A defective part on the locomotive broke while the train was running at high speed and the engine and forward cars piled up into the chaotic mass shown in the picture. Under the circumstances it was surprising that the number of deaths was not greater.

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

"NATIONALIZED" CHILDREN OF SOVIET RUSSIA—More than half of the boys and girls in the larger Russian cities and towns have been taken from their homes and are now living in groups in state institutions. And their mothers like it, Mme. Kollontai, head of the department of child welfare, told John Clayton of The Tribune Foreign News service recently in Moscow. This photograph, taken at "cleaning up" time in one of the homes, shows the systematic way in which the use of soap, water, and tooth brushes is taught.

RUSSIAN "EDUCATION" FROM ANOTHER ANGLE—While advanced theories as to the upbringing of children are being put into practice, the Red government is doing everything possible to break the hold of the Russian church on the people. One method is opening the tombs of the saints to prove their bodies do not remain whole after death. This tomb is supposed to have contained the body of St. Olga, a Russian princess and regent of the tenth century.

NOT the LINE, but the TRIMMING, MAKES OUR SUMMER FROCKS

By CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The question is nowadays not "what kind of a dress did she wear"? but "what kind of trimming did the dress wear"? The line of our most modish summer frocks is simple, but certainly in our trimming we have sought out many inventions. Braid broom-straws and place them over your organdy frock; cut out pictures from your child's linen primer and adorn a blouse; bind a tea towel about your aunt's hat—do all of these unusual things and you will be merely usual.

The gauzy wings of Fancy have, of course, borne us each in this preamble. Nevertheless, this is quite true. We have introduced trimmings on this season's frocks which would never have been thought of during any previous season. If they had been, the relatives of the afflicted would have been quietly looking up a sanatarium. Nowadays, however, nervous trimmings don't indicate any nervous breakdown on the part of the designer. They indicate extreme sanity and poise.

The nice thing about many of these trimmings is that they are not costly. You can do them yourself, and if you have not the time your 4 year old child can apply all of his kindergarten skill and do them for you. The main thing is to be clever enough to think of something silly.

They are using cotton nowadays on silk frocks. It is part of our present system. We turn everything round and call it chic. Thus, one of the French designers sends over a green taffeta, the entire skirt of which is embellished by white cotton threads used in both long and short stitch. The hem of the same skirt shows a row of white organdy disks appliqued with the white cotton thread and echoed in a wide organdy sash.

Of course, a rose of any other material would perhaps look as sweet, yet organdy culture is now intense and one sees on all manner of silk and cotton frocks blooms made of this fabric. This includes organdy dresses, on which the flowers occur in contrasting tint. These organdy flowers, centered perhaps with wool, are very smart on ratine frocks.

Organdy is functioning in all manner of different trimmings. Among the latest of its forms is one where strands are loosely braided together and applied as edging for sleeves and girdles. In fact, everything is braided almost as much as Gretchen's hair. Ribbons are especially noteworthy in this connection, and a dash of color may be obtained by using three different colors of ribbon in the same braid.

We're not yet all wool and a yard wide, but it sometimes seems as if we were all wool trimming and a yard high. Wool embroideries and stitching galumph all over the thin frocks. And as to the yard high, look at many of the summer skirts! They are knee protectors and that is the very best that may be said of them.

However, there are some skirts which are growing longer. Notable among these are the new bustle frocks now seen in the shops. These are generally made of taffeta or satin draped over a lace underskirt. Many of them are absolutely polonaise in effect and naturally enough they require a longer underskirt. If they did not get length they would make the wearer look very much like a mansard roof without a house underneath.

These bustle dresses are worn more by the shop windows than by folks. The two silhouettes most in favor this summer are the long straight line broken by a sash or perhaps a touch of bouffancy at the hips and the underskirt with tunic. And when it comes to tunic how these do frolic with trimming! And what various materials are employed! Among the newest of tunic materials is the hand knotted fish net, very jaunty when worn over taffeta slip and particularly effective if roses are set here and there among the lattice work. All sorts of nets and lace and tulle tunics appear for evening wear, and the nets especially afford manifold opportunities for jazzing. Very often the black ones are heavy with embroideries of silk, or beads, or metal, and these embroideries are likely to be inspired by the lotus leaves, ibis, and other emblems of ancient Egyptian art.

For the sort of frock which may be worn both in the afternoons and evenings many smart women are selecting black taffeta. One of such frocks which I saw the other day might have been copied direct from one of Velasquez's portraits. For the overskirt was held out over the hips in the true farthingale style and the little tight bodice would have made any seventeenth century infanta feel perfectly at home. Detail of this frock were the design of colored beading which stiffened the overskirt, the narrow front panel of ecru lace, and the lace undersleeves which emerged from a cap of black taffeta to puff to the elbow. The deep V shaped neckline was also filled in with the ecru lace, and a notable new feature was a twisted strand of this lace tying in a smart bow at the side to give a tiny peplum to the bodice. Please do not forget, either, that many of the smart frocks of this summer, both silk and cotton, are showing the V or surplice neck.

READING from left to right—An organdy frock of citron stitched in jade green and an organdy hat which is corded in raffia and trimmed with straw flowers—the whole in tones of citron. Valenciennes lace tinted to match the coral organdy of the gown is the outstanding feature of the next frock, accompanied by a hat of coral leghorn with grosgrain ribbon. Sash and parasol of rose taffeta and a double brim hat of rose organdy stitched with wool yarn and exploiting organdy roses of deeper tone than the background join to give charming color climax to the charming little batiste frock of hyacinth blue. Next, flowers of a feather in tones of buff and terra cotta flock together on a quaint bonnet of natural leghorn worn with a dress of Nile green satin, which possesses a double overskirt of lighter green embroidered in wool of the latter tint. Last, a brown organdy with applique of brown satin motif is draped over straw colored satin, and completed by a hat of black velvet trimmed with straw flowers—also by a black velvet parasol faced with straw color satin.

A frock such as the above would be the very thing for the informal dinner at the country club. So would those other black taffetas embroidered in brightest of colors in peasant designs. So would the others having ruffs and perhaps other trimming of white organdy.

For dances at the country club, the organdy continues to have more devotees than it knows what to do with. Any of the frocks pictured on this page might do for such occasions, as well as for the afternoon affairs. There is, too, a more severe case of organdy dance frock which is quite new this year. This is absolutely sleeveless and is made quite high at the neck. Instead of being bouffante the lines of these frocks are almost straight. They are often achieved by a tunic which winds narrowly about the figure in an oblique direction, and they are nearly always made of two shades of organdy. A taffeta or satin sash is the last symptom.

We all remember the white lingerie hat. Why shouldn't we, when it devoted its whole career to making us look as plain as we were intended to look? How it dulled our tresses—unless they were black—and made us look sallow even under the rouge. Yet this year folks are wearing white organdy hats which recall those disasters of other days. However, they do apply the brakes. For these present white hats are draped in black tulle or black Chantilly and that makes all the difference in the world in becomingness. Very often, too, underneath the drapery one sees a big floppy rose of dark taffeta or organdy in contrasting shade.

A great deal of draping is used on all kinds of summery hats. Thus models of pale yellow organdy come off most charmingly from the hands of brown tulle or net, and it is possible to make your head look like any kind of a summer cloud that you wish.

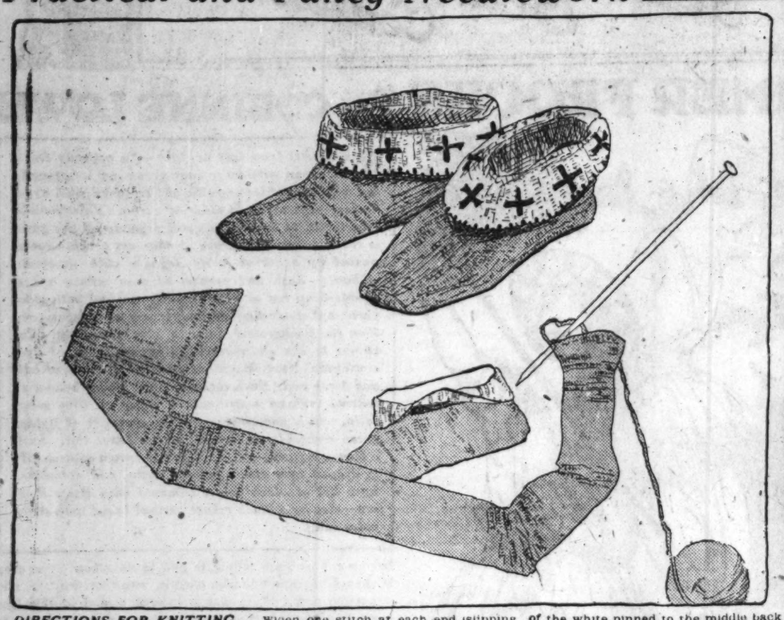
Practical and Fancy Needlework BY CLOTILDE



DIRECTIONS FOR KNITTING SLIPPERS.

THERE is no more popular form of fancy work today than knitting, and there also seems to be no end to the variety of articles one can choose from. And while sweaters of different kinds are immensely popular to work on, there are no doubt many who would be glad to learn how to make some good looking slippers.

The pattern illustrated will outwear several pairs of soles, and can be made of heavy or lightweight yarn, and so be suitable for winter or summer.

Double or single Germantown or zephyr will work up equally well and two skeins of Germantown for the foot part and one for the cuff will be about right.

For the double yarn Nos. 4 or 6 bone knitting needles will be right, and for the single yarn smaller ones.

Cast on 10 stitches for a No. 5 sole or smaller, and 12 stitches for a 6 or 7 sole. Knit once across plain, and after that always slip the first stitch. After three times across have been knitted when one stitch at each end (slipping the first stitch as usual).

Continue in this manner, knitting three times across plain and then widening at each end the next time across until there are 32 or 36 stitches on the needle (depending on the number of stitches cast on). Bind off after knitting three times across plain until 12 stitches are left on the needle. Continue knitting the plain strip until it is long enough to go around the slipper sole.

The knitting of this foot part of the slipper should be done as tight as can be and still allow the stitches to slip off the needle easily.

Say you have chosen a delicate shade of pink or blue for this foot part, you should have a creamy white for the top or cuff part. For this cast on 12 stitches and knit a strip (knitting this loosely) long enough to go around the foot part.

Sew the foot part together with worsted on the wrong side, then sew the white strip together in the same way. Lay the white strip inside the foot part so that the edges of both meet at the top, and having the seam of the white pinned to the middle back of the foot part, and the wrong side of the white strip showing. Sew these two strips together with waxed thread, then stand the cuff up straight and holding the right side of the white strip towards you, crochet in the single stitch in black all around the outer edge of the cuff; then crochet a second row, this time in white.

Work small stars in black at intervals on the cuff, and then sew a piece of half inch wide silk elastic together the right ankle size and holding or pinning it in place around the slipper, hem the crocheted edge of the cuff down over the other sewing, leaving the crocheted edge free.

Finish in the front with a ribbon bow or two small balls made of the worsted.

Then sew to sole. Of course any combination of colors may be used, but the white and black tops are supposed to represent ermine.

These slippers are suitable for men or women, and they keep their shape so well one never wants to be without a pair.

AN INTERESTING problem came to me in my mail this last week from a reader who signed herself Loretta.

"The girls in the office have been discussing how much clothes count in the making of an attractive and beautiful girl," she wrote. "And we have agreed on this scale:

"Clothes, 40 per cent.
"Face and figure, 30 per cent.
"Personality, 20 per cent.
"Brains, 10 per cent."

I appointed myself an inquiring reporter and stopped people at random, asking their opinion on the clothes idea and the other ingredients which make the femme charmante. And here below you have the unbiased opinion of fifteen men and fifteen women from these various walks of life.

Personality and Brains Inseparable.

The consensus was that personality and brains were so intricately interwoven that the dividing line of personage was elusive as the proverbial thin sense.

From the small schoolboy, aged 12, with a reputation in his family for an eye for the pretty misses in his class, who stated that personality and brains were a distinct two-in-one ingredient. But for the sake of argument I asked that the figures be divided, although this personal opinion of the small boy and many of his grown up freres that it is an almost impossible division, for without brains you are negative and colorless—and without personality. By brains I do not mean a college education—but the brains that make you do what you are doing as well or perhaps a little better than the other fellow.

Difference in Viewpoints.

The woman and man point of view differ, as you will see on the chart below, over 50 per cent of the woman vote going to brains and personality combined, whereas the men show a little less than 40 per cent demand. Here are the charts:

The face and figure got a jump in the male vote, with the policeman throwing in a 100 per cent clear and the judge 94½ per cent. But clothes, strange to say, got the lowest vote, which is a bit of a blow to womankind as these hours and dollars are spent figuring out ways and means to acquire the latest wrinkle.

CHETA: YES, THE SUN WILL fade the color of the hair with too long exposure. A certain amount of sunning is good for it—but I have seen hair bleached out and dried up like hemp as the result of an unbonneted enthusiast patron and an intensely hot summer. The matter of protecting it is simple.

PIERRE: THE USE OF SALT AS a pyorrhea preventive is recommended by dental specialists, and was recommended by the army dental surgeons as well. It hardens the gums, and is applied to the tooth brush just as powder or paste is.

LOUISE: THE WHITE SPECKS on the nails cannot be helped by external application. They are caused by pushing the nails with some metal instrument.

Something Soft and Warm.

Last year I went to spend a few days with my uncle, who lives on a farm. While there I met a young girl whose father is a neighbor of my uncle. She asked me to call, so I did. It being late in the fall and the weather cool, I was asked to sit in the kitchen by the cook stove. After talking a short time I felt something soft and warm on my feet, and pulled them from under the stove to find they were covered with dough. Her mother had put her bread to rise, and I got my feet in it. Being confused, I asked for a drink of water, and while she was gone for a glass, I slid out the back door leaving my footprints on the kitchen floor, and caught the first train home and have not seen her since. G. S

Forgot the Stocking.

In the early spring, I bought a hat with a transparent crown. One evening a man called to take me to a theater, and although it was quite cold, I did want to wear the new hat, so I put a stocking inside the crown, to protect my head from the cold. I removed my hat in the darkened theater, and soon became deeply absorbed in the play. During intermission, while the house was brilliantly lighted, I noticed people looking smilingly in my direction. My hat was off, but the stocking was still on my head. M. C.

New to Her.

One evening my sister and two boys were in the kitchen making fudge. I came sailing through the dining room toward the kitchen when I saw on the dining room table a dish of fruit. I exclaimed, "O, Helen, where did you get the shriveled oranges?" When they all howled I could not imagine what was so dreadful about that. O, but they weren't shriveled oranges, but tangerines, which fruit I had never seen before. To this day the boys call me "shriveled orange." H. E. J.

What the Noise Was.

We had been testing some home brew at our house, and I had been telling about it to some of my companions at work. They asked me for a sample, so next morning I took a small bottle of it in my pocket. I was just comfortably reading the paper on the car when I heard a loud report, and, looking around to see what the noise was, I found that it was the cork to my own home brew that had come off and hit the ceiling of the car. Quite a Violinist.

When I was young I was quite a violinist. One evening I played before a large crowd of people at a church. I was very much excited, but managed to get along until I turned a page and dropped my music. In picking it up, I accidentally placed it upside down, but, thinking I could remember it, I started to play again. I did not play much farther until I forgot what came next in the piece. I had to turn the music right side up, and finished my piece to everyone's laughter. S. S.

An Unusual First Course.

Father brought a man home to dinner, and as mother was away, I had to prepare the meal alone. I decided to serve bouillon (made of cubes) for the first course. Father and the stranger tasted the bouillon, and then both looked at me. Grandmother, however, said: "Dearie, how thoughtful of you to think of my rheumatism medicine. I would have forgotten it."

(She keeps her medicine in a bouillon box, and I had used it.) D. B.

My Funniest Childhood Adventure

What was the most amusing thing you did as a youngster? You must have been up to some tricks. We'd like to hear about it. Address Funniest Childhood Adventures, Chicago Tribune. Don't get this contest mixed with Bright Sayings. It's deeds we want to hear about. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published.

Into the Hog Pond.

I spent my childhood in the country and our old farm saw many an experience that is far more laughable now than it was then. One day while roaming about, my sister and I came to the large lot where the hogs made their home. Sister, a youngster of about 6, naturally was adventurous, and when she saw the hogs feeding near a low truck where their fodder was left, suggested a ride. Up on the truck she climbed, watched for her opportunity, and when one of the biggest of the hogs passed under her, suddenly dropped down on his back. A more astonished pig never lived. With a snort of surprise and fear he dashed wildly across the lot, straight for the hog pond. I began screaming: "Get off, get off," but it was a case of "how can I get off when it's all I can do to stick on." Down into the dirty black pond went the pig with his rider, now a thoroughly frightened one and certainly a wet and dirty one. The other hogs went tearing about madly while I screamed and cried. The timely arrival of the hired man was all that saved this adventure from being disastrous. When my mother saw her plight and heard the story, it was not at all funny to either of us, but now, after twenty years we can look back and laugh over the famous piggy ride. If it could be staged just as it happened, this surely would have been a movie thriller of first rank. L. G.

Too Much Gymnasium.

When I was about 9 years old I joined a gymnasium class and annoyed my mother very much at home by trying all sorts of stunts, which were exceedingly hard on the furniture. One night when I had been sent to my room with strict orders to go to bed at once a bright idea struck me. I would tie my necktie to the gas jet and proceed to swing on it. It never occured to me that the tie might not hold my weight or that the gas jet might not stand the strain. Of course, the fixture broke away from the ceiling at once, and I screamed for help as the gas poured into the room with a loud noise. My father rushed in, put a plug in the ceiling, and then hurried downstairs to turn the gas off. After which he returned and had a busy conference with me. My interest in gymnastics grew less and less from that time on. N. A. W.

After the Game Was Over.

Mother was giving a card party. While they were deep in the game I amused myself as best I could. In the bedroom I tried on all the hats, then investigated handbags and purses. I emptied all of them and put the contents in one big heap. Imagine the bedlam when eleven women tried to identify keys, trinkets, and money! Mother said some left with more money than they brought and others with much less. Mother also said a great deal more—and those words were loud, but her actions were even louder. J. M.

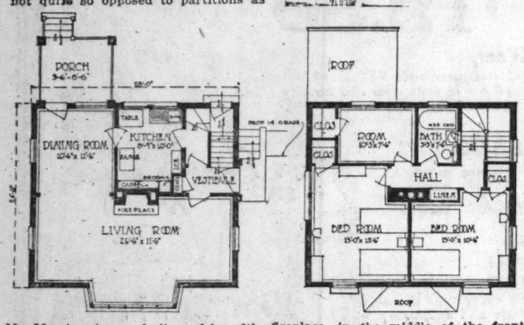
COMMON BRICK CONSTRUCTION

WILLIAM MORRIS said that his ideal of a house was a single big room, so arranged that he could cook in one corner, write in another, receive friends in a third, and sleep in a fourth. Such a room, he claimed, would have a spaciousness impossible when the house is cut up into a lot of cubby holes for the sake of securing what is called privacy.

Very few of us would be ready to follow William Morris the whole distance in this matter, but there is no denying that he had a real idea. The average house does lack the sense of spaciousness, and that is a serious lack. But such a thing cannot be said of the house here shown, which, while not quite so opposed to partitions as



Mr. Morris, gives a feeling of breadth and roominess that is very much worth while. This is accomplished in spite of the fact that the ground plan of the house is very moderate in size; only 28 feet wide over all by 26½ feet deep, not counting the alcove and porch.

This house is intended to be set on a lot whose most attractive features are at the front and side; but this is true of most lots. The entrance is on the opposite or less attractive side. From the entrance door you reach first a vestibule; in front of you is a coat closet, at the right, the stairs leading to the upper floor and a passage leading to the kitchen, and on the left, the doorway to the living room.

This is a great, splendid room, sweeping clear across the front of the house, 26½ feet long by 11½ feet wide. A window admits light from either end, in the middle of the inside long wall is the fireplace, and right opposite the fireplace, in the middle of the front wall, is an alcove made up of seven windows which flood the room with light. This arrangement adds much to the apparent size of the room, and, by admitting the light in one rush, so to speak, leaves a clear wall on either side for the placing of furniture.

It would be difficult to imagine a more attractive room than this, with the center of interest alternating between fireplace and window as the season's change.

Immediately beyond the fireplace is the dining-room, which is really a great alcove from the living room. It runs clear to the back of the house, and is 11 feet 6 inches by 10 feet 6. It is lighted by two large windows at side and rear, and, of course, gets its share of light from the living room. There is barely a suggested division between the two rooms.

Back of the dining room is a fine porch, just a trifle smaller than the room from which it opens, thus giving still further contact with the garden.

Turning to the right from the dining-room, you enter the kitchen, 10 feet deep by a little less in width, fully equipped with kitchen furniture and closets, and opening on the opposite side from the dining-room into a little passage. On the one hand, this passage leads downstairs to the basement, with a landing opening on the service entrance; on the other, it opens into the vestibule from which the journey through the house began. This device for placing the kitchen close to the entrance and yet shutting off all cooking odors from the living room is hard to beat.

Upstairs are three bedrooms and a large bathroom, with a handy linen closet. The two front bedrooms are unusually large, the back bedroom is rather small. It would be easy to change this arrangement if the nature of the family made such a change desirable. All the rooms have fine closets. In front of each of the main windows of the big bedrooms is a tiny balcony, really little more than room for a good sized window box, which yet adds much to the interest of the house, whether viewed from inside or out.

This house is built of common brick, laid up with wide joints to get the full beauty of the contrasting tones of mortar and burned clay. The simple, solid, square angled, unpretentious design calls for such a simple, unpretentious and emphatically solid material as common brick. The design fits the medium in which it is worked out.

The same solid, enduring, fire resistive construction is carried all through the dwelling. The partitions are of gypsum plaster laid on metal lath, which means that if a fire should be set in some room it would be held there for so long a time that the warning would be given and the blaze put out before irreparable damage was done. The roof is of asphalt shingles, a guarantee that no stray sparks are going to leave the inmates homeless.

Under present conditions this house can be built in this permanent, safe, solid way for almost exactly the same cost as frame construction. Common brick has come to be one of the least costly of building materials. Its first cost is sure to be not more than 5 or 6 per cent above that of the cheapest form of building; a difference which the lowered cost of insurance alone will cover in two or three years.

The maintenance and repairs charges on a brick house are extremely low, and this one, beautiful to begin with, will grow more beautiful with age. It is an interesting, safe, permanent, beautiful and not expensive home.

Pork and Beans Dyer's

Packed in Vincennes Indiana by Dyer Packing Company

Captive Flavor

Dyer's Pork and Beans have 100% flavor. By sealing the beans in the can with choice tomato sauce and a slice of tender pork before the final cooking, we prevent any flavor escaping.

There is no evaporation of the essence, aroma or goodness as in ordinary cooking. None of the flavor is lost during the Dyer cooking process.

This most delicious food with the sealed-in flavor is offered in the confidence that you'll like it.

At all good grocers.

FIRST— To release the sealed-in flavor, place unopened can in boiling water for ten minutes. The heat releases and intensifies the flavor.

NEXT— Open in the usual way, placing cloth around hot can to protect hand and strengthen grip.

THEN— Serve piping hot and you'll notice their wonderful sealed-in flavor and exceptional goodness.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the ideas that is wanted. No attention will be paid to fancy style. The Tribune will pay for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

OVER THE TELEPHONE.

GEORGE had worked in the same bakery and catering establishment for a number of years and had a telephone acquaintance with many business people. One of their customers had had the same woman do all her ordering for a long that they had become quite friendly. If she asked for extra bread or pies to be added to them, it was quite sure to be arranged in some way.

She used to order cakes that she decided were for herself and must be extra good. It gradually transpired that these were really being sent to a friend in the army and after she arranged with George to have some of these parcels sent direct from the bakery to save her the trouble of packing.

One day she told him there would be no more parcels, for the boy was coming home, but she was planning a celebration and, as she boarded, wanted to order everything from them. George took her order and she was to telephone the next day when to deliver it. Instead, she asked him to have the order canceled.

Thinking it was a postponement he went to tease her, asking if the boy had missed the train or had another girl. He had not noticed the strangeness in her manner until she said she had heard that morning he was bringing a wife home with him.

George felt sorry that he had blundered and could only stammer that he was sorry. However, he decided he would see that girl some time and try to understand the soldier's conduct.

He finally managed it. With him it was love at sight, following a liking by letter, and he at once decided that he was not sorry at all. Much later he confessed her that it was only her pride that was hurt, which didn't matter, but her heart must be kept safe by giving it to him. B. C.

Postpone Final Decision.

"Dear Miss Blake.—I am a young girl of 17, and am keeping company with a young man two years my senior. We are very fond of each other and have planned on being married in a short time. But there is one thing I am in doubt about, and I have come to you for your advice. I wonder whether he will make me a good husband. I am very fond of shows and other enjoyments, but he never suggests taking me any place. He never brings candy or flowers to me, as other fellows have, nor does he very often take me out for a good time. He seems to be contented to be with me at my home, although he makes promises to do things, and even tells me he has certain little gifts for me, but never brings them out. Will you please give me your opinion of this sort of fellow? Will say that he makes very good money, so that isn't the hindrance. BROWNIE."

What may seem like "very good money" to you may seem like very little to the young man when he has paid his board, his barber and his tailor and the bootblack. Young men of 19 rarely are making more than enough to do that. So that I think you would better give him a little more time before making the final decision. He may be "near," and certainly he has not good sense talking about gifts and never bringing them. Considering your youth and everything, I think you'd better wait two or three years.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Unable to Walk.

"I know a dear old lady who is unable to walk, her only means of locomotion being a rocking chair, which she jerks sideways in order to cross the room. Nobody can assist her in moving thus about the room because a wrong movement of the chair will cause her to cry out in pain. She never gets the outdoor air—and you know what that means these beautiful summer days and evenings.

"I thought that perhaps some of your readers had a wheel chair which they had no more use for.

"She does not know I am writing this, nor would I care to tell her until this wish of mine has been realized. May I hope for your kind assistance in publishing my request? F. F. R."

Nothing further is necessary, I know, in explanation of this appeal, which is so urgent.

Popular Music Offered.

"I have a number of copies of popular music which I would be glad to give to any one who calls. F. L. G."

Thank you. Popular music is always in demand.

Shorthand Instruction Books.

"I would so love to take up a shorthand course, but cannot afford it, as I've no one to help me. I do plain sewing and take care of my mother, and her health is very poor. Is there any one who has the 'K. I. Shorthand Instruction' booklet? Also 'McEwan's Easy Shorthand'? I will appreciate it very much if they will donate either one to me. L. H. C."

When prices are so high we can appreciate the trials of a young girl taking care of her mother and managing on a little. I hope the shorthand book will be found for her.

Golf Clubs and Balls.

"Would it be possible for you to locate for me four castoff golf clubs and a couple of balls? The doctor tells me I must have more exercise, preferably golf, but I simply cannot afford the clubs. I shall be glad to pay transportation charges if any of your readers can spare them. U. P. D."

If there are some golf clubs for this young man it will give me great pleasure to furnish his address.

Clothes for Small Sons.

"I am a widow with three small children, and I would appreciate it very much if some kind person would donate some underwear or clothes of any kind which I could make over for myself or the children, who are boys, 2, 5, and 6 years old. Mrs. V. R."

Some mothers among my readers, I know, will have just the sort of clothes you can make use of for your boys.

Must Go to the Country.

"I am the father of four children, and I am sick and ordered by the doctor to go to the country. Is there any one among your readers who has a tent to accommodate five people, and would give or loan it to me? It is the only chance for me, as I could not afford to pay anywhere.

"WILLIAM A. J."

Who can make it possible for Mr. J. and children to get to the country?

Books and Phonograph.

"We are seventy-six boys and girls in a charitable institution, and we need a library of good books and a phonograph. Help us to become useful citizens, so we can be a credit to the state of Illinois by giving us the refining influence of music and good books, now in the formative period of our lives. We need your help.

"HOME OF THE FRIENDLESS."

This call comes from Springfield, Ill. I look for a generous response to this request.

For and By Business Girls

By Loretta King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

SOCIAL INTERRUPTIONS.

A BUSINESS girl should never allow her own, or any one's else affairs to interfere with her job. This admonition is intended for girls who are new to the commercial world. Experienced workers know, and often the knowledge has been gained at great cost, the unwisdom of subordinating their work to unimportant affairs of their own.

There is nothing, I believe, more irritating to an employer than the sight of one of his staff of workers chatting sociably over the telephone or to a personal visitor when there is an immediate and pressing need for her services. It is necessary for the new girl to learn to submit to office discipline, and to realize that her duties there, no matter of what they consist, are of paramount importance, and should suffer no interference from her social activities.

A friend of mine took into his office not long ago, to act as his secretary, a young woman who had never worked before. She was fresh from a business training school, but as she had been recommended to him by a friend as an unusually bright girl, he was willing to take a chance on her adaptability.

His former secretary, who had been with him for years, had just left to be married. He found his new secretary a clever girl. She took his dictation and transcribed her notes with an ease and accuracy which pleased him. She was equally proficient in learning and accomplishing her other duties.

But while she was quick to learn and did everything she had to do remarkably well, she attached too little importance to her work. This was evidenced by the fact that she would allow clients and other business callers to wait for attention until she leisurely finished whatever she happened to be doing, even if it was merely a social chat over the telephone with one of her many friends, or a personal note which she wanted to get off in the next mail. She never seemed in any hurry to finish a purely personal activity just because there were office duties waiting for her.

If she had a visitor in the office when her employer buzzed for her she took her own time in answering the call and usually, instead of dismissing the visitor, she would insist on having her wait until she came back.

This, of course, irritated Mr. R. especially when he found that she didn't even respond to his emphatic "Immediately, please," when he interrupted her once or twice with an important commission.

But her last defection, and it was that which broke the camel's back, was her interruption three times the other day in the course of her employer's dictation, twice to answer the telephone in her office and once to call out some instructions to the office boy as he passed the door. Mr. R. decided to replace her, but in doing so was interested enough to tell her wherein she failed.

If the girl took the kindly criticism to heart, which she undoubtedly did, she will make an excellent secretary to her next employer. But, unfortunately for most inexperienced girls, there are few business men who possess the time or the inclination to point out her mistakes to a new girl, and so the knowledge comes to her either at considerable cost to herself or the unhappy experiences of others.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

PART SEVEN

JULY 11, 1920.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

NEW STYLE OF TRIMMING.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—A new style of trimming seems to be coming in, which surely suits me, and I wonder if it won't be acceptable to you. In all those dress grand specialty is not sewing, it ought to strike a responsive chord. The new idea is to leave a selvedge and sometimes even a raw edge. Everybody knows how difficult it is to whip hem down with tiny, even stitches. One would say the new idea of leaving these raw had come from some amateur. Even the French say you cannot sew a thing down tight, without spoiling its artistic effect. That is why those things are always ripping at critical moments. I used to say that same thing out in Indiana, when I would pin a feather on a hat with good results and would sew it down, only to find it had lost its dashing effect. But to stick to the French ideas and not mine: Some dress are fringed and this fringe is not the lovely finished stuff in silk that costs about a million dollars, but is the frayed, raw edge of the material itself. The artist suggests that this trimming is quite in the spirit of the bolshevistic times, when even the littlest dressmaker decides not to go to work when she suits her to "reste tranquille."

One other general style deduction can be made from the frock under consideration, and then I will tell you what it looks like in detail. You know I have explained that the French go very slow indeed on wash dresses. They never think of wearing them in town, as we sometimes do. They use thin wash goods, and get the effect of summer-dress by combining them, or using them as purely decorative material on costumes of more substantial stuff. The accompanying dress has its foundation of organdie, and this is unusual. To give it substance this organdie is starched and it composes the foundation skirt and the short sleeves. Over it is a tunic of black, soft, silky material, with a skirt that divides in to a V at a point just to the right of the middle of the waistline in front. This results in some drapery in the skirt, all of which is caught on the left hip.

Tucked white organdy foundation and black silk tunic.

White broadcloth tailored suit with cock feathers.

Chiffon dinner dress with sapphire green cock feathers.

The lady wears a hat of white organdy, laid in tiny folds which run around the crown, and is topped with a tuft of black feathers. She has the courage to defy the French mandate for wearing furs, and restricts herself to a soft veil or scarf of white to try to keep herself from getting sunburned. The French are not enough interested in sports ever to consider it chic or attractive to be sunburned.

Why comment on the second offering? It defies anything you can say about it and carries its own story. It is of white, lightweight broadcloth, trimmed in black coque feathers. A strip of them runs from cuffs to elbow. The collar of the coat is of tucked mousseline de soie. The skirt is moderately tight, straight, and run with two rows of stitching up the sides. There is a little white mousseline petticoat to soften the line round the bottom. Frogs chase themselves up the front of the coat, and, incidentally, act as fasteners. This costume is reinforced with a black sailor hat, white as to crown, and garnished with a veil of white mousseline pinked round the edge. The small person wearing this carries a long, black stick. Such is summer costuming in the city of pleasure.

The third offering, a dinner dress, has had a rather curious success. It is effective in a weird way, and curiously enough becomes the long, straggly, Anglo-Saxon figure, as you would see, if you happened to be attending a dinner at the Ritz in London or a house party in the English country side. For I think there are enough of them scattered round England to insure the representation of the model at 9 per cent of such occasions. Molyneux made it, and he certainly understands the peculiarities of our type. It is of soft, faded blue chiffon, and it has the long waist line which we insist upon, and emphasize in a novel way. The blouse is slit below the shoulders in tucked panels, and running underneath these slits at the waist line is a rope of sapphire blue cock feathers. It falls out at the right side until it runs along the floor in a train. The hat which goes with it is of sapphire blue tulle embellished with a group of feathers falling over the right ear that exactly match the feathers of the train. Both hat and gown are edged with threads of silver.

Fall toque of black silk felt, with side pieces of silver cloth.

The fourth sketch shows the very first advance guard of the new fall toques. Isn't it amusing. In material it is like a man's top hat, of soft, black, shiny silk felt. On either side are two ornaments of gilt galloon, covering the ears down to the earrings—which are two enormous pearls. The hat is being worn by a very inscrutable looking English blonde, with quantities of curly hair. It is very chic and fetching, and, for some reason, they call the hat "Egyptian," because, I suppose, it is like the hat on the brass sphinx which is the emblem of the interpreter's caps in the French army.

My two little nephews from the city are visiting me. They find so much in the country to amuse them. The other day we were planning a picnic.

Phil said, "But auntie, where will we eat?"

I told him we would spread a table cloth on the grass, and sit around it. He looked puzzled.

John said, "Never mind, Phil, we will take a nice table with four legs that fold under for you."

Quickly Phil replied, "O, no, you won't; if the rest of the folks sit on the grass I will, too. I've two legs of my own that fold under."

Marion frequently heard her mother say that she had purchased some remnants. Upon asking what remants were, her mother said: "Short pieces that are left over." The next day her mother overheard her to say to her dog, who had a stub tail: "O, Fido, when you got your tail you only got a remnant." H. L. C.

Upon seeing her cousin David barefooted for the first time, Mary Louise exclaimed. "O, mamma, see David with his empty feet." M. L. W.

Lucy overheard her elders expressing their preference for certain kinds of weather, and interrupted their conversation with the surprising announcement: "Well, I like cold weather, for I can put on clothes enough to keep warm, but I've never been able to take off enough in hot weather to keep me cool." MRS. H. R.

Mildred was enjoying very much as pets some half dozen chickens which her daddy had brought home. One day as she was playing with them a neighbor asked her if they were tame. This reply amused her very much. "O, yes; I can pick them right up, but sometimes it takes quite awhile." F. P.

Barbara delights in having her daddy, who is a traveling man, put her to bed when he is home. When daddy had her tucked away in her crib and was kissing her good-by and good-night, she said: "Daddy, don't go away any more, I'm just sick and tired of having only women folk around the house all the time." F. E.

My expected guests failed to arrive, and the roast prepared for them lasted my family a week. It was Jane's turn to say grace. She returned thanks for everything on the table except the meat, and said, "Dear God, I just can't thank you again for this old meat." L. F.

One day after I had been trying to explain something to my sister, she thoughtfully remarked, "You had to use a good deal of language on me to make me understand that." E. H. N.

In the hospital nursery one of the babies has "Price 22¢" on its identification card, evidently its mother's name and room number. Elmer on entering the nursery to see his new brother, noting this tag, turned to me and remarked, "Daddy, look; that one has the price on it, but $2.26 is pretty cheap for a baby, ain't it?" H. D. M.

There were seven in the Jones family. Mother Jones promised that whoever were real good for the next week could accompany her on a visit to the home of relatives in the city. Three days later Bobbie came up to his mother and asked: "Has you decided how much of us is going with you?" B. D. H.

The stork had disappointed sister by leaving a niece. She wanted a nephew. Several weeks later the stork visited the homes of two friends, leaving a boy at each home. Sister thought a little while on hearing the news, and said: "Well, I guess you must have a political pull to get boys." H. J. J.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

JELLY MAKING AND CANNING.

THE United States department of Agriculture, for the benefit of all who will heed its suggestions, argues thus: Home canning is of the utmost importance this year. The shortage of labor on the farms makes it necessary for the canneries to pay high prices for the commodities that will be canned later in the season. Labor in the canning factories is expensive and difficult to obtain. Everything from cans to cartage costs has increased in price, and transportation is slow and more expensive than it was in war times. All this increase must be paid by the ultimate consumer; and there is not even assurance that there will be enough canned products to go around. The solution is home "canning."

The department advises that thinner sirups be used than formerly, and says that a 10 per cent sirup, made of one part sugar and nine parts water, will make palatable any of the acid fruits.

The hard fruits like apples, pineapples and the like can be put up in boiling water, but the department says that a palatable sirup is made by mixing one-half cup of sugar, one cup of glucose [you may substitute white table corn sirup], and eight cups of water. Of course the juice of apple may be put up without any sugar.

Corn Sirup Jellies.

Corn sirup apple jelly will do very well with meat, but is likely to be rubbery. Perhaps this is because we have to cook a jelly so made longer than one made with sugar. And perhaps the person who will learn how to cook out the per cent of water in a corn sirup, and add it to a hot fruit juice, and cook the two together almost no time at all, may be able to get a jelly in which the fruit flavor has not been overshadowed by that of the corn sirup. Even when cooked with sugar for a long time, a fruit juice loses most all of its delicate flavor, and the jelly so made when old will not have the characteristic taste of any fruit.

An ideal jelly must be firm but not solid, as a rubbery jelly is; it must be tender enough to quiver but should retain definite angles when broken or cut.

There are a number of fruit juices which will, like tomato juice, if boiled down enough, jelly of themselves, but the jelly will be tough and gummy. But for flavoring they might, like the tomato juice so cooked down after straining, be worth while.

Canning any fruit juice until such time as the making of jelly seems less expensive is always possible. It should be strained as carefully as though jelly was to be made at once, then sterilized in the bottles. The best sterilizing temperature is probably 160 degrees but at any rate it has been agreed that fruit juices should never be heated above 200 degrees in canning them. At this temperature the work is done in thirty minutes. The bottles must be sterilized first and the person who wishes to do the work well informed.

Completion Temperature 220 Degrees

Applying this idea of low temperature to jelly making, we might conclude that only sun made jellies can retain delicate qualities that the jelly making temperature of completion which is 220 degrees or 221 degrees, must drive off.

July is one of the chief jelly making months. Make jellies now! The widespread knowledge of what pectin is and what it does is now solving the jelly making problem for many housewives, but some people are making the mistake of thinking that pectin is of the nature of a gelatin. It is not, but is more like a cooked corn starch as a thickener.

A bottle of sterilized sour apple juice is as ever ready a supply of pectin as that made of the white part of the orange, to which is added some lemon juice, and more easily prepared, that is, it can be finished and canned for future use all at one period of work. A number of jellies can be made of peckinless fruit juices combined with the apple juice.

Jelly Making Whys.

Why use only firm and fruits a little underripe rather than overripe in making jellies? Because fruits lose acid and perhaps pectin, too, as they ripen, and especially as they overripen. And

MORE FLOWER LORE

By Doris Blake

A four leaved clover found in dew,
A lover found who is always true.
But a four leaved clover withered and dry,
A lover leaves you without a sigh.

One leaf for fame and one for wealth
And one for a faithful lover,
And one that brings you glowing health
Are all in the four leaf clover.

TO find a five leaf clover is good luck plus money to the finder.

Among the Virginian Indian tribes red clover was supposed to have sprung from the blood of red men slain in battle.

If two persons will eat a four leaved clover they will fall desperately in love with each other.

Put a piece of clover in your lover's shoe before he starts on a journey and he will remain true to you.

To be presented with clover brings good luck.

If a girl has no sweetheart let her place clover in her right shoe and start to walk forward with the right foot and she will meet one who will love her.

Wear a bit of clover under the left garter and a large and fashionable wedding will follow shortly.

ANEMONE—The original legend of the anemone was that it sprang from the tears of Venus. The Egyptians believe that the first anemone seen in the spring has magic curing property.

BLUEBELL—If you can turn the bluebell inside out without tearing it you will get the one you love.

BUTTERCUP—Hold a buttercup under any one's chin. If a yellow shadow is cast he or she is in love.

CARNATION—In Queen Elizabeth's time the white carnation was the lucky flower. Pink and red are tears of the Virgin, so folklore hath it. When the Jews led Christ to Calvary the Virgin Mary followed with a heavy heart. When she saw on the way the bloody tracks of her Son's wounds she wept bitterly, and from those tears and her Son's blood sprang these flowers. They bring tears to lovers.

COWSLIP—In some countries superstition has it that the cowslip with its bunch of blossoms is supposed to have the magic power of discovering hidden treasures. The small crimson drops in the cowslip's chalice are used to preserve and restore youthful bloom and beauty.

CROCUS—The crocus is supposed to inspire love, because it represents youth and springtime.

DAFFODIL—Do not let a daffodil's head hang toward you. Turn it the other way to avert ill luck.

A gift of daffodils spells a strong regard.

DAISY—The daisy is the garden coquette. To find out how many children you will have, toss up the small yellow centers of a daisy and catch the tiny bits on the hand when they come down. The number caught indicates the number of children.

FORGET-ME-NOT—A young lady should never give a forget-me-not to a young man. It will bring a quarrel or trouble; but the reverse is the case when a man gives the tender blue flowerlet to the lady. There is a story of the origin of the flower: One day a lover was drowned in an attempt to reach an island on which were the coveted flowers, and his last words as he threw the blossoms to her were: "Forget me not."

FOXGLOVE—The Welsh call it "fairy's glove," the Irish fairy bells, and the French gant de notre dame [our lady's glove].

GERANIUM—The geranium, so the Mohammedans claim, was originally a swallow which was changed to a flower by touching the robe of Mohammed. Another legend is that Mohammed one day washed his shirt and hung it on a mallow bush to dry. When he took it off the bush had changed to a beautiful flowering geranium.

GOLDENROD—The goldenrod is supposed to flower where beneath lie treasures of silver and gold.

HOLLY—A branch of holly with berries on it at Christmastime will bring luck, but for every berry that falls before New Year's a bit of the luck will go.

HYACINTH—An especial fondness for the pink hyacinth indicates an amiable disposition.

It was once believed hyacinths were as productive of sleep as opium.

LILAC—It is lucky to find a lilac flower with five petals.

Give lilacs to a friend
And love will be the end.

PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

9187—Girl's one piece dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2½ yards of 36 inch material and ⅝ yard of plaiting for the neck.
9051—Woman's apron. Sizes 36, 40, 44, and 48 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 27 inch or 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting material.
9153—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4⅛ yards of 36 inch material or 3½ yards of 54 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

THE one piece dress, No. 9153, shown today, is a design that will be becoming to almost any figure. Pongee in the natural color would make up attractively, and there is almost no wearout to the material, and besides it is an ideal silk for warm days.

The treatment of the belt is a little unusual, and fastened with stunning buttons, will be all the trimming necessary, unless one is inclined to do some embroidering. The belt portions and the vest would look well embroidered in almost any colors one chooses. The collar could be made of white pongee and be made detachable.

Often in using a new pattern there are points that are puzzling, and it is not always possible to fully understand the directions at a first reading. So where this is the case lay the entire pattern out on a large table, have the directions close at hand, and plenty of small pins. Then pin the pieces all together, observing every mark and dot and doing exactly right. Where there are places to be gathered, the paper can be laid in small plaits. You will get a very clear idea of the effect and learn just how each part fits into the other, and it is time well spent.

No. 9051 is a pattern for a one piece apron, to be slipped on over the head and buttoned down the back. These aprons are favorites with many women for morning wear, while doing their housework, and this pattern has a new feature in the belt that many may like.

The back is slashed for an opening as far as marked on the pattern, and both sides should be faced with a straight piece, about one inch in width when finished. Then the right side is lapped over the left, the width of the finished facing, and the raw edges overcasted across the bottom and then stitched twice across the width of the facings, about one-quarter of an inch apart, to hold them in place and keep the apron from tearing down the back.

It would be very pretty to use a cross stitch pattern on the belts and pocket facings, or, if you preferred, you could set ric rac braid under the edges of the belt and under the top edges of the pockets. A deep bottom hem is always a good thing, for it gives more "body" or weight, and, if necessary, it will help to lengthen the apron.

No. 9187 is a simple and smart design for a young girl's dress, the large armholes being especially good. Taffeta, crêpe de chine, or the thinner materials would any of them make up attractively, but the dress is so simple in design that probably the heavier materials would be more attractive. A blue crêpe or taffeta would be lovely with the sleeves set into the dress with a narrow piping in the same or some contrasting color. Coral pink or red would look well on the right shade of tan or orange. Then the neck ruffle should be plaited, as plaitings are newer than the gathered ruffles, and the plaiting and puffs for the sleeves should be of chiffon, net, or organdie. They will have to be attached so they can be taken out and cleaned, for soiled or mussed trimmings are anything but an ornament. The upper edges of the sleeve puffings can be set into narrow bands, exactly the right size to fit into the sleeves, and the sleeve edges finished, then the band of the puffing can be caught firmly to the inside of the sleeve.

Another pretty touch for the dress will be to have small ornaments, tassels, or beads fastened to the sash edges, matching in color the armhole pipings.

Open Secrets in Jelly Making.

Because all fruits vary in sweetness and the amount of pectin present in any given fruit varies from season to season. Successful jelly making has seemed to depend upon certain secret methods. The relation of pectin to sugar and acid is perhaps as definite as the relation of soda to sour milk, but just as this latter relation is fairly constant, that is, a half teaspoon to a cup of sour milk, so is the relation of pectin to sugar more or less constant. But because people did not know about the pectin, they have often added too much sugar. More jellies have been spoiled that way than any other. Only so much sugar can be used as the pectin can take up, and this seems to be an equal part, or the same proportion of sugar as pectin. When in doubt use less sugar rather than more.

The Pectin Test.

Add one teaspoon of alcohol to one teaspoon of cooked fruit juice. Almost immediately you will get a gelatinous mass. Or add one tablespoon of hot fruit juice to one tablespoon of Epsom salts—hot to dissolve it—and let it stand at least ten minutes. A recent writer says in reference to the Epsom salt test: "Use a quarter teaspoonful of the salts with half a teaspoonful of sugar and one teaspoonful of cooked fruit juice. Stir this mixture until it is all dissolved, and let it stand five minutes. By the end of this time it will be set in a jelly if the juice contains a good amount of pectin." There are two objections to this: You cannot readily dissolve this amount of sugar, and the second it will crystal with so small an amount of wetness; and, second, it tells you little about the proportion of sugar to use.

Black Currant Jam.

Black currants require less sugar perhaps than any other fruit. They have but a fleeting stay in the markets, but many city back yards have black currants which should be utilized this year. To each pound of fruit allow one-fourth pound of sugar. Put the fruit slightly crushed with the sugar over a bit of fire and stir gently with a wooden spoon until the sugar is dissolved, then bring slowly to a boil and boil evenly until it gives the jam test when dropped on a plate, that is, stiffens. Put up like any jam. This has a foxy flavor which some people dislike.

Peach Jam.

Peach jam made of the early and fully ripe peaches requires only half as much sugar as fruit. Make in small quantities and cook gently. Make a sirup of the sugar and a third as much water as there is sugar, the two cooked together to sirup stage. Prepare the peaches quickly, cut them in bits, drop them into the sirup and cook to jam stage.

A Thin Sirup for Canned Peaches.

Three pounds of sugar and three quarts of water will make enough sirup for a whole bushel of peaches well packed in cans and sterilized by the cold pack method or an old version of it. Drop peaches into hot water, peel and cut in halves, take out pits. Pack closely and symmetrically into jars so as to save space and use half the jars only as in careless packing; fill up jars with the cooled sirup, half seal as in cold pack by screwing on top to first catch. The new method is to put sirup on hot and lower cans into boiling water. The old method was to put them on rack in canner with cold water, bring to a boil, boil ten minutes, take out, screw up as tight as possible and invert to cool. Peaches so canned are delicious with cream and no added sugar.

of the Savoy blend is always a delightful beverage

AS the musician's skillful fingers pick a note here and a note there, and blend them into one harmonious chord, so Savoy experts carefully select the finest teas and blend them into a charming beverage.

The leaves from one tea garden may possess flavor but lack fragrance. Others may have fragrance but little flavor, and the liquor from both may be colorless and thin. Only steaming water can draw their secret from them. And only long experience and skill can combine them in perfect proportions.

Because tea comes from certain tea gardens or because it passes ordinary tests does not make it worthy of the Savoy label. All teas blended under the mark of Savoy must satisfy the most critical judgment in the cup.

So, for instance, when you steep a pot of Savoy Orange Pekoe tea—preferred, either iced or hot, by so many tea lovers—it will have the color of rare Oriental wine, with all the stimulating flavor and fragrance which makes tea a man's drink.

And Savoy is economical. In all varieties it makes 300 to 400 cups from the pound. No wonder your grocer recommends Savoy to careful buyers.

The Theaters

MISS LILLIAN ROSS, who was so truthful a picture of Billy Baxter's little sister June in "Seventeen," will have a part in "Babs," when next season that comedy and Miss Helen Hayes go to New York to try to duplicate their extraordinary success in Boston.

Ian Hay's "Tilly of Bloomsbury" is being made ready for its American career by A. H. Woods. It will be called "Happy-Go-Lucky" in the states and it will be played by O. P. Heggie, Miss Muriel Martin Harvey, George Giddens, Oswald Yorke, Miss Blythe Daly [Arnold's daughter], and Miss Gypsy O'Brien. The comedy is a London success of last season.

Before experimenting with Crane Wilbur's "The Winged God" in Atlantic City the other night Mr. Woods changed its name to "The Sacred Fire." Miss Hazel Dawn is the star.

Joseph Santley, Miss Ivy Sawyer, and their offspring have sailed for England, where Mr. Santley will be introduced by Miss Sawyer to his in-laws, who have never seen him. The Santleys are to be starred next season by Charles Dillingham in a new musical play, name and author as yet a secret.

Although helped considerably by Mrs. Patrick Campbell's presence in the cast, "Madame Sand," one of Philip Moeller's biographical dramas, vanished from London last week. Mrs. Fiske played it in America with success among the cognoscenti.

"The Ruined Lady," which Miss Grace George played so long at the Princess, is having better fortunes in England, according to early dispatches. Miss Rosa Lynd, Miss Eve Moore, and Aubrey Smith have the leading roles in the Comedy.

W. A. Brady and E. Clarence Jones, a partner in the ownership of the Playhouse in New York, are having business troubles, and Mr. Jones has invoked the arbitrament of the law. In his prayer for a dissolution of the partnership Mr. Jones tells the Supreme court that he can't get along with Mr. Brady; that Mr. Brady is paying more attention to his films than he is to his theater; and that the place is losing money. Mr. Jones adds ungallantly that he believes the frequent appearances of Miss Grace George at the Playhouse is one of the causes of its ill success. He is a stock broker.

"Jack" Wilson, whose vaudeville associate, Miss Kitty Gordon, winged an acrobat with a pistol at the Palace not ago, has agreed to pay the wounded gymnast his salary for ten years, provided he is incapaciated for that long a time.

The Democratic presidential convention put a blight on the San Francisco theaters similar to that which befell Chicago entertainments when the Republican aldermen were here. It is related that the Greenwich Village Follies, with a deficit of $3,000 for that week, experienced the first loss in its luxurious career.

Walter Hast, producer of "Scandal," who deserves to share Mr. Brady's sobriquet "The Great Announcer," announces that he will star Miss Evelyn Nesbit next season in a songless and danceless show entitled "A Daughter of Two Worlds."

In "The Theater Through Its Stage Door," published by the Harpers, David Belasco tells how he "discovered" David Warfield:

"The first time I ever saw him he was standing on a soapbox, reciting verses to a street crowd. . . . He afterward became an impersonator of Hebrew types in various companies. . . . I recalled how once, in a broad burlesque of Annie Russell's 'Catherine,' I had observed an uproarious audience quiet down to serious attention under the influence of his wistful expression and the curious note of pathos in his voice. . . . At the music hall one night I again noted his peculiar influence over the audience in a mock-pathetic episode in the piece. It occurred to me instantly that in him lay the greatest potentialities as an emotional star. . . . Other managers could not imagine Warfield as anything but a comic actor. But two characters, Anton von Barwig in 'The Music Master' and Peter Grimm in 'The Return of Peter Grimm,' have proved how great was the genius that had been stifled up to that time."

In "The Theater Through Its Stage Door" Mr. Belasco tells tales of the rise of some of today's "stars."

Community 4th Is Happy Solution of How to Celebrate

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In the old days, when the world was new to a lot of us, and not so very new to a lot more, the way of celebrating the Fourth of July was to bundle the family together and go some place. It didn't matter so much where we went, though we set out with high hopes of a grand old time, but we had to go. Staying home, where we would be at least comparatively comfortable, was out of the question.

If we lived in the country, or were vacationing there, we went to a picnic—usually down by a river, or a creek, where most, though not all, the mosquitoes were night workers and slept till sundown and then sallied forth in swarms to feed upon the invaders. We were bundled into a wagon or a surrey or whatever vehicle happened to be usable at the time, and trundled to the grounds.

The town drunkard got drunk, the town flirt set two or three of the boys fighting, the town tomboy fell out of a tree and tore her newest pink organdie, the town infants yelled and got lost, or got lost and yelled, the town politicians called each other names, and the church guild served potato salad and wondered who on earth baked the burned pies.

If we were of the city—particularly of this city—we collected the family into groups and joined the procession of automobiles that sought the open spaces by way of the main arteries, avoiding such collisions as were possible, and wondering if the insurance company would reimburse us for those that were not.

Or we grabbed Tommy by the hand that had not yet been blistered by one of Mr. Payne's fizzers and little Mary by the hand that was not stuck to an all-day sucker, took the infant in our arms, and herded everybody into the dear old subway, and started for Coney Island or Manhattan beach, or Staten island or some other place on "the shore."

Arrived at our destination, we extracted baby's all-day sucker from the particular ear in which it had lodged, got the older children into their bathing suits, said our say as to what we thought of any woman who would forget the napkins and the forks, bought six bottles of ginger ale and settled down to a pleasant afternoon trying to keep the children from trying to swallow their dill pickles whole or wade across to Spain, the while we took surreptitious eyeshots at the buxom ladies who slept the hours away with their heads in their escorts' laps and the rest of them stretched out along the sands in undulating heaps.

Times have changed, and Fourth of July celebrations have changed with them—in our town, at least. It was a matter of five or six years ago that two oldtimers were hurrying toward the 8:26 one morning in June when they fell to comparing their plans for the coming holiday.

"What," said Bill to Jack, "what are you going to do on the Fourth?"

"Oh, the usual thing, I suppose," said Bill; "and, gosh, how I dread it. We'll have to go some place, though we can't think of any place we want to go. There isn't anything for the kids to do at home—and it wouldn't seem like the Fourth to them if they didn't do something unusual."

"Has it ever occurred to you that if we were to pool the money we spend on these fool excursions we could have a great little celebration right here in the gardens?" ventured Jack. "I know it costs me anywhere from $10 to $20, and we get nothing out of it—nothing but an assortment of family headaches and a little sunburn."

"Same here."

"Why not try a community celebration?"

"I'm for it—if any one will start it."

And that was the beginning of the community Fourth in Forest Hills. The first year there was a sort of street fair, a tennis tournament, a few fireworks and games for the children, that kept them occupied four hours out of the eight. The next year there was a flag raising, and an allegory in the community park, and a dance on a canvas floor laid over the pavement of "Station square."

The third year Theodore Roosevelt, who had heard and approved of the community activities, refused something like 500 invitations to speak in different cities of the country, and made his now famous "100 per cent American" speech from a platform built in our square, the local troop of the state militia held a review, there was a dinner for wounded soldiers and sailors back from the war, the tennis tournament, an exhibition of classic b. v. d. dancing in the park, and the usual children's games and evening dancing in the decorated square.

The fourth year the war had been won and there was much rejoicing, with another allegory and a parade of the military, and a speech by Senator Calder, and singing by the community chorus, and a concert by a military band, and a longer program of games for the kiddies, and a costume dance.

And so year by year the program has been expanded and the entertainment features improved, until now, with 300 families resident in the community, not over 10 per cent of them even think of "going some place" to spend the Fourth.

This year the town crier was out as early as 7 o'clock, all dolled up in colonial costume, ringing his bell and warning the sleepy populace that at 9:30 the American Legion boys would raise the flag, assisted by the Boy Scouts; that at 10 the children's games would start in Station square, with everything from a kiddie car race for the short legs to a tug of war for the huskies; that at 2 p. m. there would be a baseball game between the "Inns and the Outs," meaning those homeless ones who live at the inn and those lucky ones who can thumb their noses at landlords and the like; at 4 p. m. performances of grand opera by a company of professional singers in the park, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pallacci" being the bill; at 7 p. m. a military band concert and community singing in the square, and at 9 p. m. a dance for the debutantes and their families.

It occurred to me, watching these activities, that there may be other communities in this land of happy celebrants that would be glad to know how our town has solved the problem of the sane and safe Fourth, and the children's rightful part in it, and of its success. It is a practical solution of all the ills that formerly beset the day, and is both economical and sane. And it permits mother not only to keep an eye on the wild young patriots who belong to her, but it saves father money and sends him back to work next day with a clear head and a clear conscience. It is a new kind of declaration of independence, to which he enthusiastically affixes his John Hancock and swears henceforth to give support—and a modest check.

"BAB'S CANDIDATE."

Produced by Vitagraph. Directed by Edward Griffith.

THE CAST.

Barbara Marvin.....Corinne Griffith
Senator Marvin.....George Fawcett
David Darrow.....Webster Campbell
Henry Dawes.....Charles Abbe
Aunt Della.....Blanche Davenport

By Mae Tinée.

KIND—Drama.
CLASS—Second.
PHOTOGRAPHY—Splendid.

STORY—The moral has to do with the advantages of the curt and concise and the disadvantages of long-windedness. If he hadn't been such an everlasting talker the young man beloved by the senator's daughter might have won the election. But he needed a big disappointment to cure him—and he got it. Anyhow, he wins the girl, finally, so everything ends right after all.

ACTING—Good. George Fawcett, however, as usual, walks away with the cake. Miss Griffith is pretty and clever, wears good looking gowns, but has a penchant for bloomers.

REMARKS—The scenery is beautiful—especially you'll enjoy the wooded bit along the river. All in all, an acceptable little program picture.

Louise Lovely has signed up with William Fox for a term of years, during which she will be starred in her own productions. They say she's spending quite a lot of time and money on clothes, with an eye to the future.

We will soon have "39 East" in pictures. Constance Binney is working on the adaptation of the play for Realart.

You had heard, hadn't you, that Elsie Ferguson is in Japan vacationing? Since she has been there they say the Japanese fans are deluging her with letters. Writes one ardent Nipponese:

"I am glad to see your honorable face in the recent 'Barbary Sheep' film, and I hope you will kindly give me your photograph to advertise your great acts among our country men. I am sincerely a scholar wishing to learn the movie, so be kind as to give a copy of your face."

John McCormack, the famous Irish tenor, became a technical director at Goldwyn studios for one day last week. Grand opera scenes for "The Great Lover" were in process of being photographed, and Mr. McCormack was persuaded to visit the studios that his experience might be utilized in securing the proper "atmosphere" for several scenes.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

B. S. O.: I'm afraid I can't oblige you by putting the pictures of the actors you mention in the paper, as the characters they represent. You see, we only as a rule print straight photographs. I'm sorry.

MISS M. B.: I'm on THE TRIBUNE, but since your mistake was probably a typographical one only, I'll answer your question. Miss Anita Loos is in Europe at the present time. Letters, however, addressed to her in care of the Constance Talmadge company, 318 East Forty-eighth street, New York, will reach her. You're entirely welcome.

D. S.: Little Wanda Hawley is starring for Realart. This company is located at Los Angeles. Just address Mary Pickford in care of United Artists, Los Angeles.

ALICE F.: Indeed, I gladly accept the little pressed roses, and thank you with all my heart for your thought. Your "love and cheer and wishes" help a lot. Katherine and Jane Lee may be reached in care of Rogers Film Corporation, 1639 Broadway, New York. Address Crane Wilbur, care of N. T. Grandlund, 1493 Broadway, New York. Dora Kenyon, 850 West End avenue, New York. Kay Laurel, Hotel Manhattan, New York City.

F. N.: It would be interesting, wouldn't it, if the gentleman proved to be a relative. I don't know his father's name. He was born in Halifax, N. S., in 1870. Why don't you write to him in care of Paramount, 485 Fifth avenue, New York, and ask him who he is?

P. F. M.: It begins to look as though the success that coquetted with you for so long has at last come to time, doesn't it, P. F. M.? Thanks awfully for the music. Good luck to you.

MABEL B.: No wonder you're excited if your daughter is "making good," as you say she is. I join the mother in wishing her success.

RIALTO.

Austin and Delaney:

"My girl came clean from San Francisco to see me."

"It's about time she came on clean, for she is the dirtiest looking girl I ever saw."

"I've got a hundred thousand dollars back of me. I don't know how far back it is, but if it ever catches up to me I'll show you great excitement in this town."

"Do you see anything ridiculous in my wig?"

"Yes; your head."

"I bought a hat for my wife and I had to run home all the way."

"What for?"

"I was afraid the style would change before I got home."

"What noise was that I heard last night next room to mine?"

"That was me failing asleep."

"Do you want to see two little devils?"

"Yes."

"Go to hell."

"Who was that I saw you leading home last night; any relations?"

"Yes; a full cousin."

"My girl says she likes to make bread, it cleans her hands so nicely."

"That's a nice collar you've got on. I'll bet I know where you got it."

"Where?"

"Around your neck."

MAJESTIC.

Lafrance and Kennedy:

"You certainly threw that fight. Why didn't you block his blows?"

"Didn't I? I didn't see any of them miss me."

"Boy, you went out fast. What did he hit with?"

"I don't know what he hit with, but, whatever it was, it was a success."

"I've got a surprise for you."

"What is it? Are you going to give me half of the money? No, I forgot; that would not be a surprise, that would be an accident."

"No; I'm going to let you fight again tomorrow night. I've matched you with Knock 'Em Dead Pete, otherwise known as Massacre Bill."

"Boy, that's no fighter; that's a nice little murderer. You go get a flock of cannibals to fight that gorilla."

"Cannibals?"

"Yes. I don't want to wake up to morrow with a geranium ring in my hand."

Symphony Concerts Popular Feature of This Season

By Charles H. Gabriel, Jr.

RAVINIA goes into its third week of opera today. In the two weeks past Mr. Eckstein has given one more opera performance and one less concert program to the week, and at the same time has managed to give an importance to the concerts they have not hitherto enjoyed.

The Chicago Symphony's activities have added much to the season's enjoyableness. Tomorrow night will be marked by the appearance of three soloists, Enrico Tramonti, the eminent tenorist, will play one solo, and Harry Weisbach, concertmeister, and Theo. Dare Du Moulin, cellist, will play obbligati from Glazounow's "Ruses d'Amour."

Training the Children.

The Thursday afternoon children's programs have been a popular feature. The attendance has run into the thousands. The explanatory and descriptive lectures by Mr. and Mrs. Marx Oberndorfer have enabled the children, not to mention the grown-ups, to more thoroughly enjoy the orchestra programs which followed. In training the younger generations in orchestral and operatic works Ravinia has come to the fore as one of the best civic educators of the day. The programs are kept on a high artistic level, and made enjoyable at the same time, thus capturing the attention of the youngsters in a way not heretofore emphasized.

Friday, Saturday, and Sunday afternoon concerts devoted to adults are given. During the week to come there will be heard among other compositions Lacome's Spanish suite, "La Feria," occasional movements from Beethoven's symphonies, one of Saint-Saëns' symphonic poems, and Glazounow's "Scenes de Ballet."

Splendid Operatic Program.

The operatic schedule is a notable one. On Friday night Edith Mason is announced to appear in the title rôle of Massenet's "Thais," a rôle in which she has had great success in Europe and during the last season at Ravinia. The rôle of the monk, Athanael, will be presented by Leon Rothier, whose artistry is attracting more and more attention as he is being heard this year.

On Saturday night Florence Easton will make her first appearance this season in the rôle of Cho-Cho-San in "Mme. Butterfly." Miss Easton was one of the first sopranos to sing the rôle in America. She toured the country with Henry W. Savage's company in 1908 when up until that time the opera had not been given outside of Italy.

Miss Easton will also appear in "Pagliacci" on Tuesday night when the complete version will be presented instead of the single act that was given last week. Morgan Kingston and Renato Zanelli will also be of the cast on that night. Miss Easton will appear a third time this week on Thursday night in "Trovatore."

Twelve Operas in Two Weeks.

Miss Mason will appear Wednesday night as Gilda in "Rigoletto." On Sunday night she will sing as Mimi in "La Bohème," with Charles Hackett instead of Kingston in the role of Rodolfo.

During the last two weeks twelve operas have been presented at Ravinia.

MISS MARGERY MAXWELL (Ziegler-Smith)

Miss Maxwell, formerly soprano ingenue and character comedienne of the Chicago Grand Opera company, has been singing in several rôles at Ravinia. She will appear tonight as Siebel in "Faust," and again next Sunday evening as Musette in "La Bohème."

MISS FLORENCE EASTON in "MADAME BUTTERFLY." MISHKIN PHOTO

Miss Easton sang the rôle of Cho-Cho-San in "Madame Butterfly" in 1908 as a member of Henry W. Savage's touring company, which was one of the first to present the opera in America. She will be heard in the part at Ravinia next Saturday night in the first performance this season of the tragedy.

All have been remarkable for accuracy, finish, and brilliancy, especially when it is recalled that some European houses present no more than that number during the entire season.

The March to Frisco

By Guy F. Lee.

[Adapted from Robert Southey's poem on Napoleon, "The March to Moscow."]

The Crown Prince Woody-doo's pals set off
On a summer excursion to Frisco;
The fields were green and the sky was blue,
Morbleu! Parbleu!
What a pleasant excursion to Frisco.

Two or three thousand and mebbe more,
Must go for the Prince to Frisco;
Pay rollers in dozens, P. M.'s by the score;
Cabinet ministers not a few;
While the fields were green and the sky was blue,
Morbleu! Parbleu!
They all beat it out to Frisco.

There was Burleson; Daniels, too,
Heigh-ho for Frisco!
And Carter Glass, "heir" to Woody-doo,
Doing their bit at Frisco.
"We stick till hell is a skating rink,"
That was Cone Johnson's bon mot, I think;
For nothing would do,
While the fields were green and the sky was blue,
Morbleu! Parbleu!
For the whole of the crew
Nothing would do
But they must be busy for Woody-doo,
They must get busy at Frisco.

The Waitful Watchers in Royal Floats
Sailed o'er the mountains to Frisco;
But Palmer he felt his Quaker oats,
And with Cox's army helped get some goats;
Morbleu! Parbleu!
They ruined the march to Frisco.

The Anti-Administration Birds,
They also excursioned to Frisco.
Brennan and Taggart and Murphy, too,
They could fight, though they couldn't parles vous;
And, O, what a waste of wind and words:
The Crown Prince's cream all turned to curds.
Morbleu! Parbleu!
'Twas a heluva time at Frisco!

They all took a hunk out of Woody-doo
In the horrible slaughter at Frisco;
The Hoosier he bit off a generous chaw,
The Tiger ferociously worked his claw,
And Brennan, the Sucker, Hee Haw! Hee Haw!
He wasn't the Sucker at Frisco!
Sacrebleu! Ventrebleu!
Though the sky without any doubt was blue,
It wasn't the lachrymal, indigo hue
Of the Crown Prince's sad and sorrowful crew
Who saw at last that he Woodn't-doo,
On the long, long trail from Frisco!

Aldis Garden Is Popular Retreat Sunday Mornings

By Mme. X.

ON a bright and sunny Sunday morning there is no more charming or popular rendezvous on the north shore than the Arthur Aldis' friendly, unself-conscious gardens. Some gardens are like some people—conscious of their clothes. The Aldis garden just "growed" the way it is today, and keeps on growing that way, without any apparent effort.

Here on Sundays, a little after the hour when the orthodox have gathered in their temples to be reassured as to particular brand of their orthodoxy, the unorthodox collect, or rather they straggle in, bringing their week-end house parties with them. There are two tennis courts for the energetic, and usually each is occupied by a foursome. Around these a gallery gathers, the women in gay chiffon or muslin frocks, the men in flannels. Some of the former bring their embroidery or lace making. The masculine element sits about smoking and discussing the topics of the moment.

Among the habitués are the next door neighbors, the John McCutcheons, whose pretty white cottage backs up on the Aldis place. Both the McCutcheons are good tennis players. Other visitors are Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Shaw and Miss Sylvia Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ryerson, Mrs. Edward Hasler, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Boydeh, William Turner, Mr. and Mrs. James O. Hinkley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Atkinson—in short, each Sunday sees a group of from twenty to thirty people gather there.

After tennis many an overheated mortal doffs his garments and takes a dip in the pool, the famous pool that was the pioneer of its kind in this part of the world. When it was first instituted it seemed an enormous body of water. Today its rivals in the land are as a rule much wider, longer, deeper, but none has ever surpassed it in popularity. Its owners have been so generous in urging their friends to make use of it whenever and as much as they wanted to that I think many of the pool's amphibious devotees feel as if they had, not squatters', but spatterers' rights in it.

Even in the lonely midnight hours, when most of the world is sunk in slumber, shadowy figures have been known to appear from the shrubbery and almost soundlessly slip into the sleeping waters. When Mr. Aldis has crept from his downy couch, hoping to surprise a naiad (only nowadays it would be a dryad) he has oftener spied from his front step some young home couple, newly wed, out for a star-lit plunge. So quietly, he steals back to his room, leaving the aquatic ones to the sleeping flowers, the night moths and fireflies.

Keen About Modern Art.

The Aldis house is as interesting and unstudied as their garden. Both Mr. and Mrs. Aldis are keen about modern art, and many times have held out a helping hand to young artists at a moment when to the artist life and art looked heavy with clouds. Some curious and fascinating pictures hang on the Aldis walls. There are, for instance, two canvases by a Sicilian painter who is comparatively unknown in this country, one Giuseppi Biasi. A strange and melancholy procession of hapless folk are crossing the front of the larger painting against a background as forbidding and bleak as any a William Blake could conceive and depict. The other presents a religious procession, where again the artist throws an atmosphere of tragedy and sorrow, which seems the inevitable and final destiny of man.

A year or so ago Mrs. Aldis took up the study of drawing and painting, although she had already made for herself a name as a poet. Why does she do this? cried her wondering friends. The answer is ready for them today in a little portfolio of drawings and verses. Such a whimsical, gay delightful humor is here displayed, together with such a skilled hand in both drawing and color, that Lewis Carroll himself might have inspired the verse and Boutet de Monvel the illustrations.

After the War Spirit.

Apropos of matters artistic, is the interest in art taken by some of the youth of the day, especially among those who were tried out by the fierce flame of the great war. For instance, there's young John Wentworth, who made a fine record in aviation. He worked before the war in Howard Shaw's office. Since he came home he says he can't return to office work—at least not at present. So last winter he attended the Art institute classes, studying drawing in its various phases, from casts, from still life, and from models. His fellow students didn't know who the young athlete was, nor that he'd been an aviator. They only sized him up as a mighty good fellow, though a silent one. His ambition is to go abroad to study painting in Paris.

He's only one of the many who returned from that disrupting experience with a spirit struggling to escape the dull routine of daily busines life as it exists today. That money making is not the principal object of the youths who over there saw for the first time the stark realities of life is evidenced by many things.

There is the case of a young American aviator named Stehlen, who flew with the Lafayette escadrille, doing dashing, daring, dangerous things. When war on the western front was over he went to the mysterious region where Letts and Lithuanians threw themselves against the Satanic power of bolshevist Russia to defend their new found freedom. He added to his laurels as he rained down death on the fanatics of Trotsky. When he finally came back to New York, his home, a moving picture concern offered him some fabulous sum to go with it to South America, where they proposed to create the greatest film picture ever undertaken. The sum was something like $40,000. When asked if he were going to accept it he said he guessed not; he thought he'd go back to the Letts, who seemed still to need help.

Children to Play "Hansel and Gretel."

When driven from high Olympus the muses, Melpomene and Polyhymnia, certainly took refuge in Lake Forest. Even though the Aldis Players are in a torpid state these days, the community is not without its devotees to the drama. This time it is the Episcopal church which inspires the amateur thespians. On Wednesday evening, July 14, "Bastile day," a performance of "Hansel and Gretel" will be given in the garden of the Robert Thornes, where a lovely green amphitheater awaits the young actors. The money raised by this entertainment will be used to refurnish and refurbish the Sunday school rooms of the Church of the Holy Spirit.

Among the performers will be the children of Mrs. Hasler, of Mrs. Walter Kirk, and of Mrs. A. A. Sprague. Among the patronesses are the Mesdames Mark Cummings, A. A. Sprague, Oscar Johnson, Carter Fitz Hugh, Walter Kirk, Stanley Field, Wm. Vincent, Edward Baker, George Keiser, Thomas Marston, W. E. Casselberry, and Edward Hasler. In case of rain, not unknown in these parts on such an occasion, the performance will be given in the Thornes' ballroom.

To Honor Our Dead.

Thirteen of the young men of Lake Forest lost their lives in the great war. To honor their memories and to strengthen the tie that binds the two great republics, it was proposed to found a bed in the American Memorial hospital at Rheims, France. To this end Mrs. Hugh McBirney, Mrs. Russell Tyson, and others went to work to raise in Lake Forest the necessary $6,000. So $5,500 has been collected. Except for Alexander McKinlock and young Wallace Winter, all this thirteen were sons of the town.

Neglect of Disabled Soldiers.

Not unlike a man who is unshaven, collarless, coatless, and in stocking feet is U. S. hospital No. 28 these days. Perhaps you know it better as the Fort Sheridan hospital. Built to accommodate 9,000, it now shelters less than 700—700 rather discouraged, disgusted men. I don't think you would find many of them keen to rush to save their country again.

A year ago there was still much enthusiasm on the parts of a grateful public to prove its gratitude to those same men for doing well and quickly a hard and dangerous job. Every day there was a fairly numerous assemblage of motors sent to the fort to take some of the cripples out for a drive, a treat they prized more than any other. Of course there were never enough machines for all the lame, leggless, armless, and otherwise disabled men who lined up expectantly hopeful. But there were enough to justify their waking up each morning with pleasant anticipations.

Nowadays it is quite changed. There are no more strings of motors waiting to take the cripples out for an airing, though, heaven knows, there is no dearth of automobiles in the land. The public seems to have put the war and all who took part in it up on that dusty upper shelf where it has stowed its memories of the civil war and its traditions of the revolutionary war.

Does it ever occur to the countless thousands who daily whizz through the grounds of Fort Sheridan to wonder what thoughts may be forming in the minds of those maimed young men sitting or lying about in such dull idleness on the dusty grass of the fort, and watching the motor world go by? Do the passersby imagine for a moment that those erstewhile fighters are congratulating themselves that to them was allotted by fate the supreme honor of proving by the next to the greatest sacrifice possible to youth—permanent disablement—their belief in their country and what it stands for? Are those wrecks of humanity pitying the gay crowds flying past because they, too, did not know the joy of protecting a grateful republic? Is it likely? I ask you.

Dilapidation Is Depressing.

A few stanch friends stay by the Fort Sheridan wounded, however. For over a year Mrs. Henry Mason of Highland Park has not only provided them with afternoon tea, music, and pretty partners for those who could dance, but she has made it a point in fair and foul weather to be there herself daily.

But the charming Y. W. C. A. young women have been dispensed with by the powers that be, and their pretty hostess house is run by some branch of the army organization. There is no Y. M. C. A. there any more, nor any K. C's. Even if the hospital is to be given up in the autumn and the men still in need of care are to be transferred to another hospital, it doesn't seem to be an adequate reason for letting the grass go uncut and a general air of dreary dilapidation hang like a miasma over the whole place. It isn't keeping up to the standard set by our army traditions and can't fail to have a depressing effect on patients and their visitors.

Historical Society Plans Expansion.

After a month's acquaintance with their recent purchase, the Gunther collection of curios, the trustees of the Chicago Historical society passed a resolution to the effect that the collection was to be kept intact until sufficient time has elapsed to study it as a whole. Also, that no portion of the collection shall be sold which can be even remotely connected with the history of this hemisphere (a touch of the Monroe doctrine in that last), and, furthermore, the women who helped the trustees raise the needful first payment are recognized in the proviso that they shall be consulted in any proposed sale of objects in the collection.

The historical society is likewise planning to expand its scope of interests so that it may, as soon as possible, grow into a great museum of American history, to be housed in a fine new building, an enterprise as important in its way as the Art institute. Strange as it may seem, there is no one museum in the country of first importance entirely devoted to American history.

Do superstitions interest you? We confess to a sneaking fondness for them and a new one is an event. For instance, did you ever hear that a two dollar bill brought ill luck? It seems to be quite widely accepted as a fact. Up till now, however, we have existed in happy ignorance of this dire omen. Henceforth no greenback or gold or silver certificate will be accepted without careful scrutiny, and if it be found to be of that luckless denomination—well, it is yet too soon to decide whether it were better to burn it up or tear it into fragments.

A Long Island Wedding of Interest.

Chicagoans will have more than a passing interest in the marriage of Miss Mary Lawrence Post, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Waldron Kintzing Post of Bayport, Long Island, to Gerard Vernon Wallop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Henry Wallop of Sheridan, Wyo. The groom is a nephew of Dr. Samuel J. Walker of Chicago, a grandson of one of our pioneer real estate operators, the late Samuel J. Walker. His mother was Miss Marguerite Walker. His father is a son of the late Earl of Portsmouth and brother of the present earl, who has no son. Unless something at present quite unforeseen intervenes, Gerard Wallop will be the next earl.

He is a fine, likeable lad who, though under age at the time, enlisted in the English army at the beginning of the war, and saw a great deal of the hardest kind of fighting. His mother and father spent more than a year in France in the service of the Red Cross. His aunt, Mrs. William J. Goudy, a former Chicagoan, is coming for the wedding. Later she will be with her brother, Dr. Walker, at his Lake Forest home.

The wedding will take place on Saturday, July 31, at noon in St. Ann's church, Sayville, Long Island, and will be followed by a breakfast. The young couple met out at Sheridan, where the Wallops have a ranch not far from one the Posts own. The country there, with its background of the rugged Big Horn mountains, is a grand place for an out of door life, wide and spacious and beautiful.

There used to be excellent hunting there, before the present strict game laws. It's still a stock raising district where that semi-extinct animal, the horse, is in great favor. But it is probable that young Wallop's uncle, Lord Portsmouth, will prefer to have his heir presumptive live most of the year in England.

MISS MARION CLOW, MISS CATHERINE CASSELBERRY, MISS MARGARET PIRIE, MISS JOSEPHINE DUNHAM, MISS MARION FARNSWORTH MISS JENNETTE YOUNG AND MISS LILA HOTZ. PHOTO E. ADERNE.

A bevy of unusually pretty young girls attended Miss Caryl Dunham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham of Lake Forest, when she became the bride of William Evans Casselberry, son of Mrs. William E. Casselberry of Lake Forest, on June 26. Miss Josephine Dunham, the school girl sister of the bride, was honor maid, and the bridesmaids were Miss Marion Clow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Clow of Lake Forest; Miss Catherine Casselberry, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Margaret Pirie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Pirie of Lake Forest; Miss Marion Farnsworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Farnsworth of Hubbard Woods; Miss Jennette Young of Norfolk, Va., and Miss Lila Hatz, daughter of Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell of 2824 Prairie avenue. The maid of honor wore a frock and hat of hyacinth blue and carried pink roses, and the bridesmaids wore flesh tulle girdled in blue and blue hats and carried larkspur. All of the frocks were girlish and simple, in keeping with the bride's gown, which was of white chiffon over white satin.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Anglican Bishops Meet This Month for Conference

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot.

THIS month witnesses the first of several important international religious gatherings. The Lambeth conference, which begins next week, assembles over 300 bishops of the Angelican communion throughout the world at the historic Lambeth palace, where these Anglo-Catholic leaders will discuss vital problems before the church.

In August two great meetings also will be held at Geneva, Switzerland—the world conference on faith and orders, an assemblage of commissions from practically every Catholic and Protestant church in the world for the purpose of arranging for the actual conference later, when problems of Christian union will be discussed; and the world alliance, a gathering of the denominational churches for the purpose of discussing international peace and the part the churches should play in it.

Then, in September, in England, the "Methodist Ecumenical conference" will take place.

Here in America the international conference of Christian liberals will meet at Boston this summer, and the international council of the Congregational churches has just completed its meetings in the Hub city. In Tokio, Japan, in October the International Sunday School association will foregather.

One of the most notable of the meetings of the Lambeth conference was in Chicago in 1886, when the famous "Quadilateral" was promulgated by the bishops. It announced the four basic principles on which all considerations of Christian reunion should depend—the Episcopate, the Bible, the sacraments, and the historic creeds.

The Lambeth conference, made up of bishops only, is one of the most authoritative gatherings in the Anglican communion. Its encyclical letter, which is issued at the close of the conference, embodies the conclusions thereof, carries the weight of the deliberative judgment of the Episcopacy. Its decisions are not binding upon national churches, but its counsel is largely followed by them.

Among the problems to be attacked by the bishops are (1) the question of the relation to and reunion with non-Episcopal churches; (2) the relation of the Christian faith to spiritualism; (3) discussion of Christian science and theosophy; (4) the position of women in the councils and administrations of the church; (5) missionary problems; (6) problems of marriage and sexual morality; (7) the opportunity and duty of the church in regard to social and industrial problems, and (8) Christianity and international relations, especially as expressed in the league of nations.

About eighty bishops of the American church have gone to England to attend the conference, and will go on to Geneva for the world conference on faith and orders. Many priests also have gone, either as chaplains to the bishops or as voluntary delegates to the Anglo-Catholic congress, which precedes the Lambeth conference, and to the Geneva meeting.

The Rev. Walter A. Briggs.

The Rev. Walter A. Briggs recently has become pastor of the Villa Park Community church. He formerly was pastor of the Fourth Congregational church, itself a union church made up of Grace, Maplewood, and Cortland Street churches.

Dr. Benjamin Otto, superintendent of the Baptist executive council, will be the principal speaker at a Baptist rally for North Austin and North Oak Park to be held at 5814 West Division street this afternon at 3 o'clock. The choir of the Austin Swedish Baptist church will provide special music.

Among others who will participate are the Rev. J. B. Thomas, the Rev. G. D. Ainger, the Rev. Swaney Nelson, and the Rev. L. T. Foreman. A committee has been appointed by the Baptist churches of Austin and Oak Park to consider the establishment of a new Baptist interest in North Oak Park near Austin avenue.

The Lutheran charities' conference will meet in annual session at St. Luke's Lutheran church, Belmont and Greenview avenues, Tuesday to Thursday this week. One hundred and fifty delegates from all parts of the country will attend.

In the opening service on Tuesday morning the Rev. John Witte of Chicago will preach. Special addresses will be made during the convention by the Rev. Carl Herzberger of St. Louis, Mo., on the "Big Brotherhood and Sisterhood Movement in the Lutheran Church." Dr. Ernest Kraus, professor of history at the Concordia seminary, St. Louis, will talk on Christian charities.

On Wednesday evening the Hon. Victor P. Arnold, judge of the Juvenile court, will address the convention on the work of his court. The public is invited to this meeting.

Thursday afternon the delegates will be treated to an automobile ride to the various charitable institutions of the Lutheran church in and near Chicago. The trip will include visits to the orphan home and training schools at Addison, and the Old People's home, Arlington Heights.

The twenty-fifth anniversary convention of the Luther league in America will be held in Fort Wayne, Ind., this week from Tuesday to Thursday. The league will celebrate notable gains in membership, in church offerings, and in bringing about, at least indirectly, a union between various branches of the Lutheran church in America. There are 800 local organizations totaling 30,000 members.

At the Evanston Christian church, the Rev. O. F. Jordan, pastor, there will be no Sunday evening services through the summer months.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

"HANSELMAN, PETERSON, SCHAEFFER, AND LEY."
Whenever I motor down Sheridan road,
My heart seems to carry a terrible load;
I view with alarm every thicket and tree,
For I know a policeman is looking for me;
Though there's never a trace and there's never a sound,
They drop from the trees and they spring from the ground.
They jump up from manholes and leap from the grass,
And chase me and mine 'til we're all out of gas.
And the moan of my motor, 'till mournfully sad,
"'Tis Hanselman, Peterson, Schaeffer, or Ley."

Time was when this drive was a rollicking treat,
Undertow by the cycle's implacable beat,
And you gazed on the trees and the flowers and sky,
With a sense of repose, as you chug-a-chuged by;
But you hearken no more to the robin and finch;
Their song is drowned out by the wail of the pinch;
And the motorists learn what the wild waveses say,
(The waves may be wild, but much wilder are they)
For they mournfully moan in a desolate way:
"Hanselman, Peterson, Schaeffer, and Ley."

How often I've listened to critics who blob
That seldom policemen are seen on the job,
And I've hungered to tell 'em, "Perhaps it is so,
But on the North Shore? All together! No! No!"
Their vigor and verve is a pleasure to see,
(But I wish they'd quit proving their vigor to me)
So the load on my heart will at last go away,
And the birds will come back and the skies will be gay,
And I'll love the North Shore and I'll warble "Hurray, Hanselman, Peterson, Schaeffer, and Ley."

Do You Know

that in an Alaska the circulation is so perfect and the air so dry that you can place matches and a crock of salt side by side in the provision chamber close up under the ice and both the salt and the matches will remain bone dry.

This perfect circulation plus the "cubed" cork and "confined" air WALLS, the most perfect nutrigerator insulator known, make the Alaska incomparable as a food preserver and ice saver. Ask your dealer for a demonstration.

For the Best—Buy a Seven-Wall Cork Insulated Alaska

The Alaska—An Appreciated Gift For All Prospective Housekeepers

The Alaska means more than merely a clean, sanitary place for the food, summer and winter. While affording absolute protection from dirt, dust and germs, and preventing food waste, it means also perfect scientific refrigeration bought at an unheard-of low price.

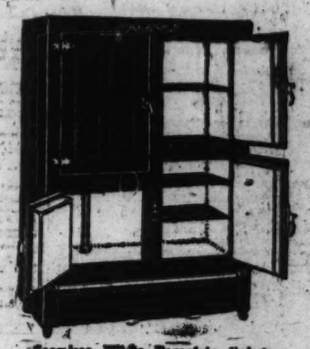
Owners everywhere—and there are millions of them—claim that this big, roomy refrigerator undercuts all previous records in ice consumption. Countless comparative tests point toward this same unequalled daily economy.

Alaska supremacy is due to three factors—its famous "cubed" cork and "confined" air walls which afford perfect insulation—its tight-locking doors and air-tight joints and top which prevent heat from leaking in and cold from leaking out—its free and unhampered circulation, which precludes all dead air spaces and guarantees uniform refrigeration throughout—and its durable construction which means permanent service and satisfaction.

There are many ice boxes. But there's only one Alaska—the refrigerator with the cork insulation. Insist on having it. Costs no more!

All sizes—all prices—made with seamless, round-cornered Porcelain; or with White Enamel linings—sanitary—easy to keep sweet and clean—long-lasting—incomparable.

See a demonstration at your dealer's and send for an attractive booklet showing the many convenient sizes.



Seamless White Porcelain Linings with highly glazed surface and round corners, or sanitary White Enamel Linings make Alaskas easy to keep sweet, clean and immaculate.

The food compartments are specially odorless and because of the wonderful dryness of the cold circulating air, they can be kept so with a minimum of cleaning effort.

WATCHFUL WAITING ADDS MILLIONS TO COST OF STATE HIGHWAYS

Construction Survey Discloses Enormous Annual Increases in Prices Paid for Illinois Work

$80,000 Per Mile Set as Possible Limit if Building Program Drags Along Until A. D. 1925.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

BACK in 1914 Illinois believed that $14,500 per mile for concrete road construction was "purty high." In 1925, when, calculating from the present rate of progress and popular interest, the state wakes up to the fact that hard roads are as important as bread and butter, construction of the same kind of highway will cost about $80,000 a mile and will be worth more than that to the general public.

The futurist estimate, according to good roads authorities, is conservative. It is based on the increase in construction costs during the building seasons of 1919 and 1920, and not on the gigantic increases which have more than trebled the cost since 1915.

"We've been waiting for prices to come down in order to build roads in this state ever since I can remember," declared one Chicago booster, who has been identified with the permanent highways movement for a decade, "and they have retaliated by going up like a flock of aviators. Now, even if we wanted the worst way to go ahead with a complete state program instead of finishing up the contracts left over from last year, we find that neither materials nor men can be had for the work. We can't very well criticise the state highway commission for this condition except to say that somewhere, back along the line, somebody made a serious mistake in waiting for prices to come down, and that the same mistake will hurt the people of Illinois if the old waiting game continues, when it is humanly possible to get the work done at almost any price.

"In the meantime, and until all the permanent hard surfaced roads we need can be built, it is the duty of every highway official, whether state, county, township, or municipal, to see that the makeshift roads we do have are kept in repair, dragged, and kept open. It's the duty of every business man and public spirited citizen to jump into this work, too. They can help induce the railroads to give material movements the proper consideration. They can vote for hurry up measures and help make the legislature see that highway transportation is a matter of immediate and pressing importance.

"The war taught Uncle Sam that the word 'impossible' is obsolete. Cook county in its program this year is showing the state that 'it can be done.' We need more hard hitting road folks on the order of Cook county builders to pull this state out of the mud."

The present state program includes contracts for 635 miles of permanent improvement—federal aid paving, for the most part. Of this, 186 miles have been completed and the old contracts now under way are expected to finish the rest this year. The system under contract contemplates hard roads from Chicago to the Wisconsin line, completion of the Lincoln highway from Chicago to Fulton, the Dixie highway from Chicago to Marshall, the old National road from East St. Louis to the Indiana line, and the Chicago, Peoria, Springfield, St. Louis trunk line through Illinois.

One thousand miles of road were to have been constructed in this year's original plan before it was decided to abandon the proposed work, which would require the issuance of bonds and simply press the work already under contract. The state department is having to content itself with letting new contracts for heavy grading and fills now in preparation for future paving. Cook countw will spend $5,000,000 on its permanent roads during the year, while all of the state aid roads under construction will approximate an expenditure of less than $2,000,000.

Waiting for prices to come down has failed to help Illinois in her building of good roads. Here is the way they have come down since 1914, when the good roads movement emerged from the mud:

Year.	Cost per mile.
1914-1915	$14,510
1916	15,750
1917	22,500
1918	24,076
1919	32,482
1920	40,175

This cost is the average contract price per mile, including grading, culverts, and pavement eighteen feet wide.

GASOLINE ALLEY—WELL, PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT, DOESN'T IT?

Yankee Doctors Have Motorized Medical Science

THE Chicago Automobile Trade association has compiled some interesting figures on the value of the motor car to the health of the community. In spite of the poetry about apple cheeked country boys and girls, the death rate on the farms has been higher than in the urban districts. This is largely because the remoteness of medical care has made rapid treatment of disease difficult, and has hampered the spread of knowledge regarding sanitation.

Seventy-five per cent of the doctors in the United States own 100,000 motor cars. A canvass of the leading medical journals brought in the report that over 90 per cent of the country doctors own automobiles. This means that one doctor can see three times as many patients in a day.

Illinois stands very near the top in the number of doctors per square mile of territory. Of course, the small sized, heavily populated eastern states, such as Rhode Island and Massachusetts, head the list, with a doctor for every one and one-half square miles. However, Illinois leads all middle western and western states, and is only surpassed by New York and Pennsylvania in the total number of physicians.

MY FUNNIEST MOTORING EXPERIENCE

Pride and the Procession.

Cook county's excellent roads were jammed, but when the holiday tourists struck the Lake county line with its dust and ruts, the joy suddenly disappeared from life. The procession came to an abrupt halt on the first hill and my patience becoming exhausted after ten minutes of waiting, I took a chance, pulled over to the left, and ran down the line. At the bottom of the hill I discovered the seat of trouble. A joyous owner of a brand new flivver was there, perched on the running board, and carefully wiping the dust from hood and fenders! G. B.

Guilty!

While motorcycling from San Francisco I ran out of gas in a lonely region west of Carson Lake. A nervous young man in a new car stopped at my signal.

"Have you a quart of——" I began.

"Y-y-yes," he stammered hastily, "but please don't arrest me. Think of my family—the disgrace——"

"What?"

"It's only a few quarts," he continued, lifting a cover to disclose four cases of Scotch whisky, and still fearfully eying my old army uniform.

Maybe I let him continue to think me a federal agent. Who can say?

S. F. C.

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published in "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Funniest Motoring Experience, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

City Slicker!

She sat in a dilapidated old car parked by the roadside and eyed me as I passed, going to the county seat. When I returned an hour later, the lone female was still there and I stopped to ask if I could be of assistance. "You clear out, mister," she ordered indignantly. "None of your Chicago tricks on me. If I want to give my car a rest, is it an affair of yourn?" M. L. L.

Devotion.

Keyed up to asking the supreme question, I motored to her home, only to find that she wished to go to a nearby town with a girl friend. After driving them over I rode about town for a while, and stopped my car in front of the house to wait. Nine o'clock came, 10, 11, and the house lights went out. I dashed to the door and rang the bell, arousing the household to discover that I had missed the right house by at least a block. I found the girls at last after they had phoned the police and searched the town. My explanations must have been satisfactory for she still declares she is glad she said "yes." R. E. T.

Starter Trouble.

Whn pressure on the starter pedal fails to start the engine one of the following causes is at the botom of the trouble: Weak battery, poor contact of the cables with the battery, a short circuit caused by cable insulation being worn through, switch trouble or trouble in the starting motor. A battery test will determine the condition of that unit. If the battery is up to charge the cables should be examined and the terminals be cleaned and tightened. The starting motor brushes being worn often cause trouble, and in much used starters the commutator may be worn. The starter switch may stick or make such poor contact as to deliver little current. If in pressing the starter pedal there is a whirling sound but no cranking, the spring of the starter shaft may be broke.

Dixie Makes War on Despotism of Old Mud Roads

A PERMANENT road project in a Tennessee county is the result of the determination of a group of citizens of that county not to permit the mud road to dictate to them any longer, how much they should produce, what they should receive for what they do produce, and when they could go to market with their products.

The thought of the mud road as a tyrannical despot came to one citizen in this group when he found that the recent rains had made it impossible to get his crop to the best market by motor truck. He even had to pick the day when he could get his product to the railroad station. His shipment was damaged by delay due to rail congestion. This was in addition to the loss by not being able to get his product to the right market at the right time.

When he figured up his losses and those of his neighbors, due to the lack of adequate highway transportation, he went further into the subject and approximated the losses to the merchant and manufacturer, and finally the consumer, who finally "paid the freight." He had no difficulty in convincing his neighbors that the existence of the mud road which was called the main highway through the county was not only very expensive, but it was also an enemy to American ideals of freedom.

This is the fittitude which every county along the Dixie highway might well take toward the temporary road which is fair in dry weather and impassable in wet. There are sufficient motor trucks now in the United States to relieve the rail congestion, by relieving the railroads of the unprofitable short haul, if the trunk line highways existed.

Spark Plug Lore Helps to Combat Engine Trouble

Clean Them Often and Give Motor a Chance to Make Good

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE greatest single item contributing to rapid failure of spark plugs is hot gas leakage. This leakage is brought about by defective or cheap spark plugs and poor design or manufacture. The loss of compression due to the leakage is a negligible factor, the heat imparted to the plug being the primary cause of plug failure. This heat cracks or otherwise damages the insulator, and when the hot gas contains much carbon the latter is carried to practically every part of the plug, thus providing a coat of soot which eventually short circuits the unit.

In some engines the plugs are so positioned in the cylinder that a volume of cooling water circulates around the threaded portion of the shell. This would tend to cool the plug and prevent some of the troubles caused by gas leakage. Where the plug is not so cooled it goes to pieces in a short time. Where such troubles are persistent the owner should change to the best make of spark plug obtainable, and if he finds that these plug troubles come up due to the excessive heat mica plugs should be used instead of porcelain. Though porcelain plugs can withstand a terrific amount of heat the mica type is sometimes found to be more satisfactory, but not where oiling conditions are unsatisfactory. If the engine is an oil pumper you might find trouble with the mica plugs. As now manufactured high class porcelain plugs can withstand a terrific amount of heat and even abrupt changes in temperature without becoming affected, but the point to remember is that the plugs must be well made and of good materials to stand up.

There is no reason why plugs should not operate for six months and a year without giving trouble, but if the car owner buys spark plugs at a sale and pays a fraction of the price necessary he should not expect freedom from plug troubles. As with everything else, the best plug is the cheapest in the end. As a matter of fact, poorly made plugs will cause such a complication of troubles as to cause the owner to spend many dollars in other work.

Plugs are easy to test for leakage. While they are in the cylinders and while the engine is running with quarter open throttle, squirt oil from an oil can around the joints of the plug. Little bubbles indicate leakage. Sometimes this leakage may be due to a poor gasket in the plug, but more often to an inherent fault of the plug which cannot be permanently removed.

The best of plugs, of course, fail after much service and must be replaced. Sometimes the owner himself will cause insulator trouble when inserting the plug in the cylinder. Accidentally striking the insulator with a wrench being used on another plug is a common occurrence. Plugs ought to be inserted with a socket wrench so as to avoid damage to nearby plugs.

In order that the plug operates efficiently it ought to be free of carbon. Carbon deposits on all inner surfaces of the plug, especially around the center electrode and the lower portion of the insulator. The current then fails to jump the gap, as the carbon offers a path of less resistance. This carbon must be removed. Soak the plug in kerosene for about fifteen minutes. This will loosen the carbon, which then can be scraped and wiped off. Where the plug may be taken apart this should be done to insure cleanliness of all parts. In assembling the plug every speck of dirt should be removed from touching surfaces, because this dirt prevents parts seating properly and thus causes leakage.

Plug gaps should be neither too wide nor too narrow. Too wide a gap puts too much resistance in the way of the current and it will not jump. Bear in mind that the spark must jump the gap under fairly high pressure and not under atmospheric conditions. A 1-32 inch gap is usual, but in some engines this will be a little more or less. A gap too small will allow the spark to jump, but the heat of the spark will be so little as to fail to ignite the charge.

Dealers often sell fancy designs of plugs and test these plugs before your eyes to show you they will give a sheet of flame, or will fire in oil and do other things. Because these plugs so perform in air is no reason at all that they will do so in service.

Rough History.

Paradise park, New York City, is now located on the spot long known as the Five Points, says the Automobile Blue Book. Once upon a time Five Points played a prominent rôle in the history of the nether New York of the past. This region was once the most dangerous part of the slums and the gathering place of thugs and various other hard characters. During the Negro insurrection (1740) fourteen Negroes were burned here and here it was that the Dead Rabbits fought the Bowery Boys, and the Pug Uglies had their rendezvous.

Vacation Work.

Due to the scarcity of labor, high school boys in various parts of the state of Pennsylvania, notably Greensburg, will be employed at $4.50 per day in vacation time on the state highway building program.

There is an ever increasing number of motor vehicles traveling on the main highways of the state and comparatively recently more than 1,000 big trucks have been installed in the freight carrying service, most of them by the large rubber companies.—Motor Life.

Hawker, Raynham—all the overseas fliers—used Stanley Bottles.

The celebrated NC-4 was equipped with them.

A noted sportsman sent 50 of his friends each a Stanley—as soon as he had used the new bottle.

Heller took 27 Stanleys into Africa on the Smithsonian expedition.

Such was the early record of the new vacuum bottle that will not break. Today, families in all parts of the country have followed the lead of these men who are the world's most exacting judges of equipment.

Built of steel—lined with flexible, blue Amalite with a surface like porcelain—the Stanley Bottle cannot be broken. It keeps liquids piping hot or icy cold for hours at a time. And there are no replacements—no expenses after the first cost. The higher initial price of the Stanley soon represents a definite saving.

It is made in one- and two-quart sizes—the only vacuum bottle manufactured in the larger size.

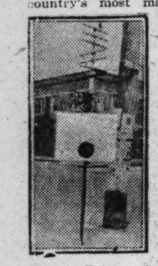
New Guide System Makes Its Bow on Hoosier Highways

Names Country Corners as Basis for All Auto Routing

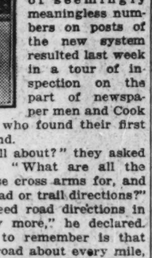
A NEW signpost has invaded Lake county, Indiana. Before its appearance nobody believed it humanly possible for any more or diversified road guides to grow in the country's most marked up county. Thus its advent has caused a noticeable sensation among Hoosierdom's highway fans. A flood of inquiries from motorists seeking the key to the series of seemingly meaningless numbers on posts of the new system resulted last week in a tour of inspection on the part of newspaper men and Cook county officials, who found their first post in Hammond.



"What is it all about?" they asked a garage man. "What are all the numbers on these cross arms for, and where are the road or trail directions?"

"You don't need road directions in this county any more," he declared. "All you need to remember is that there is a crossroad about every mile, and every crossroad has a number. The guideposts point to the next crossroad, and you go there. That's all. When you get there that guide post will point you to the next one on the route."

Then he produced two small cards from a big card index in the garage. The first was marked "Hammond to Highland, route 26—direct." A series of numbers was printed down its length. On its reverse side the numbers were reversed for the direct route from Highlands to Hammond. Railroad crossing signs and road warnings were printed opposite several of the numbers. The second card was marked "scenic route" between the two towns. The first series read: 906, Standard and Calumet, 414, 137, 218, 512, 654, 606, 811, 765, 133, 217, 101, 819, 645, 864.



The party went to Standard and Calumet avenues and found post No. 906. On its cross-arm, which pointed down the left hand road, or east, was the number 414.

"Let's go east," said the driver, and headed for the next sign. It appeared at the first country corner, and on one of its four cross-arms the number 137 pointed straight ahead. When post 137 was reached its cross-arm numbered 218 pointed to the right. Post 218 stood at the end of a road with a cross-arm numbered 512 pointing down the left hand branch. The trip ended eventually at post 864 in Highlands. The return trip was made from the "scenic" card over an entirely new route and it was found that the directions could be read at twenty miles an hour as the guide system became more familiar. The party purposely ran past one guide post and found that the next one automatically checked the mistake, one of its cross-arms, with the missing number, pointing back over the road to the proper corner. After returning to Hammond the party secured a county map whose crossroads were each numbered to correspond to the markers and drew their own routes to given points. Each farm house is also indicated on the map and may be reached by jotting down crossroads numbers. Thus every farmer in Lake county is given a permanent address for the first time.

SIGNALS VIA WINGS—Edward Mazzulo of Washington decided to place his signals on both rear fenders, to make sure the man behind would catch the "wig-wag." They are operated either by electricity or by foot pulleys. You'll notice the car is two years old—two of the three back windows are out.

Kids Are Kings of Motor World for Happy Day

C'MON, Skinnay. Wash yer face 'n hands. A lot of good guys with autos have remembered you're alive!

The first of the season's annual joy rides came yesterday when crippled children from the home at Park avenue and Paulina street went out for a long spin with their "big brothers" of the Medinah Motor club. Masonic orphans of La Grange will be given their treat July 31, and the program will be repeated on Aug. 21 and Sept. 11. A call has gone out from the Medinah club for more volunteer cars and drivers.

Four thousand orphans and old people will be brought good cheer in this year's annual outing of the Orphans' Automobile Day association, Tuesday, Aug. 10. The committee in charge will need 450 cars for the big run over the boulevard system and through the parks. You may volunteer yours by addressing Nate Jacobs, secretary of the association, at 72 West Adams street, or phoning the association office, Randolph 1280.

Highway Lights.

The Goshen, Ind., board of public works has voted to illuminate the Lincoln highway from the southeastern entrance into Gashen through to the business center by installing an ornamental lighting system. The cost of the standards will be assessed against the abutting property owners, while the city will pay the expense of other equipment and the cost of current.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

CHICAGO'S automobile and amateur athletic circles said "howdy" last week to a welcome newcomer in the person of Arthur F. Hawes, who comes from the Locomobile Boston branch to become associated with J. Henry Smith, 2544 South Michigan avenue, in the sale of Lafayette cars. Among other athletic activities Mr. Hawes has been prominent as official umpire of the United States Lawn Tennis association and as an executive of the Boston Yacht club, Athletic association, the Algonquin club, and the Cape May Golf club.

A team of Missouri mules bowed to the power of the motor last week when a Springfield-Kelly power wagon invaded their alfalfa field in an official test, and pulled their stalled wagon from a mud hole. The test was made at Whitehall farm, near Yellow Springs.

Henry M. Leland, president of the Lincoln Motor company, has received the degree of doctor of engineering in the University of Michigan. The honor was conferred by President Hutchins of the university.

Claud Judson, managing director of Rolls-Royce, Ltd., has arrived at the new Springfield, Mass., plant for a final inspection of the American works before they are thrown into production.

F. A. Selberling, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, has been elected president of the Lincoln Highway association, succeeding H. B. Joy, who was named head of the association last December.

A Rendezvous.

Known the country over as "the playground of the people," there is reason to believe that the great north woods of New York state are also destined to play an important part in international history.

True, the United States ends and Canada begins at the international boundary, a few miles further north, but for the thousands of motorists by whom it will this summer be crossed and recrossed, the boundary, like a blowout or a stop for gas, now signifies little, save as an incident of the trip.

Already the vanguard of the army of motorists from both sides of the line is on the move. Up from the south they are coming over the Quebec-Miami highway, through the Adirondacks on into Canada and back to the Adirondacks. Over the same broad highway, from the north, come the throngs of motorists from Montreal, Quebec, and other principal Canadian points. Officially the two countries meet there at the international boundary. In reality they meet in the Adirondacks.

HOLMES

Improved Air Cooled

Chicago to Cincinnati

Average Speed 39.5 Miles Per Hour

Officially observed by Illinois Automobile Club—Checked in by representatives of Cincinnati Enquirer and Cincinnati Post.

Air-Cooling Is Either Right or Wrong

If it is right, the air-cooled car is the best for you to drive—

1:—Because of its simplicity. The Holmes Air-Cooled motor has nearly two hundred less parts than a water-cooled motor and hundreds of pounds less weight (all saved in the cooling system).

2:—Because it is more dependable. Holmes air-cooling eliminates overheating in summer and freezing in winter.

3:—Because it is more economical. The Holmes Air-Cooled motor gets from 60% to 100% greater mileage out of the fuel than water-cooled motors of the same size (proved by a gasoline consumption of 18-20 miles to the gallon).

A Road Test to Demonstrate Air-Cooling

On Thursday, July 1st, a standard stock Holmes Improved Air-Cooled touring car started from Chicago at 3:50 a. m. It reached Cincinnati at 12:51 p. m., passing through 30 towns en route. Total elapsed running time, 9 hours and 1 minute. Average speed in miles per hour, 39.5.

What does this demonstrate?

The maximum speed of this touring car is 50 miles per hour. The average speed maintained between Chicago and Cincinnati was 39.5 miles per hour. THE HOLMES IMPROVED AIR-COOLED car was driven at its maximum speed continuously for 9 hours and 1 minute, which resulted in an average of 80% of the maximum speed possibilities of the car itself.

We believe there are no other standard stock touring cars built that can demonstrate such a remarkable average.

We believe there is no standard stock water-cooled car that can run for 9 hours and 1 minute over average roads at 80% of its maximum speed ability without overheating.

The roads over which this run was made were badly worn macadam, rough dirt roads, and the last 75 miles before reaching Cincinnati were over rough, hilly roads which had been deluged by a heavy thunderstorm, causing deep washouts. At Brookville, Ind., the bridge was out and the car had to be driven through the Whitewater River.

We believe there is no standard stock water-cooled car which, subject to the same road conditions, can approach the Holmes average of 39.5 miles per hour.

What This Means to You

The Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Car is built for steady, consistent performance—high road mileage in perfect comfort. There is no inclination to achieve racing car speed for boulevard stretches. You do not need it. You do not want it, and you do not use it.

The underlying principle of Holmes construction is satisfactory average road-speed regardless of road conditions, and steady, comfortable riding, regardless of where you are going. The result as demonstrated by this trip to Cincinnati is sufficient proof of Holmes merit to justify our claim that

AIR-COOLING IS RIGHT—and that to buy a Holmes Improved Air-Cooled car is evidence of discriminating judgment in the purchase of an automobile.

Materials Heads Protest Against Rate Increases

Declare Higher Tariffs Will Add $1,000 to Mile of Road

AN increase of $1,000 per mile in the cost of road building is predicted by members of the advisory council of sand and gravel producers, holding a convention in Washington, as the result of proposed increases in freight rates on sand and gravel.

During their stay in Washington these producers appeared before the interstate commerce commission to protest against the advances asked for by the railroads. Ninety per cent of the sand and gravel transported over the roads is produced within 75 miles of the point where it is to be used. On this basis, today's freight rates are approximately double those in effect in 1916. A 25 cent increase in the transportation charge on a ton of gravel, road experts show, means $1,000 per mile added to the cost of building it.

Today it costs $1,200 a mile more than it did in 1916 to build a road. This increase is due to the increase in freight rates made during the war. Another advance at this time, they say, will materially reduce the contemplated construction of roads, a result inimical to public welfare. There is no need for a further advance in the sand and gravel rates and much of the loss in revenue suffered by the roads can be regained by increasing those rates now preferentially low, they contend.

Local communities throughout the country are, at present, endeavoring to improve and extend their good roads under the guidance and influence of the good roads bureau of the department of agriculture. Government experts agree that added transportation costs will have an adverse effect on this activity. The federal government annually appropriates a large fund to assist the states in this work, but the terms are such that the states are unable to do their share in face of such increases.

Further impetus is being given the road building work of the nation by other governmental activities, including the sending of a motor truck train of fifty army vehicles from Washington to the coast. All of this will be lost if construction costs are made prohibitive.

Added to these troubles is the open top car shortage. The producers told the interstate commerce commission during their hearing that they are being discriminated against in favor of the coal industry, and produced facts and figures to back up their contentions. Construction work represents 47 per cent of the country's business. Sand and gravel are two of the most important basic materials used in the construction both of roads and of dwellings, of which latter there is an alarming shortage.

The rationing of cars in favor of the coal industry was attacked on the ground that the producers of coal by various methods had brought about a false famine and were using the present opportunity to boost profits and profiteer in a shameless manner. It was pointed out that on practically every rail line in the country, thousands of open top cars, suitable for carrying coal, were lying idle, or, filled, were choking traffic because of the vast number of cars used in moving this one commodity.

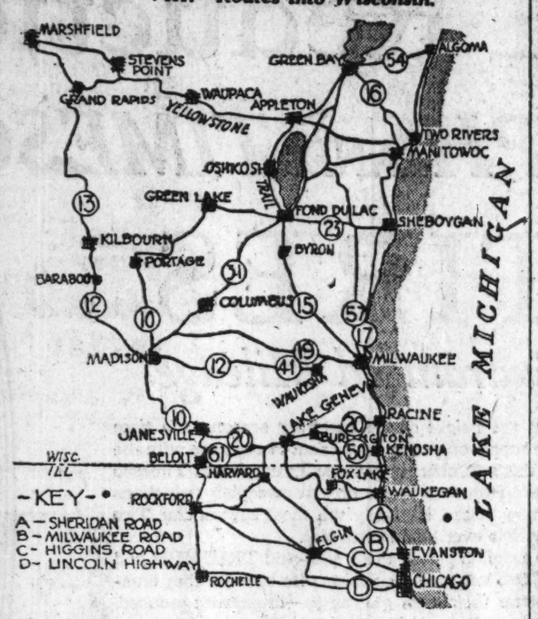
VIII.—Routes into Wisconsin.



NUMBERS read the same in any language, but in the parlance of the Badger state they mean good roads. Once safely across the Illinois line, the tortured tourist, armed with a Wisconsin numbered highway map, may follow the friendly signpost figures almost anywhere and find a pleasant journey. It is another matter to reach the line, however. Sheridan road is the best—and just about the only—option after leaving Cook county pavements.

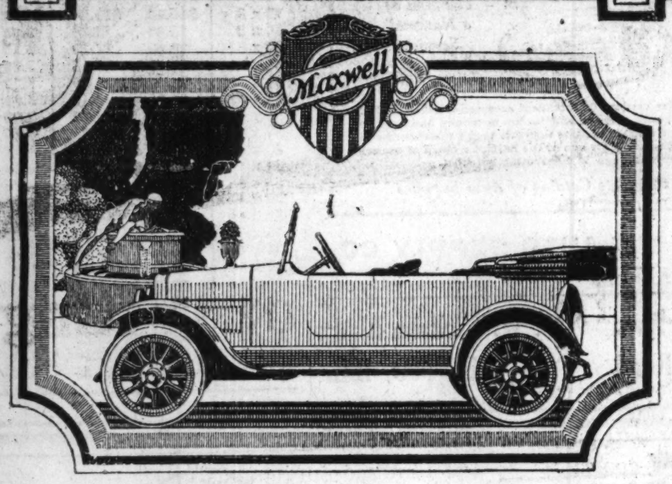
Among others, this year's routing recommendations include:

The Yellowstone trail from Chicago to Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Appleton, and points west.

To the Dells—Sheridan road to Kenosha and No. 50 trunk line to Lake Geneva and Delavan; No. 20 to Janesville; No. 10 to Madison, and No. 12 to Kilbourn City.

To Green Bay—Sheridan road to Milwaukee; No. 17 through Sheboyban to Manitowoc, and No. 16 to Green Bay.

To Oconomowoc—Sheridan road to Milwaukee, and No. 19 to destination.



The Value of a Dollar is Expanded in a

MAXWELL

by Special Steels

The Maxwell now has the attention of many wise heads who are seeking how to get more value out of a dollar.

They find a Maxwell gives them:

1. All the speed they desire.

2. More comfort at the wheel than many larger cars.

3. Surprisingly long mileage on gasoline, oil and tires.

4. A marked freedom from trouble.

5. A remarkable dollar for dollar value in the list price.

Special steels in the Maxwell cut down the costs and build up the efficiency.

These are steels made to Maxwell's own formulae and they equal the steels, pound for pound, in any car built.

They are of great strength. They make possible light weight construction, which is the goal of scientific engineering.

Why carry around useless weight? Why burden engine and tires with superfluous pounds?

Costly as these steels are, they pay back handsome returns in ever increasing friendships for Maxwell. They build up sales, decrease "overhead" and daily enlarge the great Maxwell family. Today in size nearly 400,000, and growing at the rate of 100,000 a year.

THERE is evidence that Mars is inhabited. The appearances of features on the surface of that land attest that there are beings there who can think and plan. A chapter of the tale is told today and you can draw conclusions from it exactly as astronomers do from the data that they glean through their telescopes from night to night.

Mars has seasons like the earth. When it is summer in the north it is winter in the south, and vice versa. But Mars differs from the earth in one vital respect. Our globe has three quarters of its face covered by water, and the spots where some moisture cannot be found are few in any land. Mars is a desert world, as parched and barren as the Sahara or Arabia. The little water that there is condenses with each winter in a cap of snow and frost about the pole.

If you can imagine a sheet of white about the earth, just covering the grass tops and extending in midwinter perhaps a little south of Canada, and in this snow all the water that the earth contains, you will have drawn yourself a mental picture of what the land of Mars is like.

Water is the crying need of Mars. The creatures there realize that thirst is always just at hand, and they have executed Herculean feats to save themselves. The whole globe of Mars is covered by a network of irrigating channels, many of the longer ones being longer than the distance from New York to Alaska.

As the snows melt back in spring the water is released and on these shallow puddles the planet must subsist for a whole Martian season—almost as long as one of our years.

Above is a map of the south polar ice cap and the system of canals which tap its moisture. Contour lines are drawn to show the way the ice retreated from June 3 to Oct. 12, the respective dates of midspring and midsummer here.

The climate of Mars is one of clockwork regularity, and these contours of retreat may do for any year. You will observe that the cap does not lie squarely on the pole, which is indicated by a cross, but its center lies considerably to the right of it. The left hand part is always barren, and has what appear to be the stubs of mountains in it where the ice persists after it has left the parts nearby. The right hand part, however, always has much ice, and in consequence more water.

It is upon this area that the main channels of the canals converge. Note how they studiously avoid the barren area and lie in a three-quarter ring, even double a part of its length, about the moist zone. The canal rings lie just in that place where the water collects with the greatest abundance in spring, with feeders poleward as far as it is profitable to go for water. Great conduit systems run out the other way, to lead the water to the warmer and more habitable spots on the globe. The barren area, as you can see, has only converging conduits passing through it, and in it can be found gray tracts of ground that plainly are bad lands which offer little to the Martians.

It is this well laid plan, this thorough understanding of the quality of the grounds involved, and the means whereby the nature of the land can be made to serve a higher purpose, which reveals the Martians to us as a race of engineers.

MARS

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

A. V. R.: The earth has pulled a tide up in the rocks of the moon itself, and by holding to this protuberance, prevents it from turning over. In the summer the sun is above the horizon longer than it is below it, and so heat accumulates until about September, when radiation catches up, and we lose heat as fast as we gained it. The inclination of the earth's axis is not slight in any way. The seasons are reversed in the southern hemisphere. It is now the first of winter in South America. The moon does pull tides on lakes. There is a tide of one and one-fourth inches on Lake Michigan. No messages have even been received from Mars. There is hardly a night when some comet cannot be seen. There are as many comets as fish in the sea. Sometimes one of them gets into print, and rarely, very rarely, one can be seen with the naked eye.

T. W.: Ships are sailed altogether by astronomical data, and geographical data derived from astronomy. The motions of the stars and planets are found with precision by watching them from night to night for many years. Their paths through the sky can be computed by the usual processes of higher mathematics. Astronomers can predict events centuries ahead because they are so rigorously careful of all their figures.

The present gasoline situation makes a

CHALMERS

With HOT SPOT & RAM'S-HORN
more than ever desirable

AS gasoline continues to go down in grade a Chalmers continues to go up in public estimation.

Particularly when you realize, as the fuel experts say, that there is as much power in a low grade gasoline as in high grade —if you can get the power out.

For Hot Spot vaporizes into a "fine cloud" the raw "gas," heats up the fuel without excessively heating the air that forms part of the "charge."

Then Ram's-horn, which so many engineers have striven to copy, rushes the "cloud" before it can condense into "rain" at a speed of 100 miles an hour to the combustion chambers.

These two remarkable devices, which are so simple and have no moving parts whatsoever, prepare and place the "charges" so that the engine gets out the power that nature stored away centuries ago in gasoline.

Results such as these follow their use:

1. They get more power out of low grade "gas."
2. They get smoother power.
3. They prevent the frequent fouling of spark plugs.
4. They prevent raw "gas" from trickling down past the pistons into the crankcase. (Thus the lubricating oil is not thinned out and such troubles as burned bearings and scored cylinders are notably absent.)
5. They reduce vibration. Not only does a Chalmers run smoothly, but this smoothness is a continuous performance.

Add to these the luring new lines of the Chalmers and you can readily understand why so many of the motor wise now say that Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.

...painted Pictures ...ake Vivid Appeal ...r Recognition

By Eleanor Jewett.

...tree stood on the top of a hill,
...e in the moonlight,
...e in the starlight—
...ilmmering like spray from a silver mill
...their warm fragrance into the night—
...where the stars hung low in the ...sky—
...where the round moon clung in the
...sky—
...drowsing world that was still—so still.

...ower of petals fell to the ground,
...e in the moonlight,
...e in the starlight.
...that are sought but never found—
...pulse through the life of night,
...that the mad moon weaves by night,
...that the sad stars weep by night—
...pale petals with anguish crowned.

...ms, blossoms, or dreams, who knows?
...e in the moonlight,
...e in the starlight—
...the mystery wonderment grows
...memories that die in the clasp of night,
...e that soars in the dark of night,
...love that lives on the lips of night—
...the breath of my heart the apple tree
...loves.

As intangible as the vision which the preceding verses conjure up in one's mind are many of the pictures we see every day, without realizing at the time that they are pictures, because they are presented to us outside of the recognized medium of canvas and paint. Perhaps intangible is an inaccurate expression for the mood and for the pictures, but what other descriptive phrase is there? Or what is the thought back of the sentence "...'s phrase at all? The idea is, reduced to few words, simple.

Through the rhymed lines there ...s a tree, large and many branched, ...ed with a thousand palpitating ...ms, as though December's snow, ...ed in the butterflies of May, had ...ed like a living canopy over the ...ering boughs, turning them in the ...mering moonlight to a radiant ...ymeral for the homing of rest-...ul spirits.

...Love, delight, joy, tears, passion, ...ure, the strength of shared sorrows, ...death, and new borning—what ghosts ...are those that linger in those fra-...grant branches? The gamut of the ...human race is run in the level swing of ...those boughs on the hill top, in the im-...penetrable silence of the risen moon.

...Over the hills a wind blows out of ...the dawn. The dreamer in the grass ...beneath the tree shivers from his ...dreaming at the chill summons. The ...stars fade from the sky; the low gray ...mist on the horizon breaks; the dark ...clouds are shot with red. Birds twit-...ter. Sheep rouse themselves in the ...pasture. Somewhere a calf grumbles ...disconsolate. Over the hills the wind ...blows back into calm.

...The sun rises. A new day has ...dawned. The tree of dreams and blos-...soms in the moonlight is but a tree again. The buzzing of bees fills its branches and the scented flowers give nectar to the long, searching hunger of the butterflies. The mystery has fled; the vision is gone; the shadowed wonder has been caught back into the lap of the night, but he who tasted of it will remember.

And the dreamer in the long grass shrugs himself awake and goes back from the tree into life, but "in the breath of his heart" the apple-tree will never cease to blow.

That is a picture which has never yet been painted. I saw it on the shoulder of a long sloping hill above Uberlingen in Germany last spring. It is a picture that might be painted. With like possibilities of being transferred to canvas, other pictures confront us now and again in the common walks of every day life. Not that all that we see is a suggestive canvas, but to those who see wisely, marvelous unpainted paintings are sometimes vouchsafed.

At this season of the year, when summer is at her best, nature unrolls for those who have understanding eyes many of her most splendid canvases. It is well that this is so, for in the strictly defined picture exhibitions there is a lack during these weeks of fresh sensations.

Count on your fingers, I doubt if you can fill both hands, the possibilities for pictures which have come your way during the last three months. Count for the joy of it. This, by the way, reminds me of a remark a man made once in my hearing to the effect that though he never kept a diary, yet every so often he thought back seriously over what he had been doing and then jotted down in a notebook the occurrences which had afforded him the greatest pleasure or interest during that time. The notes he kept. In that way he had from year to year the best parts of his life recorded, and the joy he got from the stimulation of his memory of those certain points was beyond measure.

Similarly with mental pictures. Personally I can count the apple tree in blossom: the hot, yellow lit room where a prize fight was staged in Paris; a troop of blue coated soldiers riding down an avenue of green arching trees with the ground pink with blossoms under their horses' hoofs from the chestnuts that showed pink, too, between the shining leaves in the yellow shafts of light, which made a patchwork of brilliance and shadow down the straight road; a towering iceberg like a gigantic opal on the edge of a misty sea, shot through to red and gold by the long darts of the setting sun; and a hot afternoon on a lake in Illinois when the blue ripples lapped the wooded shores in a monotonous murmur of sound, while above in the cerulean sky vast white, slow moving pyramids of cloud rolled in dissolving splendor at the whispered order of a summer scented zephyr.

It is worth while—this kind of reckoning. It is worth while each year to add to the store of personally acquired pictures which one holds, though perhaps unwittingly, in the art institute of memory. How worth while it is would be difficult to estimate. The value of such intangible (to return to the word from which this discussion sprang) possessions is, in the truest sense of the phrase, beyond price.

Notice has come that the sculptured group, on which Lorado Taft has been working since the summer of 1913, is now complete. It is a gift to Chicago from the $1,000,000 B. F. Ferguson fund of which the Art institute is the trustee.

The group is to be known as "The Fountain of Time."

THE MADNESS OF MAYET

BY CAPT. KARL W. DETZER
(Chief of the D. C. I., American Embarkation Center.)

A Story of the "D. C. I.," the American Secret Police in France, After the Troops Started Home

THE long alley of blackness that was the single thoroughfare of the village of Mayet was silent. Every door was bolted, every shutter fast. Not even a tiny ray of light escaped from the houses into the midnight roadway; not a whisper of a sound passed the doors.

At the corner of the diminutive "placeless" lounged Private Avery Holmes, American military police. It was a time and a place that would drive any one to slumber. Not a footfall had interrupted the stillness of the highway for an hour. Holmes dozed.

Then from the distance there arose a shriek that filled the village—beginning as a moan and rising and rising, long and shrill, and horrible, till it seemed to overwhelm itself and collapse, and then it died in an unearthly wail. Close on the end of the sound three shots punctured the night.

Holmes broke into a run, his automatic pistol in his hand. Shutters swung back and doors opened an inch or two. Two hundred yards away the shaft of his electric lamp played upon a figure crouching in a doorway. Even in the darkness he recognized his fellow patrolman, Reilly.

At Reilly's feet lay his automatic pistol. And when Holmes turned the flashlight on the face of his comrade he found that it was sickly white, the eyes glazed and protruding, the lips apart.

"Reilly, what is it? Speak! What is it?"

Reilly raised a forefinger that trembled and was as white as his face.

"There! Didn't you see? The face! The blue face. There! By the wall I saw it. I knew he was following me, for I heard his steps. I shot. Square between the eyes. And he just laughed. He laughed—after three shots, and went away. O, don't let him in."

A door swung open behind the pair and an old Frenchman who seemed composed of equal parts nightcap and whiskers, held a candle for them, and Holmes dragged his partner into the passage. Reilly turned over on the floor and lay with his face to the wall, unconscious.

At the little temporary hospital established in Mayet by the Americans a young medical officer straightened up. Reilly lay on a cot before him.

"Fright," diagnosed the doctor, "The boy has had a terrible fright—something terrible must have occurred."

All through the night patrols of military police tramped the single narrow street of the village, and spread over fields in the near by countryside. They walked in twos and threes, and hunted, and hunted well, but no trace of anything unusual did they find.

Morning came to Private Reilly on his hospital cot, with his memory washed clear of the events of the night before. He remembered going on post, of leaving Private Holmes at "the place," of walking north—that was all. The doctor kept him flat in his bed, for he feared the shock had affected the boy's heart.

So for two days Mayet was quiet, the normal, gossippy little French town it had been for half a thousand years.

Then on the third night occurred the second of the series of unearthly affairs that made old soldiers tremble when alone a moment in the dark.

It was shortly after 11 o'clock, and Capt. Fleming, commanding the military police, was making his midnight inspection, and had stoppd to speak to Holmes. The town had been silent for three hours. An occasional homeward plodding Frenchman had saluted and pased on, while the walls echoed the clack-clack-clack of his wooden shoes. Only the tread of respectable sabots had interrupted the stillness.

"I don't know what to think of that Reilly case," Capt. Fleming had said. "I had tried to figure out a solution, but I can't think of anything."

While Holmes was answering him the captain gripped his ram.

"Did you hear a call?"

"No!"

"Far away—I thought—maybe I am on edge," and he laughed.

Then they both heard it. Far up the lonely street came a sharp bark of a voice. It shouted one word.

"Help!"

The pair broke into the army dog trot which many campaigns have taught the Americans is the only way to arrive at the end of a run without fatigue.

"Help!" came the cry again. It was close ahead.

The captain pressed the button of his pocket lamp while he ran. Ahead in the street lay a soldier.

He was absolutely alone!

"Come, man; what's happened?" It was Capt. Fleming who spoke.

"O, don't let it come back; O, don't! don't! I can't look at it again. The eyes—those narrow eyes followed me. O, don't let it come back!".

"Stand by the man," Capt. Fleming issued a curt order to his subordinate, and once more broke into a run. In his left hand he carried his flash lamp, the beam playing back and forward across the road, and in his right he gripped his automatic pistol. He ran to the edge of the town. Then he walked back.

It was the same story at the hospital. The doctor diagnosed it as another case of fright, and in the morning the soldier's memory was blank. It was several days before this man even knew his own name.

And two nights later occurred the third "fright case," as they were registered at the hospital.

This time it was a young Frenchman, the son of the innkeeper, just demobilized, and spending his first evening in his native town. He had gone out at dusk to walk to the end of the village. At 9 o'clock he had staggered to the front of the inn and dropped in the street, mumbling incoherently. He pointed toward the north and held his hand before his eyes, and sobbed. Speechless, his eyes protruding, his hair wet with the sweat that had broken forth in his fright, he was carried to the American hospital.

Capt. Fleming received the report at his office.

"Sound call to arms," he ordered.

A bugler stood on the step of the police barracks, and that terrifying bugle call broke on the night. The police tumbled out and fell into line.

"You will patrol the town tonight, every man, in threes and fours, and will stay on post till daybreak. First sergeant, you will make the details. Men, keep your eyes open; be alert, and I shall telephone for help from headquarters. We must stop this—this—whatever it is."

While the police poked about black passageways and walked with keen eyes to the darkest quarters of the dark little town, Capt. Fleming telephoned to headquarters at Le Mans, forty miles away. He talked to the provost marshal.

"Col. Rivers, I must have help. I have thirty men in this town and we haven't been able to stop this thing and we have worked day and night. Can't you get me fifty more men, temporarily at least, till we find what ails this cursed place? I must have them."

"You don't need military police, captain," answered the provost marshal. "I shall send you out some D. C. I. men."

"What are they?"

"They are our American secret police—the division of criminal investigation."

"How many will you send,"

"Two if they can be spared—though one probably can handle the case. I shall notify you tonight."

A racing black automobile carried Detective Sergeant Stephens and Operator Besherian to Mayet. It was nearly morning when they pulled up in front of the office of the American provost marshal at the center of the village.

Capt. Fleming was discouraged. He had asked for fifty men and in their place had come two calm, cool young Americans in civilian garb. He had expected men armed to the teeth. These calm young men wore flowers in their buttonholes and carried light walking sticks, after the manner of the young landed Frenchman, and they smoked their cigarets in long holders.

It was Stephens who spoke.

"Now tell me, captain, the entire story, and try to leave nothing out. The case sounds interesting. I am delighted to have this opportunity."

"I should be delighted to turn the responsibility of this blasted village over to you this minute!" answered the captain.

"Surely there is a simple solution—you have missed it because you were living to close to see it. With the outsider's curiosity I hope to be able to find it."

"I like your idea of simple, sec-

The Madness of Mayet

...t, but you haven't seen any of ...e poor devils after they have seen ...e "thing.'"

Then the captain detailed to Sergt. Stephens and Operator Besherian the ...tails of the three mystifying occur...ences. Both the calm young Ameri... made notations in little red cov...ed notebooks.

"And, captain, may I have three ...f your best men—men I can trust to ...tain data and write what they get—...o, not brave men, but men who ...an ask questions and write answers?"

Three names were given an orderly ...d he departed, returning with the ...es named by the company com...ander.

"Do you talk French, any of you?" Stephens asked.

"I do, fairly well," the shortest of the policemen replied.

"Then you take the Frenchman, and ...u—you big fellow—take Reilly, and ...u take that other man whose name ...u just got tonight—what was it? ...s, yes, Frank Johnstone. I want you ...o go out and get every scrap of in...rmation you can about them—their ...mes, their service in the army, their ...bits, their friends—you can get some ...formation from service records on ...e Americans. Bring me the results ...f your work at noon tomorrow. You ...ay have my car should you have to go ...t. Meet me here at noon—sharp. ...rite out everything. That is all. ...nd now, captain, I am going to take ...a walk about town, and then will turn ...in. I shall see you at noon, here, I ...ope. Good night, sir."

Promptly at noon the three messen...ers returned. Sergt. Stephens was ...aiting. He read their reports—first ...orriedly, and then in detail—asked for ...ome three by five inch cards, and sat ...own to typewriter. He filled out each card ...rom information on the reports.

Then he shuffled them idly in his ...and.

"Capt. Fleming, are there any ...rench colonial troops billetted in this ...own?" he querried.

"No sergeant, none in town, but ...here is a Chinese labor corps just ...eyond the north end of the city. ...owever, they are restricted to their ...amp limits in the woods—they are ...utting lumber—and never are allowed ...o town."

"Do you remember distinctly what ...hat man Johnstone said when you ...ound him?"

"Remember! Can I ever forget it! ...'Don't let it come back! The eyes, the ...arrow eyes!'"

"I believe there is something ori...ental in this mystery," answered Ste...hens, "it is too uncanny to be either ...rench or American. However, we ...hall see. I hope to report something ...efinite by night. Will you meet me at ...-say, 10:30, here?"

Then he turned to Operator Beshe...ian.

"You get into uniform. Yes, I know ...ou hate to, but you shave your upper ...p, and try too look like an Ameri...an again. I'll wait here for you."

Stephens read over the three cards. ...he first was the history of the French...an—reduced to the merest skeleton. ...t read:

"Henri Burlager, born Mayet, age ... entered army Nov. 1, 1914, demo...ted as sergeant major French co...nial labor groups 112 [Chinese], June ... 1919. Never in action. Lived in Mayet, helping father [innkeeper] till called to the colors. Unmarried."

The second card contained the his...tory of Frank Johnstone.

"Frank Johnstone, private field ar...tillery. Born San Francisco, resided there until enlisted November, 1918. Civil occupation, clerk in importing house. Unmarried. Age 23."

The third covered Private Holmes.

"Avery Holmes, private military police. First enlistment 1912 to 1916. Served in the islands and in China. Born Chicago. Age 29; unmarried. Hard drinker. Civil occupation, la...borer."

Stephens read and reread the cards. Then he smiled.

"Narrow eyes," he said to himself as he walked out to meet Besherian.

But his promise to return at 10:30 never was fulfilled. Capt. Fleming, lounging in front of his headquarters in the village street shortly after dark, awaited developments. And develop...ments swooped down upon him.

Again from the north end of the vil...lage came the cry, the cry of a man in the grip of horrible fear. Three military policemen and the captain ran north. A hundred yards away they came upon two struggling figures. It was already dark, and their flashlamps showed them Stephens struggling with a little soldier who fought with the strength of a madman and screamed and choked and screamed.

The little soldier was Besherian.

"Don't hurt him!" Stephens warned as the three policemen laid hands on him; "just get him to the hospital."

"The devils, the yellow devils," Be...sherian was shouting. "Keep them back, Oh, God, keep them back, the devils! Their pink and green teeth; Oh, keep them back!"

Stephens was calm.

"He'll be all right—like the others, I suppose, in the morning. Now, let's get to my car. That little fellow gave me an awful run before I caught him. Let's have six husky men—well armed. You come, captain. I'll drive."

A black racing car, with military police hanging to the running board, rushed north through the long village street. At the edge of town it halted. Eight men walked across a meadow toward the twinkling candle lights of a camp.

"You surround that shack," Steph...ens said, "and you, captain, and two more of your men, come with me. You men on guard don't let any one pass, if they should attempt it. Don't shoot unless you have to"

Before a narrow door at one end of the shack Stephens halted with Capt. Fleming and the two patrolmen. He knocked. The door opened two inches. Stephens lunged forward. The four stood within the room—pistols drawn.

It was an uncanny sight that greet...ed them. The low room, with beamed ceiling, was hung with fantastic ori...ental tapestries, and paper dragons grinned from the corners and above the curtained windows. The air hung stagnant with sweet incense.

At two long tables Chinamen had been playing a strange game with lit...tle wooden blocks. Money piled at the corners indicated that it was a game of chance. Twenty or thirty greasy coolies hung over the tables.

At the sight of the pistols they raised their hands over their heads. Madden walked among them, looking for weapons. He found none. Then straight to the other end of the room he stalked, and, lifting a heavy blue curtain, disclosed a dozen filthy bunks, on which Chinamen slept. Then once more he came back to the center of the room and touched a huge, lanky Ori...ental on the arm.

"Take this man," was his order.

One of the military police slipped the handcuffs to the yellow wrists.

"And now," Stephens opened a lit...tle cupboard flanked by paper dragons, and drew from it a bottle of oily, pink liquid, "here's the stuff nightmares are made of. Let's go."

At military police headquarters Capt. Fleming awaited an explanation.

"First of all, did you notice the in...formation I got on the three victims? One had lived in San Francisco—an importer. Another had served with the army in China. The Frenchman was a sergeant major in a Chinese la...bor group. 'The narrow eyes,' one said; 'the blue face,' were the words of another. And they all came from the north of the village, and the Chi...nese camp was north. I decided to in...vestigate. I sent Besherian to the camp, found there was a gambling house, and told him to try to get in. He had no difficulty. I watched through the curtains—there was a slit in the third one. They offered him a drink and he took it. I had heard of the stuff before—it's something like Mexican loco. Bad stuff!" he shook the bottle, "The Chinese are accus...tomed to it. They just go to sleep. But a person who doesn't know it drinks it all in a gulp—and goes loco. Before I could interfere Besherian burst out of the door and ran toward the road. He was far up the street and screaming like an Indian before I caught him.

"I knew of the stuff before. My brother spent some years in China, and told me of it. These three chaps had heard of the labor company out there and all of them probably spoke a little Chinese, and were let in on the game. And each was given a drink."

Several days later Stephens labored over his report in the office of the D. C. I. Besharian, standing beside him, still somewhat pale and shaken, was attempting to gather his returning memory.

"I can't write a report," he ex...claimed sorrowfully. "I can't remem...ber anything." He felt his vacant up...per lip, felt it again, and turned to Stephens.

"Where—what happened to it?" Besharian was proud of his little waxed mustache.

"You saw a paper ghost and ran so fast you left it on the road in Mayet," Stephens replied dryly.

It is still making daily deliveries of hardware in five counties—within a 50-mile radius of Chicago. Mr. Vasumpaur says: "This truck has paid for itself in four months and has never failed to deliver, despite bad roads and steep grades."

This is a typical INDIANA performance. The first INDIANA Truck—built in 1910—is still giving its owner daily service. For 10 years it has paid handsome profits—has travelled more than 100,000 miles—and is still going! Staunch, rugged and enduring—INDIANA Trucks will solve your hauling problem with absolute economy and large profits.

The harder the work, the greater your need for INDIANA, with its 112% reserve capacity, its brute strength and power and the long-life which assures lowest cost per mile of delivered service. Capacities: 1½, 2, 2½, 3½ and 5-ton. See these splendid trucks at our salesroom.

FARM AND GARDEN

Many Features of Round Barn Liked by Dairy Farmers

By Frank Ridgway.

COMBINATION horse and dairy barns are coming into use more and more on the farms throughout the middle west. The dairy cow is now sharing the comforts of the horse that has been so carefully housed for generations. Modern methods of handling live stock have brought the dairy cow, the "foster mother of civilization," in from the improvised straw shed and wind breaks, made out of corn fodder, where she was exposed to cold rains and snow in winter and the scorching sun in summer, to well made barns, where housing is comfortable.

Cost of building material, expense of handling animals, and the realization of the value of the appearance of farm buildings have turned the attention of farmers toward a more careful consideration of problems in building barns. The barn must be planned from the inside out and not from the outside in, so that each animal may be made comfortable and given a chance to do its best work. And, of course, the convenience and performance of the farmer himself are important considerations.

Majority Are Rectangular.

While there are few barns built exactly alike, most of them are rectangular in shape and have broken roof lines—gambrel roofs, they are called. This part of the picture of farm buildings has been about the same for many years, but recently the scene in the barn yard has changed. Silos are found standing by the side of many barns, especially those on corn belt farms of the middle west, and the shape of barns has changed in style here and there over the country.

Round barns have added variety to the picture on some farms. It is not uncommon to find some of the progressive farmers using their imagination in planning the new home for horses and cows—they cut the corners off the plans and build a round barn. And when it is finished they have a barn that is a welcome variation from the monotonous string of square and oblong buildings.

Like Something Different.

Perhaps this is the reason for round barns—that the farm owner desires to have a building that is different from that of his neighbor. The idea is somewhat new in this country, but since their first appearance many farmers have stood out strongly in favor of this type of building to house live stock and the winter's supply of feed for the animals. They are not taking the place of the rectangular barns, except in a few cases. It is a new idea and farmers are weighing it carefully. As one successful dairy farmer recently said:

"You can argue this question of the round barn all day long and not get anywhere. I built a round barn because I liked the appearance of the building. It has been satisfactory in every way. I believe that when the merits of the round barns are better known there will be many more of them built."

Plan of combination round barn which is an economical and efficient type under some circumstances in small farms.

[Courtesy Farm Mechanics Magazine.]

Points of Discussion.

Theoretically, a round barn is the most economical to build, for it is a well known fact that more area can be surrounded by the same amount of wall when circular than when square or rectangular. But in utilizing this space to the best advantage there is another question. And it is on this point that most farmers turn thumbs down on the round barn. They know that more stalls can be accommodated in a barn of rectangular shape than one that is round. For convenience in doing the work required in a barn, however, the round barn undoubtedly has the advantage over the square cornered kind.

The average round barn that is now being built is about sixty feet in diameter, like the one here illustrated, of frame construction, and set on a concrete foundation. It is the interior of the round kind that is so interesting to every one who contemplates building a barn.

In the accompanying plans, provisions are made for sixteen cows and six horses. The stalls are arranged in a circle facing the center of the building. The horse stable is separated from the cow stable by a solid wall, an arrangement that is required by health laws in many states. More than half the barn is set apart for the dairy herd.

Location of Feed Room.

In the center of the building in the horse stable there is a large feed room. The floor overhead is a hay chute, through which the roughage for the animals is thrown down. The location of the feed room makes it possible to get the hay to the mangers with the least amount of effort. On the opposite side of the partition are three pens, which may be used either for calves, or cows and their calves.

The feed alley is a small circle, and above it is an overhead carrier track. This track runs to the feed room adjoining the silo, which is connected with the barn. The ensilage is loaded into the carrier and transported directly to the mangers. The building is equipped with a little alley with an overhead carrier which runs outside. By use of this carrier much labor in feeding the animals and cleaning the barn is saved.

The floor of the stable is made of cement and running around the building at the rear of the stalls are gutters, sunken into the floor, making it possible to wash the floor easily. It is the arrangement of the stalls in a circle that owners of round barns like. Many steps are saved the men who care for the animals, and under present farm labor conditions any arrangement that will save time in a dairy barn is worth while.

An Unusual Appearance.

The most appealing feature of the round barn is its shape. The building is out of the ordinary and makes a good addition to the farm building group. It differs from most farm buildings and gives the farm an individuality that is lacking when all of the buildings are of the customary shape.

The work of building a round barn differs from that of a rectangular barn and should be handled by an experienced builder. Less materials are required for a round barn than for a rectangular barn.

Many of the round barns are built with the silo in the center. The arrangement is favored because the silo is better protected from weather, and the ensilage is removed at the spot where it can be easily distributed to the mangers. This is important, for getting ensilage out of the silo in winter is an unpleasant job, unless the openings are protected. But when the silo is inclosed by the barn it is much more difficult to fill.

Ventilated by Flues.

Round barns are ventilated in the same way as rectangular barns. The foul air flues follow the roof lines to the suction ventilator at the apex, and carry the foul air out of the stable. The flues in the wall and under the roof leave the mow floors clear of obstructions.

If you are using 100 men, at $6.50 a day, and you can cut 30 days from your program---how much will you save?

That's not "theory"—nor is it an unusual happening!

We've made that example come true in many building operations.

You'll realize the reason when you understand that MINTER HOMES are "fabricated"—that is to say, 90% constructed at our factories in standard built-up units.

Before your carpenters drive a nail, the most lengthy and costly part of construction-work is completed!

These units, being standard—and inter-changeable, can be assembled and erected in a remarkably short time—making permanent, high-grade homes that pass the most rigid building codes.

MINTER HOMES

Complete delivery of all parts and material in one shipment prevents the possibility of delay—and makes it possible for you to figure on known costs!

Think what this means to you in these times of uncertain deliveries and costly delays.

MINTER HOMES are the most rigid that can be produced by any known method of construction. Large Life Insurance Companies and other large and small financial institutions throughout the country have loaned large sums on MINTER HOMES.

There are seventy styles of MINTER HOMES—consisting of one and two story homes for one or two families. They are attractive in appearance, rigid in construction and economical in cost!

The MINTER HOMES organization is the largest of its kind in the world. Our output is 60 homes every day. We employ the foremost planning and engineering ability.

Write us fully regarding your Building problem. Tell us what you want to do—the number of homes you wish, and the probable expenditure. Our Housing Engineers will show you how MINTER FABRICATED HOMES can meet your requirements.

A FEW OF MANY PURCHASERS OF MINTER HOMES

The Allied Homes Corporation of New York City, have erected twenty Minter Homes in various developments throughout Eastern New Jersey.

The Builders of Homes Company, of Springfield, Ohio, has recently erected ten Minter Homes in that city for the employees of the Robbins & Myers Motor Co.

The City of Winston-Salem, N. Carolina, has erected six MINTER SCHOOL HOUSES as well as eight MINTER HOMES for city employees.

The Kenosha Homes Co. of Kenosha, Wis. recently erected ten MINTER HOMES in a new development in Kenosha.

The Western Clock Company of LaSalle, Illinois, recently erected five MINTER HOMES at La Salle.

A Week's Cruise on 4 Great Lakes $72.50 Meals & Berth Included

Chicago to Duluth and Return on the Big, New Cruising Steel Steamship "North American"

Think of the pleasure on a warm, sultry day of leaving the din and dust of the city behind you and gliding out into the cool, refreshing waters of Lake Michigan for a week's cruise through four great lakes—a trip of over 2,000 miles of beautiful scenery, shore line, islands, rivers and bays—care-free, you will give yourself up to a spell of enjoyment — you will eat well and sleep well, and after a too quickly ending week you will return home thoroughly refreshed and invigorated. Take this wonderful trip via Lake Michigan to Mackinac Island, via Beautiful St. Mary's River to the Locks at the "Soo;" via Lake Superior and Portage Canal to Houghton (Hancock) and Duluth. Returning via Lake Superior, Lake Huron and Georgian Bay (30,000 Islands) to Mackinac Island then via Lake Michigan to Chicago.

If you enjoy seeing places of interest, the numerous stops and short cruising distance from the shore, during the greater part of the trip, offer sights of wonder and beauty that are sure to please you. You can be quiet and exclude, if desired, or if you like a real good time there is the continual round of deck games, cards, etc., during the day, and dancing, musicales and other entertainments in the evening. If you want to go fishing or take a tramp in the woods, stop-over privileges at a number of points will enable you to do so.

For the children there are the open-air playgrounds and deck games, with attendant in charge to relieve the parents of care. Combined with all these pleasures, you will have conveniences and comforts on this magnificent steamer equal to those on the best Atlantic Liners. The dining service and food equal to that of the best hotels. All state-rooms and parlor rooms are outside rooms and have windows or ports to insure perfect ventilation. Have running water, call bells and electric light—beds have the finest mattresses and springs; extra long and extra large—bath and toilet in connection with parlor rooms and close by all state-rooms. Steamer equipped with wireless and every modern device for safety of passengers.

A new standard for comparison

Distinguished leadership, whether represented in a strong man or through a useful commodity, sets the standard by which all others are gauged. The attainment of such leadership is in itself unerring evidence of tested superiority.

In no field of useful work is the struggle for supremacy keener than in the manufacture of factory equipment—from this contest of brains and ability the master mind emerges with the best solution of each production problem.

This symbol, the trade mark of Imperial Inner-Locked products, identifies what has for many years been the standard of unequalled belting performance.

Imperial Inner-Locked Belts are Fabric Belts—double stitched—inner-locked. Through a secret formula every particle of each belt is thoroughly saturated and impregnated with a mineral compound assuring endurance and long life.

Where other types have fallen short, Imperial Inner-Locked Belts have succeeded. Where tractiveness, uniformity and increased production were sought, they have proven infallible—for under the cold, analytical eye of the Imperial Laboratory expert, every specimen of raw material must meet the Imperial Standard.

By such minute attention to each vital detail in material and construction, this new standard for comparison has been created. Those who seek the utmost in transmission and conveyor service may rely without question upon that which bears the trade mark of Imperial Belting Company Inner-Locked products—O & G—Sahara—Rexall—Sanital—Karlite—Ibeco Drive Belts and Rexall Package Conveyor.

A Real Opportunity

THERE IS AN OLD SAYING THAT OP-PORTUNITY KNOCKS BUT ONCE. YOU CANNOT AFFORD TO PASS UP THIS CHANCE WITHOUT INVESTIGATING.

YOU HAVE HEARD of land that you would like a nice little farm home of your own. You pictured just what you would raise and what you would do with them.
how the picture wasn't complete without a stream of clear lake where there would be plenty of fishing and hunting. And then came the thought that you would be your own boss, that you could make good money, and, best of all, save some that you made.
But that's as far as you ever got because you thought it took a lot of ready money to buy a farm.

A SMALL DOWN PAYMENT is all that is required on our liberal circuit of building
Easy monthly terms which hundreds of satisfied customers testify can be met without difficulty. We give free advice on your agricultural experts as to the best methods of farming your land and free instructions as to the proper time for sowing crops. Free $85,000 for all. Extra, only $8,000. Will consider cash for good income property. Poss. at once. Address B

Stearns-Knight

6 cylinder, 7 passenger touring with limousine body.

One of the finest running automobiles we have ever had in our establishment. The motor is as quiet as the day it left the factory and the entire mechanism tight as a drum.

The open body now on car is equipped with new pantasote top [plate glass in rear curtain], seat covers, etc. Just repainted.

The Limousine body is custom built and beautifully upholstered in gray broadcloth; cord tires.

This car has just been taken in trade by us from a prominent Chicago gentlemen and was one of a number of cars in his garage. The care of the car has always been the best and has fears of efficient service left in it.

Will make a wonderful car for either private family or livery. Standard new car guarantee. For a car of quality, priced very low.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

UNCLE SAM TO STUDY BUILDING SITUATION HERE

Senate Committee Meets in Chicago Soon.

BY AL CHASE.

Uncle Sam is an easy going old codger—slow in getting started doing anything, and slower yet in doing it—so the Yankee construction industry has been fairly patient while waiting for federal action on the present unsatisfactory condition of affairs.

But our star spangled uncle is getting into his stride at last, and the announcement has been made that the United States senate committee on reconstruction and production, in an effort to develop the facts regarding conditions in the construction industry in the central west, will hold hearings in Chicago in two or three weeks.

The committee last week opened headquarters in New York City, where hearings will be held during the next two weeks under the direction of the chairman, Senator William M. Calder. As soon as the eastern conditions have been canvassed the hearings will be moved west, taking in Chicago and probably Minneapolis and Kansas City.

Seek Relief from Roads.

"Both Senator Calder and the assistant to the committee, F. T. Miller of the F. W. Dodge company, have been in conference with representatives of the various factors in the construction industry," said Horace H. Herr, editor of the American Contractor, who has spent considerable time in Washington, D. C., in government service.

"These preliminary conferences have developed the fact that immediate relief for the construction industry must come through improved transportation facilities, and Senator Calder urged the interstate commerce commission to permit the building interests of the country to present their case in an open hearing, before the commission came to a decision on matters of freight rates and preferential shipments.

Commission Agrees.

"The commission has agreed to do this. Inquiry among the men in the construction industry who are following closely the developments before the senate committee and the interstate commerce commission indicates that building interests will submit to the commission the following propositions:

"1. Industry should be assured that the arbitrary interference with transportation practices and policies, first resorted to during the war and continued since the armistice, is to be eliminated.

"2. The power of the interstate commerce commission should be limited and its right to declare emergencies and priority lists taken from it.

"3. The policy of equal consideration for all shippers should be reëstablished and in the presence of a deficit in transportation all shippers should share alike.

"4. Equipment should be pooled and the railroads should be made to obey orders when they are issued by the car service commission.

"5. Until freight rates on building materials are proportionally as low as other rates no further advances should be made on building material rates.

Hostile to Unlimited Powers.

"It is now apparent that the construction industry is very hostile to the unlimited powers which have been vested in the interstate commerce commission, and it is a reasonable prediction that these interests will make a determined effort to get remedial legislation from the next congress. Failing to get this legislative relief it is not improbable that the constitutionality of the law under which the railroads were returned to the owners will be attacked and fought out in the courts."

North Shore Real Estate Brokers Organize Board

Real estate brokers operating along the north shore from Wilmette to Lake Forest met last Tuesday evening and organized the North Shore Real Estate board, with the following officers: President, C. T. Northrop of Winnetka; vice president, C. E. Wheeler of Hill & Wheeler; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. E. R. Stone of Hill & Stone.

"Real estate interests in these popular and rapidly growing suburbs have long felt the need of such an organization," said H. D. Hill of Hill & Stone, "to establish and standardize the real estate business and to promote closer coöperation between brokers."

Oak Park Buys Property for Playground and Park

Oak Park, which has less park area than most towns of 40,000, yesterday did a little bit to help remove this stigma by buying the south half of the block bounded by Adams, Jackson, Ridgeland, and Cuyler from Seward M. Gunderson for $41,600. The north half was acquired some time ago. The entire block will be made into a park and playground. This gives the section between the Northwestern railroad and the Metropolitan "L" tracks a much needed recreation ground.

The above picture shows the new $4,500,000 plant which Straus & Schram, mail order dealers in household goods, are planning to build on the square block of vacant bounded by Western boulevard, West Thirty-sixth street, the Chicago and Alton, and the Chicago Junction railroads, diagonally across from McKinley park. The site was purchased from the estate of Emil Pop per through Edwin J. Bowes Jr. & Co. for an indicated $250,000. It fronts 450 feet on Western and 600 on Thirty-sixth, and contains 250,000 square feet of space. Plans for the new building have been drawn by Architect S. Scott Joy. The first unit will cost approximately $1,500,000. Straus & Schram now have 250,000 square feet of space at 1105 West Thirty-fifth street and a retail store at 665 West Madison street.

WORLD'S LARGEST OFFICE FURNITURE PLANT FOR CHICAGO

Plans are being drawn by the Commercial Furniture company for a $600,000 factory, 1,000x90, three stories, which, when completed, will give Chicago the largest office furniture plant in the world. At present this honor is held by the Standard Furniture company of Herkimer, N. Y.

A five acre triangular tract, bounded by West Superior street, Grand, Washtenaw, and California avenues, has been purchased by the Commercial Furniture company from Robert F. Goodman for an indicated $45,000. On this a plant which will have 375,000 square feet of floor splace will be erected as soon as building conditions improve. In addition to the main building there will be a dry kiln, mill rooms, and loading rooms.

"All of the modern office furniture in the world is made in America," said President A. H. Stringe. "South America and Europe look to this country for roll top desks and other modern office equipment. It's been my ambition to help make Chicago the desk market of the world. There are, at present, three other desk factories here. We now have two factories across from the site of our new plant, one facing on Chicago avenue and one on Superior street, with a floor space of 180,000 square feet. We make only office desks and tables."

Third Addition to Hotel Morrison Being Planned

Plans are being drawn by Holabird & Roche for the third section of the Morrison hotel, between the present hotel and the Hartford building. It will front sixty-seven feet on Madison, with a depth of 190 feet, and have 300 rooms, giving the hotel a total of 1,600. The cost will be around $2,000,000.

Pays $150,000 for Corner of Ohio and Rush Streets

Ogden T. McClurg, president of A. C. McClurg & Co., has purchased for investment the southeast corner of East Ohio and Rush streets, from John E. Holland and others, trustees of the estate of William J. Quan, for $150,000, through Prussing & Co. DRAGON MOTORS CORPORATION TO USE SELIG PLANT

Identity of the real purchaser of the Selig moving picture plant, which covers most of the block bounded by Irving Park boulevard, Byron street, and Western and Claremont avenues, was disclosed yesterday by Cowan & Manheimer, attorneys. It is the newly organized $1,000,000 Dragon Motors corporation, which intends to enter the motor car field with three types of cars, five passenger, four passenger, and roadster. The four passenger and the roadster will be known to the trade as Dragon Pups.

William N. Selig, pioneer Chicago picture maker, sold the plant to Raymond S. Dickinson, through Willis & Frankenstein, for a reported $400,000. Yesterday Mr. Dickinson sold the property to the motor car company, through Willis & Frankenstein. Cooney & Verhoeven were attorneys for Col. Selig.

The Felt & Tarrant Manufacturing company, which makes calculating machines of various kinds, has purchased thirty lots in the block across the street from its North Paulina street plant. Some of the frontage is west on Hermitage, north on Bloomingdale avenue, and east on Paulina.

L. G. Hallberg & Co., architects, have drawn plans for a six story building, 240x60, with several L shaped wings, which will contain 151,000 square feet of floor space. PALMER HOUSE RUMOR BUBBLE BURSTS AGAIN

For Second Time Theater Story Dies.

Bam! Once more goes the whole flock of rumors about the great film palace, hotel, office building, etc., that was to supplant the Palmer house. As printed in THE TRIBUNE last week the famous old State street entrance to the hotel is to be closed and the Monroe street entrance made the main gateway to the hotel.

Now comes the news from Aldis J. Browne of Ross & Co., agents for the Palmer estate, that ten year leases on the stores in the hotel building will be entered into, doing away with the present year to year leases. The owners reserve the right, however, to terminate the leases within a reasonable period in case a new building is erected.

The Palmer House Dress shop has rented the space now used for the State street entrance, for ten years from March 1, 1921, at a term rental of over $300,000. It will have a frontage of twenty-seven feet and a depth of seventy-nine. About $50,000 will be spent in aterations and fixtures.

The Cutler Shoe company, which has been a tenant for over twenty-five years, has rented the three stores at 117, 123 and 125 State street, with a total frontage of eighty-four feet and space on the second floor for ten years from March 1, 1921, at a term rental of $1,200,000.

The Monroe street entrance already has been changed. It is now where Gale & Blocki's drug store used to be, the store being moved over to the old entrance space.

LYMAN J. GAGE STATE-ST. HOUSE IS SOLD FOR $87,500

One of North State street's best known old time brownstone residences, the one at 1326, built by Lyman J. Gage many years ago, has been purchased by George F. Porter from Thomas R. Roberts and his wife, Jessie Castle Roberts, of Detroit, for an indicated $87,500. The lot is 123x129.

Mrs. Cornelia L. Gage entertained many distinguished visitors in her North State street house during the World's Fair. Mr. Gage, who was at one time president of the First National bank of this city, was secretary of the treasury under McKinley. George Castle, the theatrical man, at one time owned the house. William H. Mulholland & Co. were brokers in the present sale.
